

NATIVE SONS FITTINGLY CELEBRATE THE DAY

Anniversary of California's Birthday Is Observed in Loyal Fashion by Thousands at the City of Roses

SANTA ROSA, Sept. 9.—Never was the anniversary of California's admission into the United States more loyally or more significantly celebrated than in old Sonoma's capital today. Possibly the fact that the commemoration took place amid an atmosphere filled with the patriotism of the "Bear Flag county," whose history occupies many pages of the golden story of Alta California, may have had something to do with it, but it is the acclaim everywhere tonight in the closing hours of this memorable event that the enthusiasm marking each succeeding feature in the cycle of entertainments has been more pronounced.

A more fitting place to celebrate the sixty-first birthday of California could not be found as one traces the fingerprints of history. When the thirty-first star appeared upon the American flag on September 9, 1850, Sonoma took a prominent part in placing it there.

SOME STARS OF 1846.

It was the lone star of the ensign of June 14, 1846, and the bear of that "gringo" flag, now the flag of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West, also the great seal of this commonwealth.

Starting with the coming of the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West last night, when the trains from the bay cities landed thousands, there has been no let-up to the festive spirit. It continued until daylight and then throughout the day, and pleasure ruled the second night with the youth and beauty of the State dancing at a score of parlor headquarters, dancing at on the streets and in the courthouse square.

The crowds coming to town last night were but a tithe of the multitudes that came today. It is estimated that 25,000 participated in the celebration. That is considered a very conservative estimate. They came from all over Northern and Central California.

TRAINS ARRIVE.

Early in the morning special trains began to pull into the city and the road to Santa Rosa lured the automobilists from all sections.

Through the streets of Santa Rosa this morning there moved a pageant, pulsating with life, a parade of men and women proud of their birth in the great state. They marched, thousands of them, attractively uniformed, to the music of a score of bands and stepped to the beat of many drum corps.

The line of march was thronged with humanity. The parade was a triumph. The air was rent with enthusiastic cheers, prolonged again and again as some favorite, prominent in public life, appeared, or some particularly pretty band of Native Daughters sent all hearts throbbing.

The night was a notable one in which fifty parades of Native Sons and Daughters paraded in all the pageantry of their annual festival. There were some distinctively pretty uniforms, many gorgeous banners and the flying picture was alluring and spectacular.

BUGLES START PARADE.

Shortly before noon Grand Marshal J. C. Smith gave the word of command that set the parade in motion. There was a fanfare of bugles and in a few moments the first division, composed of Santa Rosa and the Sonoma county patriots, led by Grand Marshal Smith, had as his chief of staff Senator Louis W. Julliard.

William W. Skaggs was chief of aides, and the aides to the grand marshal were Angelo J. Rossi, Dr. J. M. Turner, Thomas W. Anderson, Jacob Pfeiffer, J. F. Prestwood, L. Kohn, Max Licht and William N. Lamphrey.

The Petaluma band was the escort preceding the grand officers of the Native Sons and Native Daughters. The band in decorated autos. They were escorted by a platoon of San Francisco police.

The first division was composed of the Sonoma county patriots, Christian Schlachte, Jr., marshal, assisted by William J. Farrell and Claude Howard. The uniforms of the Native Sons were white and gold. The following parades were in line:

Santa Rosa Parlor No. 28.
Healdsburg Parlor No. 68.
Colusa Parlor No. 102.
Sonoma Valley Band.
Sonoma Parlor No. 111.
Petaluma Parlor No. 27.
Drum Corps.
Live Cub Bear.
Sebastopol Parlor No. 143.
James McChristian of the Bear Flag party and John Burton of the Mexican war in carriage.
Mayor Edwards of Santa Rosa and city council.
Board of Supervisors of Sonoma county.
California Pioneers.
Baltha, Guadalupe and James Lick Parlor were also in this division.
Sheriff Frank Barker of the Alameda war marshal of the fifth division and William J. Bacus and Harry G. Williams were aides. Piedmont Parlor band preceded its parlor, each member of which escorted a Native Daughter dressed in white. A huge "Teddy Bear" was the mascot.

Various prizes and trophies were competed for.

FIRE IS CAUSED BY OVERTURNED OIL STOVE

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—Fire caused the damage of $1500 tonight on the premises of John Bandilla at Twenty-fifth avenue and Lake street, when one of the members of the family accidentally overturned a coal oil stove. The house was insured for $1200.

CAPT. MATTHEWS MAY BE SUICIDE

Navy Officer Who Disappeared in San Francisco Thought to Have Shot Self.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—Captain Arthur James Matthews, senior captain in the United States marine corps, son of the late Rear Admiral Edward O. Matthews and former commanding officer of the USS Albatross, whose disappearance on February 3, 1911, led to a worldwide search, is believed to have committed suicide a few weeks ago by shooting himself in a cheap rooming house in Jacksonville, Fla. Several weeks ago a man answering the description of Matthews was found dead in Jacksonville.

Department representatives have obtained several pieces of the dead man's personal property and through them have established his identity.

The disappearance of Captain Matthews on February 3, after obtaining three days' leave of absence, caused more comment in naval circles than any other happening of its kind in years. Captain Matthews was about to receive his promotion as major when he dropped out of sight in San Francisco. Long service in the Philippines is said to have affected his mind.

Three-Year-Old Richmond Boy Starts Out On Tour of Sightseeing.

RICHMOND, September 9.—Bernard Stevens, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lucas, living in the Highland tract, wandered away from home last night after supper, accompanied only by his pet dog, and for a number of hours was the object of a frantic search by the local police and friends of the family. The boy was finally found, about 10 o'clock last night, near the section house at San Pablo.

The boy wandered away from home shortly after supper time, and was last seen on the spur track near the junction of the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe tracks. He evidently proceeded down the tracks toward San Pablo, probably escaping death from the passing trains only by the merest chance.

SAN LEANDRO WANTS POSTAL SAVINGS BANK

SAN LEANDRO, Sept. 9.—Postmaster C. Q. Roubert has forwarded a letter concerning the local postoffice to the postal authorities at Washington in compliance with inquiries received relative to the establishment of a postal savings bank in connection with the local office. The line of inquiry is in regard to the establishment of the bank in this vicinity, and the amount of money passing through the local office in the form of postal money orders.

The movement to have a postal savings bank established here was started by the San Leandro Chamber of Commerce some time ago. Should the authorities at Washington see fit to make the local postoffice a depository it will be the first time that a third-class office has been thus distinguished in this state.

HAYWARD PROJECTS IMMENSE BARBECUE

HAYWARD, Sept. 9.—The barbecue arrangements committee of the local Chamber of Commerce has completed plans for a feast at Laurel Grove park, probably the last Saturday of September. The affair will be a family one and invitations will be sent out to commercial organizations in neighboring towns. The committee, consisting of S. J. McCabe, R. Reid, W. T. Knightly, J. E. Geary, J. E. Knightly and L. V. Parsons, will make a report to the directors of the chamber next Monday. If the plans are approved the necessary details will be carried out without delay.

The barbecue will be one of the features of a campaign being carried on by the body to increase the treasury fund, which is being depleted by the heavy current expenses of the organization.

ASTOR AND GIRL-BRIDE TO HONEYMOON ON BIG ESTATE

Father of Former Miss Force Declares That Couple Are in Love and That Marriage Was Result

riage were Mr. and Mrs. William H. Force, parents of the bride; Miss Katherine Force, sister of the bride; Mrs. Elder, Mr. Vincent Astor, Hon. William F. Sheffield of New York and Mrs. W. A. Dobyns of New York.

Within less than an hour from the time they had gone ashore to be married, Col. Astor and his bride were aboard the Noma, headed for the open sea. Although everyone closely connected with Colonel Astor or the bride disclaimed any knowledge of the possible destination of the yacht, it is generally believed that the honeymoon will be spent in the quietness of Ferncroft-on-the-Hudson, the secluded ancestral estate of Col. Astor.

It was shortly after 2 o'clock this morning when the Noma, from New York, carrying Colonel Astor, Miss Madeline Force, her sister, Miss Katherine Force, and William H. Force, the bride's father, dropped anchor in the bay. Mrs. Force, the bride's mother, accompanied by Mrs. J. T. Elder, a personal friend, slipped into Newport. The bride was driven to the Mungering King Inn.

NO SUNSHINE FOR BRIDE.

Those aboard the yacht were astir early. The sky was heavily overcast with dark gray clouds and the old adage, "Happy is the bride that shines on," seemed to lack fulfillment. Penetrating tang to the salt air during the early morning that called for overcoats and sweaters.

Whether the question of luck was involved or not there went out from shore Deputy Sheriff Frank P. King, carrying Colonel Astor, just as the Astor-Force party sat down to breakfast at 8 o'clock. As soon as Colonel Astor-Force party sat down to breakfast, the process-server, he said, he was ready to accept a $30,000 damage suit for $30,000, brought by Bridget McCrohan and her children.

The action grows out of the death of Eugene P. McCrohan, son of the woman, who was killed at Richmond in the summer of 1910 while doing some electric wire work on the estate. Just a few minutes before 9 o'clock Colonel Astor, Miss Force and the others of the party went ashore. From an obscure spot two automobiles dashed up. The party got in and hurried away. The carefully planned strategy worked out just as was intended and the newspapermen were left behind.

HOLDS HEAD IN AIR.

Col. Astor and party drove direct to the office of the town clerk, Col. Astor appeared agitated. Miss Force, somewhat unconcerned in appearance, kept her head in the air, apparently seeing no one.

County Clerk Fullerton had the license ready. This had been arranged by the Newport attorney.

It was not until the house was reached that the change came to the ceremony. The Rev. Dr. Lambert had been rushed from Providence.

The most striking feature of this marriage was its democratic simplicity. Surrounded by all that is typical of the lavish display of wealth in the world of pleasure and fashion that American society has adapted, the bride and bridegroom, and all with them brushed aside every convention. Miss Force wore a simple, hobbie traveling gown of dark blue material. The bride wore the same business suit of blue cheviot, varied only by a thin pin stripe by which he was so frequently recognized while making daily calls upon his fiancée.

Witnesses of the ceremony today all noticed that the only gem worn by the bride was the huge solitaire diamond in her engagement ring. All members of the little wedding party wore their street clothes.

ALL SIMPLY ATTIRED.

Miss Katherine Force, sister of the bride, was in a black dress, which fitted closely to her trim figure. She wore a huge white polo coat and a wide-brimmed hat to match. Mrs. William H. Force, the mother, wore black lace over white silk and a large black hat. Mrs. Elder, a friend of the bride's mother, was attired in a gray walking suit.

The wedding scene impressed the witnesses with the belief that Colonel Astor and Madeline Force were a packed his socks once more and the war is on again.

Through it all Fowler has kept calm. Not for a minute has his grim jaw relaxed, and he has not fretted or fumed. If he has any nerves they are all built to keep him steady. He has not any of the race-horse or prima donna temperament. Perhaps he has caught some of the cool manner of the Wrights, who can look upon disaster with the same immobile faces they wear when they do something that startles a world already too blasé.

ARMOUR INTERESTED.

"Mr. Armour became deeply interested in aviation at the Chicago meeting," said Dekraft. "He was especially struck by Ward's daring work."

"A meeting was arranged between Mr. Armour and Mr. Rodgers. Mr. Armour offered to finance the trial with $30,000. Mr. Rodgers accepted this offer."

WILL FOLLOW AIRROAD.

"We will follow the Erie Railroad. We have selected this route because it is the most direct and easiest to fly over here from Chicago. How we will make our trip, arriving at Chicago, I cannot say. We hope to make Chicago in five days. We are not giving out our route because we don't want our competitors to know it."

VOLUNTEER FIREMEN OF RICHMOND TO PICNIC

RICHMOND, Sept. 9.—Richmond Volunteer Fire Company No. 5 plans to hold its annual picnic October 7 at East Short Park, near Stege. The picnics given in the past have been uniformly successful and efforts are to be made to make the one of this year the best yet given. Among the features of the day will be games and a dance in the auditorium.

EQUIPMENT OF MOTORS.

Cal P. Rodgers is expected here on Monday. His Wright biplane and the full equipment of extra motors and parts have been shipped from Dayton, Ohio. The mechanics of Rodgers, corps and the extra machines who will be furnished for the trip by the Wright company will arrive with the craft and will set to work immediately to prepare it for flight.

Manager S. I. Dekraft, who is at the Martingue, made the interesting announcement today that Rodgers' flight for the $50,000 prize is being financed by J. Ogden Armour, the Chicago multimillionaire packer.

Pastor Who Tied Astor Knot May Lose Pastorate

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 9.—Rev. Joseph Lambert, who performed the Astor wedding ceremony, returned from Newport this afternoon. He was informed of the storm of comment caused by the fact that he officiated at this marriage.

"I have nothing to say now," remarked Rev. Mr. Lambert. "I will wait to see what the papers say and then I may reply."

Congregational church circles in this city are greatly stirred over the announcement that Rev. Mr. Lambert tied the wedding knot. Rev. Edward T. Root, head of the Rhode Island Federation of Churches, said: "I think the whole matter is disgraceful. I suppose it was the question of $1000. It must have been the money which made him do it."

Mrs. Lambert, wife of the minister, has fled from her home to escape the arm of reporters who are besieging her doors and ringing her on the telephone.

MUST HAVE BEEN COIN.

Henry W. Puryington, treasurer of the Elmwood Temple Congregational church, said: "I don't know what may become of the affair, but I would not want to be Mr. Lambert. I cannot imagine what made him do it unless it was the money."

Rev. Mr. Lambert may be asked to resign.

Rev. Edwin Straight, the "carpenter-preacher" who went to Newport last night to be in readiness to perform the ceremony, is chagrined over what he declared as bad treatment. He arrived home at noon. He had been at Newport all night, staying at a hotel waiting to be called to the Astor residence.

"I am pained, humiliated and distressed over the treatment accorded me," said Rev. Mr. Straight. "I shall have something to say later about it, too. I feel that I have been a cat-paw."

He went to Newport and expected to marry the couple. This morning I was informed by an agent of Colonel Astor that my service would not be required. All this after the notoriety. I am too tired to talk, but when I get rested I shall speak my mind."

Leader of American Colony in City of London Now Here

MRS. FRANK MACKEY, who has been a leader of the American colony in London for ten years, and who is now visiting her old home in America.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 9.—Mrs. Frank Mackey, who, for more than ten years has been a leader of the American colony in London, is visiting her old home in America. The Mackeys went to London in 1901, and Mrs. Mackey has taken a very conspicuous part in the social life of that city ever since, having entertained and been entertained extensively.

They have a hunting box in the Highlands of Scotland and are the only Americans in all that country. Their castle is about forty miles south of Inverness in one of the most rugged and picturesque sections of Scotland, and is not far from Balmoral, the Scottish home of the King of England.

MOROCCAN SITUATION IS STILL CAUSE OF ALARM

Continued Peace, However, Is Looked For Between Germany and France Despite National Enmity

(By FREDERICK WERNER.)

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—The eternal Moroccan question still occupies the center of the political stage in Europe and helps the weary editor of many a French newspaper to fill his gaping editorial columns. What is to happen no one knows; the final outcome is still in the lap of the gods, but as far as Germany is concerned, it is plainly evident from the biting comments in Jingo papers, that the German government has no desire to be prodded on to fatal acts neither by the manufacturers of guns and armor plate nor by bloodthirsty retired army officers, who have turned yellow journalists.

No sensible person doubts any longer that Germany's demands in Morocco are merely commercial and as this is so the worst obstruction in the path of a peaceful arrangement is removed. When, in spite of this, it comes to the point of finding a suitable form of agreement, the reason is to be looked for in the old-time enmity between Germany and France, which makes both sides naturally suspicious of hidden traps and ambushes, and essential that the agreement is made in such a way that it permit more than one interpretation.

WANTS MORE LAND.

Another difficulty is that it is very hard to agree on what territorial concessions France must make to Germany in West Africa in return for being given a free hand in Moroccan affairs. The German empire naturally desires to enlarge her Kamerun colony in two directions, by the addition of a larger coast territory and by an extension of its boundaries to the south of the Congo river.

Just touch the frontiers of Belgian Congo.

The situation is rendered more difficult because certain regards must be taken toward Spain. Parts of the coast south of Kamerun belong to Spain, and this brings up the question of an exchange of German and Spanish territory, and there is reason to believe that secret negotiations are even now taking place between France and Spain.

As I have said before, there is no reason to anticipate any thing but a peaceful solution even if it is very slow in coming.

FRANCE IS BUSY.

In France statesmen are busy discussing in the papers the question: "What policy is Germany prepared to follow in Morocco in the event of an agreement being arrived at?" and "In what terms will she bind herself for the future to abstain from all political interference in that country?"

The Echo de Paris says: "We were informed yesterday from a particularly well-informed source that Germany was disposed to make us Morocco all the concessions desirable, but that she wanted a generous 'pouchoire'."

It was added that it was not to our interest to haggle over strips of equatorial territories when we were going to get what we wanted in Morocco. It is just this vague promise, this alleged beating about the bush, which is inexplicable to the logical French mind. It must not be forgotten that, since the Franco-German agreement of 1909, the term "political disinterestedness" has lost its freshness to French eyes.

The Temps hits the nail on the head when it remarks that there is a gulf of psychological darkness between the French and German points of view. Germany does the very opposite of what she should do to convince the French public. Instead of setting forth the importance of what it offered to us, Germany confines herself to depreciating the value of what we are asked to give. The Temps asserts that not a single German journal has suggested a positive formula, marking clearly the benefits which, according to Germany, will accrue to France in Morocco. Everyone says that the German government will be very generous. But what about the German opinion which, according to Herr von Kiderling-Waechter, is so distrustful, so touchy, so exacting? Why is it not being directed towards a categorical agreement giving France in the Shereefian empire every satisfaction without any possible ambiguity? At present the price to be paid is being sharply discussed without the aid of the gods, and having first been settled. This, of course, is not easy for Germany, after her policy of the last six years. When the German offer is down in black and white many people in Berlin will denounce it as a damage and discredit to the imperial policy, and as a betrayal of the gods it worshipped in 1905. It is for this very reason, adds the Temps, that France—not the German only, but the public also—insists on plain statements.

SUSPICIOUS OF KAISER.

Every country in Europe seems to have an idea that it is impossible for a German diplomat to be frank and open, and any treaty formulated by German statesmen is accordingly carefully scrutinized and dissected in every newspaper of importance in Europe, whether the matter itself interests it or not. Small wonder, then, that German papers and news agencies have been busy trying to prove that the present Russo-German agreement contains no secret clauses or reservations whatever, and that its main significance lies in the fact that it was concluded just when it was.

The "Agrarian Deutsche" Tages-Zeitung says: "What Germany obtains from the present Russo-German agreement, which cannot yet be estimated, and that the treaty itself is much more important for the Russian position in Persia. For the first time, it points out, the Russian sphere of influence in Northern Persia, which was established by the Anglo-Russian treaty, is tacitly recognized in a diplomatic document and made the basis of permanent relations."

This, it contends, strengthens Russia's position in Persia very considerably, especially vis-a-vis her good friend England, who "notwithstanding her treaty with Russia, has used every endeavor to prevent that country setting firm foot in the sphere of influence adjudicated to her."

The "Reichsbote" considers that the "open door" in Northern Persia, and it rejoices that the conclusion of the treaty has caused disappointment and vexation in England and France. The treaty signifies, it declares, that friendly relations have been re-established between Germany and Russia, and that the "encirclement policy" pursued by King Edward has been made ineffectual.

CRETE CAUSES TROUBLE. The Turkish government has at last conceded that she has had no trouble enough over Crete and is now said to be anxious to give up her "sovereignty" over the island, but strange to say it does not take any steps in this direction, for Turkish public opinion is almost unanimously opposed to the idea of surrendering the island to the British.

A statesman interviewed about this said a few days ago: "Of young Turkey to demand it would be for them to insist on the ruin of young Turkey's hopes and the ruin of the present Turkish empire."

The enemies of young Turkey will at once say, as they did in 1908, "The young Turkey is worse than Abdul Hamid. They yielded to Bulgaria and to Austria; now they are yielding to the Greek national ideal. The thing is impossible. There would be a revolution," he added. "Young Turkey must preserve her territorial integrity if she is to survive."

STRIKE SENTIMENT DAILY GROWS STRONGER

Labor Official Intimates That Walkout On Harriman Lines
May Be Expected.

WITH ADVISORY BOARD
RESTS FINAL DECISION

Many Conferences Held Yesterday and Final Session Will Occur Today.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—Representatives of 25,000 shippers of the Harriman system of railroads held three sessions in this city today in an effort to settle the controversy between the great army of workers and the railroad officials.

The final session of the conference is scheduled for Sunday afternoon. Tomorrow evening the forty members of the advisory board, who have been sitting with the five presidents of international unions, are expected to leave for their homes. The order for a walkout rests in the hands of the five heads of these unions.

THREE CONFERENCES.

E. L. Begun of this city, president of the Federation of Shopmen, presided at all three meetings. The first session was held in the morning, the second in the afternoon and the third lasted until nearly midnight.

J. W. Kilne, president of the International Blacksmiths' Union, acted as spokesman for the conferees. He said:

"We have not decided to go out. Preliminaries in regard to the situation are being gone over, and the conference will not be held until today. The sentiment to 'strike' is stronger than ever."

PEACEFUL MEANS EXHAUSTED.

Kilne said that there was a possibility that efforts would be directed toward a second conference with General Manager Kruttschnitt, to be held at Chicago.

"But it does not look as though there would be any use," he continued. "It seems as though as all means for a peaceful settlement of the matter has been exhausted. We will not recede from our original demand for recognition of the Federation."

TAX ASSOCIATION HAS NO COMMENT

Will Not at the Present Time Discuss Rate of City of Oakland.

The officers of the Tax Association of Alameda County say a misapprehension has gone abroad regarding the Oakland tax levy of $1.98 for 1911-12 budget. Four members of the executive committee recently attended a session of the City Commission to listen to the presentation of arguments in favor of the tax levy of the city of Oakland. The object in attending the meeting was one solely of education, and the association has in no way approved or disapproved the tax levy, believing that with the best of information it would be useless to attempt any criticism or approval.

In order to intelligently criticize or approve the city levy it would require an extended and expensive investigation covering the various departments. This the association hopes eventually to do, but at present it has other matters under consideration that will absorb a large part of the finances and until the association is more firmly established and has a larger membership and has greater financial resources it is impossible to take up all of the problems offering.

BEAR UP TREE ON VARSITY CAMPUS

Is Only Captured by Use of Lasso.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—When a California black bear takes a notion to run away and climb a tree there is no use trying to stop him. At least that is the experience of Edward Lipman and G. Ingram, students of the University of California, who are members of the Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

Ingram got the bear, which is a cub of 4 months, 3 days ago while out hunting in the northern part of the state. He brought it to Berkeley as mascot for the Phi Kappa Sigmas. The fraternity men immediately adopted the cub and dubbed him "Mike."

"Mike likes to eat candy and sleep. His propensity for slumber is the one thing which gave him an opportunity to escape."

FINDS BEAR ON CAMPUS.

There was a hurried search through the fraternity house and then a squad of men made for the campus. They had not gone far when they caught sight of "Mike." They quickened their pace, and called to the cub, but he only ran faster.

"Mike" made for one of the campus oaks. Up it he climbed.

It was necessary to lasso the cub in order to get him down on the ground again.

"Mike" hosts at the Phi Kappa Sigma comprise some of the most prominent men in college.

vent a wave of reaction, and to do this, military strength and this especially in view of the military traditions of the Ottoman empire, is essential. ## CALVE WILL MAKE TOUR OF AMERICA

AMERICAN WOMAN OWNS A GIOCONDA

Noted Operatic Star Is to Be Heard in Eighteen Concerts.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Emma Calve is to sing in 18 concerts in America. The contract has been made with W. B. Greenbaum of San Francisco and Charles J. Hanlon, a California man who made a trip to the Cabaret in the Cevennes, the summer residence of Madame Calve, where the contract was signed.

She will sing in San Francisco, Seattle, Portland and Los Angeles and will take the whole Pacific circuit. Calve's first visit to America was in 1894 when she made a great hit in New York in "Cavalleria Rusticana." She is 45 years old and in the heyday of her musical powers.

It is claimed that this picture of the Duchess makes the fifth Gioconda. The other four are the lost one of the Louvre, the Gioconda of Madrid, the Gioconda of Quimper and the Gioconda of Baden on Lake Constance. The knowledge that she is the possessor of a Gioconda has made the Duchess the cynosure of all eyes at Aix les Bains. She, her husband, Don Marino, her little daughter, Donna Olympia, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moors, are taking the cure.

CHINESE FLEES AS BULLETS WHIZ

Oriental Gallops Right Up to the Police Station and Tells His Troubles.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—Screaming that he had been shot at three times while walking along Bush street late tonight, Yuen Fu Wo ran into the police station clamoring for the protection of the police. He said that highlanders who had been pursuing him for several days set upon him suddenly near Larkin street before he had a chance to defend himself. A dark form stepped suddenly from a doorway as he approached and, leveling a pistol at him, fired three shots in rapid succession.

None of the shots took effect. Yuen ran down the street and did not stop until he had reached the shelter of the police station.

A posse of police was sent in the vicinity, but no trace of the alleged highlanders was found. It is thought by the police that the matter is more of a private affair than a highlander outrage.

RARE OLD DRAMA IS WELL PLAYED

Bring "Jim the Penman"
Here to Please.

By LEO LEVY.

Dealing in generalities is twice as difficult as shuffling them. Doing either with "Jim the Penman" is unfair. It is a calendar deck of theatrical playing cards. Sir Charles Young scattered over the table in the days when heroes were the things and heart action was a thing to be dealt with at the theater. And after all these years the gloss on the surface of the deck has not been worn.

Florence Roberts, Thurlow Bergen and Theodore Roberts brought "Jim the Penman" to the Macdonough Theater, yesterday, with a company that was made up of all the component parts of stage goodness. Theodore Roberts' work as Baron Harfield is a rare exhibition of footlight portraiture; Bergen's James Ralston is a picture out of the long ago near melodrama that dealt with human beings; Florence Roberts keeps her better in a college announcement that mark the line of least resistance. What the remainder of the company has to do is done so well that even the principals must be satisfied.

PLOT IS FAMILIAR.

The plot has long been a part of theatrical history, known to those who run and read and needs nothing of our explanation. The dramatist built it up like a house on a foundation that was not for one of cards. They don't study "Jim the Penman" at the colleges for its admirable construction. Ibsen sounds better in a college announcement of courses than Sir Charles Young.

Clarence Harper, an Oaklander, brother of George W. Harper of this city replaced Will Walling as Louis Percival and did a great deal more with his work than show it to the best advantage.

Reckoned by the tri-star production of "Jim the Penman" there's more than one hundred cents to the dollar you will pay to see it.

CHURCH SERVICE.

At the Fruitvale Congregational church, of which Rev. Burton M. Palmer is the pastor, the morning sermon today will be on the text "Preaching With the Sword." Tonight the sermon will be "In the Days of Thy Youth."

BRITAIN LEADS IN SUBMARINE VESSELS

75 Such Crafts Are Built or Are in the Course of Construction.

LARGE, SWIFT AND GOOD OCEAN GOERS

The Admiralty Hopes to Keep Ahead of Nations in the Race for Power.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Heroic efforts are being made by the British admiralty to outclass any other power in the world in the number and efficiency of submarine vessels.

The most modern submarines now being built here, known officially as the "E" class, displace 800 tons; they are in fact, though not in name, small cruisers, capable of traveling either on the surface or under the water.

They are 176 feet long, with a maximum breadth of 23 feet. In the original type of submarine, the speed, both on and under the water, was slow, but, as a result of the co-operation of the Admiralty with Messrs. Vickers Sons and Maxim, who have been so largely responsible for many of the improvements in the design of British boats, both speeds have been increased. The new "E" class will be able to travel on the surface at 15 knots, while beneath the surface the rate will be considerably higher than has hitherto been attained.

HEAVY OIL USED.

The "E" boats are given the most powerful engines ever put into submarines, and they are of a new type using heavy oil under conditions of absolute safety. There can be no repetition of the disastrous gas explosions which occurred in the earlier vessels.

There are 75 British submarines built or building. The later ones are such good sea boats that they can make long voyages. One flotilla has recently been dispatched to Malta, and the other has just arrived at Hong-Kong, a matter of 900 miles after a stormy passage, during which the craft were not damaged and the daring crew suffered no injury. The submarine is now a most valuable naval arm, for use not merely in coast guard operations, but in operations of great importance and direction to the efforts to render these amphibious craft even more devilish in their warlike qualities. Slowly a ship is being rendered stage by stage, which will render destroyers of the old types obsolete.

LIKE ORDINARY CRUISER.

The vessels of the "E" class mark the apotheosis of the submersible ship. They will have more torpedo tubes than the craft now in the service, and the torpedoes will be of far greater capacity, and will be of greater endurance allied with more powerful explosive charge. The "E" craft will have decks somewhat resembling the decks of ordinary above-water vessels, on the decks serviceable guns will be mounted, so as not to interfere with the facility of the vessel to travel beneath the surface. In the larger hull will be comparatively roomy quarters for the crews, with more ample provision of compressed air, so as to lengthen the maximum period of submergence; they will be equipped for wireless communication; and, above all, the new "E" vessel will be safe as no submarines have been before—safe from the danger of explosion, and with well-tried apparatus to enable officers and men to escape in case of collision.

The "E" class mark a great advance on any vessel hitherto constructed, but no one who has followed the line of development since the first little ship was built to the design of the Holland Company, will doubt that the end of this chapter of naval evolution has not been reached. The displacement today is 800 tons; in a few years' time it may be probably be doubled, or trebled. We may in a comparatively short period see sizeable cruisers equipped so as to cruise submerged by day and on the surface by night.

THE BIENNIAL.

Mrs. E. G. Denniston, president of the local biennial board, in speaking recently at the Laurel Hall Club, said it would require at least $10,000 to entertain the visitors who would come to California in 1912 to attend the National Convention, and she expressed the wish that the club women assist the local board in its efforts to make the biennial a great success. The next of auditions was also emphasized by Mrs. Denniston.

PARISIAN 'COCHER' CHASES PRINCESS FOR A CHAT

Familiarity of French Cabmen Is Clearly Exemplified in This Story.

TELLS HIS 'FARE' WHERE TO DRIVE

Astounds Him by Racing After and Talking With Louise of Belgium.

(BY MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.)

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Veritable characters, the Paris cabmen, though sometimes respectful, are often inclined to be a little too familiar. Here is an example which will interest you.

M. G. de Malziere wishes to visit a sick friend in the Avenue Hocke, but when he told the "Cocher" to drive him there, the man shook his head and replied that it was only a waste of time as there was "no one in Paris."

"I tell you there's no one left at the top of the Avenue Hocke," he repeated. "All the houses are closed in the hot weather."

M. Malziere insisted and they went to the Avenue Hocke. But the driver was right. The sick man had got better, and was off to the seaside. The cabman smiled as M. Malziere got back into the cab and then he remarked:

"Why don't you go for a drive in the Bois de Boulogne. There's no one there, either. But it's not so hot as in the avenues."

Without waiting for an answer he drove to the Bois and while on their way a victoria passed them. Instantly he leaped to his feet shouting "It's She! It's She!" whipped his horse to a gallop, with the evident intention of overtaking the carriage in which a distinguished looking woman elegantly dressed, was seated.

CHASES A WOMAN.

"What do you mean?" asked his passenger angrily. "Have you lost your senses?"

Attracted by the outcries, the woman turned. She smiled amiably and said: "Bon jour, Germain."

"Bon jour, Altesse," replied the "cocher," and the two engaged in a long and familiar conversation of which M. Malziere understood not a word. As they parted the woman still smiling, said:

"And you understand, Germain, once more, thank you."

The "cocher" gave her a profound salute, held in his horse until the victoria had got well ahead and then turning to his fare, said: "She's not proud if she is a highness, and she's got millions."

"You say her name?"

"I should think I did. And what does it all mean?"

"Why that's the Princess Louise of Belgium. One day she left a packet of papers in my cab. They were connected with a lawsuit and had written on them 'procureur royal.' I took them back to her, and she was generous in her reward. Moreover she gave me a drink, and you can believe me if you like, but she drank with me. Ever since when we meet as you see, we always stop and have a chat."

Love at First Sight in Case of Oakland Girl and Colorado Man.

WATSONBURG, Colo. Sept. 9.—Love at first sight has culminated in the marriage after a two weeks' courtship of Miss Ellen Mae Hansen, a society girl of Oakland, Cal., and Ralph Levy, a prosperous young business man of Watsonburg, Miss Hansen, although pretty and popular, coyly admits that she never had a suitor until she met Levy.

Two weeks ago Miss Hansen came to Watsonburg to visit friends and relatives, this being her former home. She was introduced to Levy the day of her arrival and Dan Cupid began cementing their affections from the start.

It is not known whether or not the Princess will accompany her father, King Albert, on his second visit to America in the near future.

ST. ANTHONY'S PICNIC PROVES BIG SUCCESS

Parishioners and Their Friends Enjoy Splendid and Exciting Admission Day Outing at Emeryville Race Course

With the combined efforts of the members of the auxiliaries of the parish and the patronage of the clergy and representatives of all the Catholic churches of the city, the annual picnic given yesterday by St. Anthony's church in the Emeryville race-track, proved a brilliant success. About 500 were in attendance. The crowd was composed of men, women and children, who greatly assisted in swelling the success of the day.

From early morning until 1 o'clock last evening merriment prevailed. There was a continuous entertainment arranged by the program committee, which was headed by Father P. A. Anderson, assisted by Father P. E. Doyle, M. A. McInnis, Hugh Hogan A. Kretz, Miss U. C. Gallagher, M. M. Roach, Mrs. J. E. Cunningham, Miss J. Nesbitt, Mrs. M. Vierra, P. N. Harahan, Miss A. Ryken and Mrs. George W. Schmitt.

With a baseball game between the boys of St. Anthony and St. Joseph's teams, the activities of the morning were for St. Joseph's. By a score of 8 to 6 the Stars of St. Anthony carried off the laurels of the day.

Perry and O'Connell were the chief performers for the winning nine, while Lydon and McDougal were the battery for St. Joseph's. Bill O'Brien was the umpire. There were twelve innings.

OCCULTISM IS ALL THE RAGE IN BRITAIN

WOMEN ENTHUSIASTIC IN THEIR BELIEFS

Men of Prominence Take Up the Fad With an Equal Fervor.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—A most remarkable change is taking place in the mental make-up of the English people, at least so far as the higher classes are concerned. While the English gentleman and still more the English man of business was a somewhat stolid, very matter-of-fact person, who went on his way looking neither right nor left, he has now become greatly affected by the general spirit of unrest which has swept across the world, has grown superstitious and seized with a mad desire to know what the future holds in store for him.

Most evident, of course, is the change in London society, whose strongest fad is now occultism.

SEERS DO BIG BUSINESS.

Throughout the coronation season the palmists and fortune tellers of London reaped a golden harvest from society women of all ages, who called to consult them about love and marriage. Many, too, sought advice about contemplated journeys or as to whom they should include among their guests at a particular garden party or reception. Even the day and date of the function were often indicated by clairvoyant seers. One woman came all the way from Devonshire to London in June to consult a crystal gazer regarding the approaching marriage of her daughter, but fortunately the seer approved of the prospective bridegroom and the wedding was allowed to take place.

But the women are not alone in their enthusiastic belief in occult powers and divination. Men of prominence in many branches of life have taken up the fad with equal fervor. A certain managing director of a powerful corporation employs a woman mystic at a regular salary yearly to advise him in all his business transactions and to declare to him that he has never made a mistake or lost a shilling since he adopted this policy.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.

Another well-known financier was told by an "Egyptian" adept that the reason why certain ventures had turned out disastrously was the way in which the number of his house-name gave out adverse "vibrations." The matter-of-fact London city council would not permit him to change the name of his residence, so he sought on the other side of the street and bought a new home with the right kind of "vibration" in its name. Strangely enough, he claims that he has since been successful in all his business dealings.

A revival of interest in occultism followed in the wake of the general recrudescence of occultism in London. Every few weeks the arrival of some new medium with abnormal powers is heralded among the elect, and every one is crowded with believers and seekers after the truth.

Most of these mediums come from the United States and though they have been highly recommended very few of them have succeeded in producing anything beyond the familiar manifestations of table tipping, the delivery of trance-jung messages of an unconvincing character.

IS VERY POPULAR.

One of the few exceptions was Professor R. B. Bess, a man of many talents and Jewish parentage. He came to London from New York with excellent credentials from prominent trans-Atlantic spiritualists as an occultist of wonderful gifts. He had not been long in England when he was introduced to one of the palatial hotels in Piccadilly when long lines of wealthy and aristocratic visitors began calling upon him daily, including many English women and one foreign princess. The professor was also a great demand at evening receptions in Mayfair and Belgrave. Rather short and stout, but impressive and magnetic, a fluent talker and a keen judge of character, he speedily became a very popular figure, especially with the fair sex, who declared his dark features and brilliant, penetrating eyes to be ideally mystic.

Although Professor Bess had no court exhibitions of a rather staid character during his stay and succeeded in getting many people to believe in his alleged powers as a medium.

Professor Bess recently left for St. Petersburg, announcing to his friends that he had a special message of the greatest importance to deliver, but nothing has since been heard of him.

COAT AND HAT ARE CAUSE OF MYSTERY

Found On Broadway Wharf in San Francisco and Owner Is Sought.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—Mystery surrounds the finding of a hat and coat this morning at the foot of Broadway wharf by Chief Wharfinger A. Davidson. The hat is a light brown with a green cord around it and size 6 1/2. The coat is a brown striped and made by Henry C. Schmack, expressly for Larnard Kane. Inside the pocket was found a memorandum which said, "Get off at the foot of Howard street and walk to the left, and yet there has been nothing found which would indicate that a person had committed suicide, other than the above mentioned articles. The police have advised the waterfront patrolmen to be on the lookout for a body supposed to be the person who left the coat and hat upon the wharf."

Advance information was received that there were many hundreds of tons of the drug on board. So far the customs searchers have been unable to locate it.

CROP CONDITIONS WEAKEN STOCKS

Government Confirmation of Worst Features of August Report Affects Prices.

(BY THOMAS C. SHOTWELL)

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—New low records for the year were made in Wall street today as a direct result of the government report of the previous day. This report confirmed the worst features of the August report and caused free liquidation of securities. Prices declined up to the very close of the session. The speculative interest was a free seller of short stocks and made no attempt to cover.

The United States Steel corporation announced that unfilled orders on its books at the end of August were 11,900 tons greater than at the end of July. The number of idle cars has been reduced 19,629 since the previous report two weeks ago.

Liquidation has been in progress throughout the week. In the beginning it was cautious but toward the close selling became more urgent. The decline continued until several new low records were made on announcement by the Government that crop conditions had not improved during the month of August.

Logobia, an old man, was shot through the head and mortally wounded while asleep in a bunk near one end of the house.

STORK HOVERING OVER ROYAL HOME

Prince August Wilhelm and Wife Expecting Another Nursery Occupant.

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—With his six sturdy sons, three of whom are married, and his one fair daughter, for whom a fit alliance is already seriously discussed, and with three equally sturdy grandsons, the imperial family party already has a definite assurance of the stability of the Hohenzollern house. And now it is discreetly, but proudly, intimated that the crown prince's princess is preparing for another occupant of the imperial nursery, and that Prince August Wilhelm, the fourth son, and his charming Schleswig wife are equally expectant.

To the crown princess the approaching event is of more than usual interest. Her youngest son was born two years ago this month and during those two years the crown prince has more than once given evidences of a somewhat erratic disposition. This becomes quite marked during the recent abbreviated tour of the Orient by the sudden return of the princess. It was reported at that time that the crown princess has displayed indications of ill health that caused uneasiness in imperial circles. Whether there was any ground for these reports or not it has been noticed that under the present conditions of expectancy the crown prince has displayed an unusual tender consideration for his consort, and whatever ground there may have been for the rumors of marital uneasiness, there is very convincing evidence that they have all been very happily dissipated.

EARL LEADS REAL SIMPLE LIFE

Yarmouth Since His Bankruptcy Has Been Helping With Housework.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The Earl of Yarmouth, since his recent bankruptcy, has been forced to lead the really simple life. He is living with a family named the Tebbes, near Bournemouth, Hampshire, and frequently helps them doing cooking and general housework. It is not known whether he gets a weekly shilling excursion ticket to Bournemouth of his day off as do the regular housemaids of this place, but the facts here, he is making himself remarkably useful and is happy and contented.

When he owned a bungalow on the Thames he first became friendly with the Tebbes, who were then quite wealthy. Mrs. Tebbes, rather mothered the irresponsible Earl, who had been a playboy and a gambler, and they gladly took Yarmouth in when he had no place else to go, inasmuch as he was the only servant they could afford.

His father, the Marquis of Hertford, has now decided to have anything to do with him, recently writing that if his son made a few friends of his own class instead of mixing with second-rate actors and actresses, he might have received help. The earl's friends predict that his next move will be into the chorus of the Gaiety Theatre, which is getting to be a place for nobility, containing, as it does, the daughters of Lord Montagu Beauchamp and Viscount Dangan.

SUICIDE? NEVER, SAYS BEATTIE IN HIS CELL

Prisoner Reads With Interest About Protest Against Beulah Binford.

INTIMATES JURORS: WERE THE DEAD ONES

Declares That Men in Live City Would Have Freed Him of Charge.

(By J. J. O'NEIL.)

CHESTERFIELD COURTHOUSE, Va., Sept. 9.—Through a blue haze of cigarette smoke at the window of his little cell in the old Colonial jail here, Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., who yesterday was condemned to die for having slain his young wife on the Middlethian turnpikes on the night of July 18, this afternoon talked quite frankly about his affairs.

"I'm far from a dead one yet," he said, as he grinned in man-to-man fashion at his interviewer. "There's many a legal battle to come before they send me to the electric chair. I think I'll get a new trial in another county and with an up-to-date jury I'll be acquitted."

READS OF BEULAH BINFORD.

The rich young man was more interested in dispatches from New York telling of that city's protest against Beulah Binford's stage appearance than he was in his own fate, apparently. He asked to be shown local papers containing these dispatches and not until he had read them through would he go on and discuss his predicament.

"I want to say again I'm innocent, and that any jury of up-to-date young men or residents of a live city—even of Richmond—would have freed me."

"By the way, fellows," Beattie added, "I see a lot of talk in the papers about the possibility of me trying to end my own life. That's all rot. Believe me, if I finally must go to the chair I'm going there like a man. No suicide for mine!"

"You have all said in your articles that I was sane. Well, I'm going to be sane right through to the finish, whatever it is."

CLOSELY GUARDED.

Despite his declaration he would not try to kill himself, he was guarded constantly last night and today by two officers, who watched his every movement. At the same time two men with loaded rifles walked outside of the little jail. There has not been a murmur of a possibility that the citizens of Chesterfield county would decide to take the action of the law into their hands, but the officials were taking no chances.

FAILS TO PAINT ALASKA IN ROSIEST COLORS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9.—President James McCrear, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, who returned a few days ago from Alaska, is not so optimistic about the immediate future of that great territory as are some other persons. ## How to Make a Real Wrinkle Remover

(From the Fashion Reporter.)
In these days of cleverly advertised "beautifiers" of 57 varieties and more, it is hard for any woman to believe that she can make a simple home remedy which will do her much more good and cost her much less than the average made preparation. Take the subject of wrinkles, for instance. There is nothing in the world so effective for removing or preventing wrinkles, saggy cheeks and double chins as a solution of salicylic acid and witch hazel.

Get an ounce of pure powdered salicylic acid from any drug store, dissolve the full ounce in a half pint of witch hazel and use the mixture daily as a refreshing lotion. The quick and satisfactory results will surprise you. Even after the very first application there is a marked improvement. The wrinkles are less in evidence and the face has a firm, "solid" feeling that is very comforting.

FAME OF OAKLAND REACHES GOTHAM PROGRESS OF COMMUNITY IS PRAISED

NATHAN GANTZ, superintendent of H. C. Capwell & Co's big Department Store, who has just returned from an Eastern business trip.

Nathan Gantz Returns From the East Profoundly Impressed With Home City's Prospects

Nathan Gantz, superintendent of the department store of the H. C. Capwell Company, who has been in the east with a corps of buyers for the several departments of that concern, has returned, and like all the friends of Oakland, after visiting elsewhere, is glad to be home again. Gantz is an experienced business man and has made many a trip between Oakland and the leading marts of trade in the eastern part of the country. He is a sterling friend of this city and none of the advantages which he observes in the great business centers of the east pass unnoticed by him on his annual journeys to that section.

On his latest visit east Gantz was able to tell his friends and business acquaintances who go thither as buyers of goods from all parts of the country that Oakland is making progress which, he is sure, is unequalled in any other part of the country. He comes back this time with the certainty that that fact is known to the country, for the reason that his fellow buyers have told him that they have heard from many commercial and industrial sources that Oakland has become practically the first city in California in the matter of contemporaneous advancement.

Gantz goes further and declares that Oakland is, in fact, making greater improvements, relatively speaking, than even the metropolis of the country itself. He knows that New York is, of course, older than Oakland, but states that many of its great improvements were made only within the last few years when there had been opportunity for those improvements to have been made years ago, while Oakland has, within a comparatively short time, made improvements of the same kind which it was possible for them to have been made.

WEATHER IN EAST HOT.

Speaking of his eastern trip last night, Gantz said:
"The past summer has been the hottest that New York has experienced for years and years. I was there and in other eastern places for the last seven weeks. It was accompanied by my wife. I was hot-weathered for the change of climate, we missed the genial temperature of California and were overjoyed when we again returned to this city."
"It may seem strange but I came away from the great metropolis with the idea that even New York has taken a lesson from Oakland. They are naming their streets by means of signs at the corners of intersecting thoroughfares, such as we have had on our streets for a number of years and, of course, the new system is appreciated. It struck me that New York even was following Oakland."

"There was another thing in which

I thought New York was imitating this city and that was in keeping her streets clean. I know that there are some people who do not feel that Oakland has as yet done all that she should do in this respect but Oakland is engaged in a very encouraging way in the matter of keeping her streets clean and before long will have all her streets in a condition which will impress in a most favorable manner every visitor.

"In New York I found that the police, whom a stranger is obliged from time to time to consult, are uniformly kind, courteous, well-informed as regards their own city and considerate to strangers. In this respect, I must say, I found them a counterpart of the police officers of this city, whom one meets in the business district of Oakland. I will not say that the New York officers received their pointers from Oakland but I will say that they have learned of the officers that we have at home."

"New York has, of course, a number of subways for the accommodation of the people in the matter of rapid transit, but you must remember that those improvements were inaugurated but a few years ago. Oakland is a much younger city and in the last five years has made, relatively speaking, a greater number of improvements in the matter of local electrical means of transportation for her people than has New York."

SUBWAYS ARE COMING.

"It will not be long before Oakland will have her own subways for the rapid transit of her people because I see from THE TRIBUNE that steps are to be taken to ascertain what is necessary to be done to build a subway between this city and Alameda and to draw away the draw-bridges at Webster and Harrison streets which now interfere with the passing of people from one city to the other and impede the commerce of the harbor."

"I am inclined to think that if those wealthy men who have plenty of money lying idle were to open their purse strings, the progress of Oakland would be more pronounced than it is even at the present time."

"Business, in a certain sense, is active in the east, although there were those who claimed that it could be better. I was pleased, however, to tell those with whom I came in contact that out in our section there was every reason to be cheerful because times were not only satisfactory but the coming season promised to be as grateful to the firm as have been the seasons of the year which have already passed. We have ordered from our eastern designers and manufacturers an elaborate assortment of goods, some of which have been designed with a view to stockpiling the new home of the firm now in course of construction at the corner of Fourteenth and Clay streets."

GERMANY PLEASSED WITH RIVAL'S PLIGHT

Kaiser's Subjects Think They Commercial Doom.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—It is a very serious crisis England is passing through at present. The havoc wrought by the great strike of sailors and firemen during the coronation is as nothing compared to the great strikes of dockers and railroad men that followed and which ended in victory for the workers. Out of this victory arose the present situation, which threatens British shipping and industry in the most alarming manner.

The demand for higher wages is like an epidemic among the British workers who, encouraged by the success of the recent strikes, with enthusiasm stop the industries in which they are employed and with evident joy attack policemen and oppose the troops.

With unalloyed joy a certain part of the German press has watched recent events in England, a country which for years has been Germany's only dreaded rival, and which only a few weeks ago prevented her from humiliating France.

The strikes have revealed to the world the weakness of the British empire and, never again, the German jingo press announces, is the German eagle to allow itself to be intimidated by the British lion.

SAP INDUSTRIAL STRENGTH.

But also in another less sensational part of the German press there is rejoicing. The papers in the great industrial centers of Germany are jubilant because the strikes are sapping the strength of British industry, which already has all it could do to hold its own in competition with the German.

During the last generation British industry has been gradually forced to the wall everywhere by the smart, energetic, frugal Germans, who have understood how to manufacture thousands of cheap articles a little more elegant and cheaper than the English. It will then be a very severe test for the British industry suddenly to have to shoulder heavier burdens, not only in the shops of higher wages, but also of increased domestic freight rates. Many are the capitalists of industry in England, therefore, who hold that Great Britain stands face to face with a great catastrophe, that many factories and corporations will have to shut down, simply because they are unable to continue with profit under the new conditions.

In English industrial circles the Liberal government is being sharply criticized because it did not at once crush the strike leaders because they are so serious accusations are raised against the government because it, for party reasons, dares not oppose the labor party.

"It is a very grave question, however," the stern separatists have declared, "any good thing that would not rather have tended to increase the calamity. It is very easy to talk about 'crushing' the workers by the use of police and troops, but the results that follow such 'crushing' in the love of government are very seldom gratifying."

ENGLAND FACES CRISIS.

That the condition in England is very serious anybody must acknowledge, but the question is whether the responsibility for the miseries must not be sought elsewhere than in the love of government and cupidity of the workmen. The sins of the past many impartial observers here willingly admit are to blame for most of the miseries of the present. With all the rest of the world progressed, England alone remained stationary, especially industrially, and permitted herself to be left hopelessly far behind. In the modern race of industrial and commercial competition in which the Germans easily got ahead and neck ahead of all other European nations, England felt too proud to take part, but remained satisfied in living on her old traditions. Now the scales are falling from our eyes and we are suddenly beginning to realize that our old traditions are old-fashioned and worn out, that, like China, we have been asleep on our little island and the result is that British industry, commerce and shipping are not strongly enough prepared to meet the demands of modern times in regard to higher wages.

This is the real crisis in English commercial life at present and it is a crisis which is of the utmost seriousness and importance.

'BABY' MAY HAVE LURED THIS BOY

Oakland Woman Writes Los Angeles Police to Look for Her Son.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 9.—Why did Otto Trenschel leave his home in Oakland? The police of this city had been asked today to find out, and they got the answer today from the boy's mother in a letter. The answer, according to her, is Baby Deane, a pretty little dancing girl who preceded the boy's departure. Trenschel is 17 years of age and an only son, but his mother writes that she does not care if he stays here, provided he lives right. She tells the officers they may find him by going to the cheap theaters, but probably not under his own name, as he has no money to hang on to. Perforce, he is in love with the girl, she says, and will not let her get away from him if he can help it.

COLLEGE WOMEN TO HAVE CLUB

$25,000 Structure to Be Erected by Students at Stanford University

STANFORD, Sept. 9.—The executive board of the Woman's Club is making elaborate plans for a $25,000 woman's club-house to be erected for the purpose of drawing the women students of the university in closer unity. As a result of the campaign and tag day last spring more than $6000 has been paid in toward the erection of the spacious club-house. In all $12,000 has been pledged and an active campaign will start next week to collect the promised money.

As soon as $12,000 is in the hands of the treasurer actual work on the new quarters will begin, and it is hoped that the amount can be collected so that actual building can be begun by the 1st of October.

It is the purpose of the Woman's Club to use the club-house as a gathering place for the promotion of women's activities and for supplying the alumni members of the university with a rallying center on return to the campus. Reading and recreation rooms will be elaborately fitted up and all efforts will be used to make the club-house as much of a college home as possible. Life memberships to the club will be assessed at $25. The present officers of the club are: Mrs. Fagnon Treat, president; Mrs. E. W. Allen, secretary; Mrs. W. H. B. Fowler, treasurer.

TAFT WILL TALK ON DIVORCE THEME

President Will Urge Uniform
and Its Dissolution.

BEVERLY, Mass., Sept. 9.—President Taft will go before the people as a teacher and a leader of moral questions in his speaking tour through the West, which starts next week. The President plans to take the opportunity to express himself emphatically upon the question of marriage and divorce. He has very strong convictions on the existing divorce situation. The President will urge the adoption of uniform laws regarding marriage and divorce by the separate states so that it will be impossible for a man to be married in one state to avoid the decree by stepping across the border line into another state. The states should respect the decrees issued by the courts of any one state, in his opinion. The President believes, this remedy can be effectually applied, as the states have already succeeded in agreeing upon uniform laws affecting certain classes of business transactions.

HEAVIER RECEIPTS OF GRAIN ARE RECORDED

Figures for Earlier Months of Year Are Offset During August.

COMMERCIAL SUPPLY OF HOGS FALLS OFF

July Shipments of Food Animals at Four Ports Show Decline.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—A considerable decline in the commercial supply of hogs, as compared with the figures for the earlier months of the year, but heavier receipts of grain, particularly wheat at the primary markets for the month are shown by the July report of internal commerce movements, just made public by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

Livestock receipts during July at seven primary Western markets aggregated 2,308,650 head, compared with 2,595,675 head received in July, 1910, and 2,688,311 head in July, 1909. Of the total, 699,778 head were cattle, 30,856 calves, 1,617,119 hogs, 875,474 sheep and 25,453 horses and mules. With the exception of horses the monthly inbound movement of food animals shows a larger volume than in the preceding two years, though the hog receipts during July mark a sharp decline from the heavier figures of the earlier months. The receipts of sheep on the other hand were well sustained and exceeded the July average for the preceding two years by about 24 per cent. The marketing of the livestock at the seven primary markets required the use during the month of 58,449 cars, compared with 64,361 cars in June, and 62,224 cars in May of this year. Livestock receipts during the seven months of the present year—23,911,801 head—exceeded the corresponding figures of each of the preceding years, the heavier receipts of sheep and hogs during the present year accounting for the larger total.

SHOW DECLINE.

July receipts of food animals at leading Atlantic seacoast cities, 767,119 head, show a like decline from the higher June figures, though in this case the variation seems entirely normal, and in accord with the smaller demand for the earlier months at the larger cities during the mid-summer season. Of the total received 77,231 head were cattle, 58,768 calves, 257,561 hogs and 373,519 sheep. The seven monthly receipts at these cities aggregated 5,139,798 head, of which 612,427 were cattle, 408,661 calves, 2,229,945 hogs and 1,948,755 sheep. As compared with 1910 figures, substantial increases are shown for all animals except calves.

July shipments of packing-house products from Chicago totaled 198,349,375 pounds, compared with 162,987,400 pounds in July, 1910, and 178,357,619 pounds in July, 1909. The principal gains over the earlier years' figures appear under the head of fresh beef and canned meats. The shipments of packing-house products for the seven months of the present year, 1,745,728 pounds, compare favorably with the corresponding figures of the two preceding years, though showing a decline of nearly 25 per cent, when compared with the corresponding figures for 1909. The stocks of meats at the end of July at five principal packing-house centers show the relatively high figure of 806,674,581 pounds, which is about 16 per cent in excess of the end-of-July average for the preceding five years.

ON LARGER SCALE.

Combined grain receipts for the month at fifteen primary markets, 72,555,794 bushels, were on a much larger scale than for July, 1910 and 1909, when 59,031,174 and 48,000,113 bushels were reported. The larger total is due primarily to the early marketing of the new winter crop. Wheat receipts for the month are given as 29,035,872 bushels, compared with 22,375,145 bushels during July, 1910, and 20,842,285 bushels during July, 1909. Chicago showing particularly heavy gains of wheat receipts for the month. A considerable gain is also shown for the inbound traffic of oats, 17,035,488 bushels, exceeding the 1910 receipts by almost 25 per cent, and being more than double the short figures of two years ago. Corn and rye receipts, but little changed from the corresponding monthly figures of the two earlier years, while the receipts of barley show a considerable decrease. Grain receipts for the season beginning September, totaled 735,060,724 bushels, compared with 719,213,440 bushels of wheat, 225,753,824 bushels of corn, 178,754,980 bushels of oats, 63,890,725 bushels of barley and 5,418,750 bushels of rye. Flour shipments for the month from two leading milling points aggregated 2,139,344 barrels, compared with 2,077,492 barrels shipped during July, 1910. Shipments since the beginning of the year—15,359,815 barrels—were almost 9 per cent below the corresponding 1910 figures, the loss affecting all the larger milling centers.

Owing partly to the larger export demand for wheat, corn and flour, the July receipts of grain and flour at the four leading Atlantic ports, 18,619,673 bushels, show a considerable gain over the corresponding figures of the two earlier years. The largest gain is shown for wheat, the receipts of which increased from 2,602,355 bushels in July, 1910, to 3,307,197 bushels during the month under discussion. Grain and flour receipts at the same cities for the seven months of the present year, 116,154,843 bushels, were also on a larger scale than during 1910 and 1909 when 100,370,658 and 92,123,409 bushels were reported.

FRENCH TURF CROWDED WITH AMERICAN WOMEN

Troops of Joyous Patrons Are the Chief Support of Races and Make Complete Circuit

(By PAUL PIERRE RIGNAUX.)

PARIS, Sept. 9.—French and international society is lifting its eyebrows in astonishment because the aristocratic jockey club, where each dinner has ten courses and each diner six waiters in its fixed program of amusements, develops the fact that not a single American belongs to this exclusive club. Even William K. Vanderbilt, who wins most of the best French races and who has the best tele. Mr. Henry Morgan, Countess Odie De Leubersac, Countess De Gontant Diron and Mrs. John Munroe.

RUSH TO RAILS.

When Auteuil and Longchamps closed up the grand steeplechase and grand prix respectively these ladies rushed off to the races of Aix. The Trouville racing season, once in full swing, even the presence of gallant King George of Greece could not hold our American racing women in the Alpine watering places, so leaving Aix to the gouty and rheumatic. Mr. Morgan and King George, they fled themselves off to Trouville in Normandy, where, under the mellowing influence of races, frocks and fashions, billing and cooing, betting and beguiling flourished as never before.

Next we find the whole troop of racing women at Dieppe and the circuit completed, all are now back within the purlieus of Paris, following the races at Chantilly. Moreover, on the first Sunday in October, when the autumn grand prix of $24,000 will be run, the same women will begin and circuit, taking in Nice, Marseilles and the south of France.

AMERICAN OWNERS.

There are so many American owners in France like Vanderbilt, Gould, Morgan, Belmont, Widener, Thorne, Hunks, Mason, Carnegie, Le Moine, and Ridgeway that our women feel quite at home at the track and this home feeling is increased by witnessing American jockeys like Reiff, O'Connor, Nash and Turner, flying the American colors to victory and when the women saunter into the paddock the quiet presence of many American trainers, like Calhoun, Duke MacIntyre and Burke again gives them a home feeling.

Osmond, well known in Parisian salons and the Pau hunting field and well known also in Paris as the separated spouse of Zola's biographer, Robert H. Sherrard and similarly well known as the writer of "To a Nun Confessed," now wins fame for the best wherewith to make a mint julep.

From her far-off manor in Northamptonshire, the fair Virginian flings out her fascinating formula and makes men's mouths water, coming from one of the first families in Virginia and having had three husbands, all of whom were experts on mint juleps. It is no wonder her formula wins first prize, for the blonde and beautiful Chateaufort de Guildsborough Hall was Miss De Bellef, then became Mrs. Osmond of New York, next was Mrs. Harvey of Yorkshire and finally Mrs. Robert Harborough Sherrard of Paris and London. As Sherrard's wife she is still niece-in-law of Wordsworth, the late school poet.

Mrs. Sherrard's formula is as follows: "Crushed ice, freshly gathered mint, real sugar cane, bourbon whisky, cognac direct from Hennessy county, sugar and boiling water in silver mug. The proper proportions should be put in by an old negro, as he alone knows how to draw forth the delicate essence of the mint by hot water and how to draw forth the delicate essence of crushed ice with a long slender toddy spoon."

A certificate of honor that the Swiss government and congratulations from six great branches of the Charrette family have been received by the Marquis and Marquise De Charrette, because their dog Bobby is the only canine that ever crossed the Jungfrau. The Marquise De Charrette, formerly Miss Sussane B. Henning of Louisville, Ky., is a famous climber and has performed feats which only veteran Alpinists like Sir William Martin Conway have ever accomplished.

The Marquis De Charrette is a son of General Baron De Charrette, whose baronetcy was formerly held by the daughter of Colonel Polk of Nashville, Tenn., and granddaughter of fighting Bishop Polk, who was killed in the Civil War.

CLIMB JUNGFRAU.

The Marquis and Marquise and their German bulldog Bobby started climbing the Jungfrau on August 25th. It took them four days to plow and struggle through the snow and ice. Among those to attend the dog and human climbers was their cousin, Countess De Martinprey, former wife of Count Bernard de Bortolas, and originally Florence Drouillard of Nashville, Tenn.

In the war over the authenticity of the "bed of Napoleon" presented by Edmund Tuck to the museum at Malmaison, powerful reinforcements have just been brought to the American side by Frederick Masson, the famous historian of Bonaparte.

It will be remembered that Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Tuck and their niece, Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, presented many Napoleonic relics to the Chateau Malmaison where the Empress Josephine died, among them being Napoleon's bed. The Princess Murat, who claims to be a descendant of Marshall Ney, violently questions the authenticity of the bed. In her attack she referred contemptuously to Edmund Tuck as "an American."

Now that the learned Mr. Masson in his defense of the Tucks and their bed reminds the princess that it is becomes her to abuse the Americans, for Achilles Murat, grand uncle of the present Prince Murat became an American citizen after he had to fly from the royal house of the Two Sicilies. This same grand uncle Murat married an American, Miss Caroline Dudley. The grandmother of the present Prince Murat, husband of the warring princess, was also an American, Miss Georgiana Frazer.

Hence, says this historian, if the fighting princess finds fault with Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Tuck, and Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt, and the Americans, similar censure applies to her husband's family. Then historian Masson pulverizes the princess by tracing the passage of the bed on which Napoleon died at St. Helena to Jerome Bonaparte, the youngest son of Napoleon, who reached the hands of Edmund Tuck.

AID FOR McNAMARAS
A POWERFUL SOURCE

AN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—Here's one on our old friend, Elbert Hubbard—one that is going the rounds of the literary set in this city, and the laugh goes with it.

In Mrs. Fremont Older's book, "Esther Damon," Elbert is supposed to be the hero. So one of the men engaged in boosting the book thought it would be a good idea to send it to Hubbard and get his ideas on it. So he wrote:

"My Dear Fra Elbertus: You have sent me many books at my expense. Now I am sending you one without cost to you. What do you think of the story?"

In due course came a letter from Hubbard. He told what delight the book had given him and how he considered it one of the best bits of fiction ever put out in America. He told of the pleasant hours he had spent over its pages, and how he expected to return to it again and again.

The joke is that, having written the letter, the San Francisco man, entirely forgot to send Hubbard the book!

Some New and Powerful Friends

Recently in this city there has been a lot of work done for the McNamaras—the men under arrest in Los Angeles for the Times dynamiting. Of course we all saw and heard the sympathy of the Union labor paraders last Monday, but I have no reference to that.

The work that is being done here comes from an entirely different source. It is the old story over again of Detective William J. Burns and the men who fought him before. These same men are now working to save the McNamaras, and they recently have shown a lot of activity. I think you'll hear of some developments in a few days, and when you do, just remember that I gave you the tip.

The Number in the Parade

All sorts of extravagant estimates have been made of the number in our Labor Day parade last Monday. One publication put the figure at 35,000. As the boys carried banners reading: "We vote as we march," and as we probably will not poll much over 70,000 votes at the primary this month, that number would come near to electing McCarthy Mayor.

But there were not 35,000 men in that parade, or anywhere near that number. The Citizens' Alliance counters made it 12,000; but that was short of the mark. Naturally the Citizens' Alliance looked at the parade through the wrong end of the opera glass.

One of the newspapers put out four men at different points along the line of march to count the paraders as closely as possible. When the four men brought in their figures they were quite close together, and from their totals was taken the mean figure, which was just 13,760. So on estimating the display of voting strength that parade really showed something less than 14,000. That's a great many votes to start off with, but it's a long way from a majority.

That Banquet That Is Not to Be

The returned and returning California delegation in Congress is not to have a banquet at the Union League Club, and I'm told that a little tale hangs thereby.

According to the political tittle-tattlers, the big Republican Club was arranging for such a banquet, and then it was decided that such a thing was not just what the club should do. So the scheme was canceled and there was a sort of general agreement to let it go at that and say nothing more about it.

You see, E. H. Tryon, president of the club, is a big wool man. And Senator Works, with Representatives Kent, Stephens and Raker, voted for the Democratic tariff reduction on wool that President Taft had to veto. So it would hardly do to feast those merry gentlemen as if they were returning heroes.

Then, again, it was said that as President Taft is coming soon, and as the club hopes to entertain him, it would not do at all to entertain ahead of him a man like Kent, who has been trying to tear the hide off the President's back. And so the club banquet is not to be, and the rift in the Republican lute in this State gets wider and wider as the days go on.

A New Sort of Lese Majeste

The Olympic Club has just passed through an election and during the campaign developed something new in club life. A man was put on trial for speaking disrespectfully of the board of directors.

Now, in the Bohemian Club for many years the most popular of all songs is the one started by "Chimie Fadden" Ned Townsend, "To H—I with the Board of Directors!" In The Family nobody knows, cares for, or pays any attention to the board. The Pacific Union sent into the world a story illustrating the esteem in which its officers are held. It was in the days when Captain Chesebrough was president. A stranger came up to him asking:

"Where can I find a spittoon?"

"Oh, spit on me; I'm the president!" replied "Chese."

But in the Olympic Club it is different. Dr. Pockwitz saw the list of the proposed board on the bulletin board and remarked:

"The same old gang of burglars!"

For that he was hauled up for trial and had to write a letter of abject apology. I suppose he was charged with lese majeste—but as I said before, it's a new thing in clubdom.

For the Pardon of Abe Ruef

I hear there is a petition in circulation asking Governor Johnson to pardon Abe Ruef. That is not at all surprising, as Ruef had friends, and there are many who regard him as another vicarious atonement. But the surprising thing about the petition, if general gossip is to be believed, are some of the names on it.

Who do you suppose is credited with heading the list? Guess your head off. You'll never make it in a thousand years.

Why, it's none other than our old friend Fremont Older.

Now, you may think the age of miracles is upon us once more, but I have this Older story from a very good source—and my informant put Older's views into these rather heroic words:

"I'm tired of man hunting and am going to take up man saving."

As Older has quite as much influence with Governor Johnson as any man in California, if he really has taken up the task of getting Ruef pardoned, he may get away with it.

Where Did He Learn How?

Is or is not this Indian Ishi a primitive man—a man of the stone age? Some of the newspaper men who have been detailed to write up the interesting savage are a bit skeptical as to his primitive and aboriginal innocence. One of them asked this pertinent or impertinent question:

"If he is a true wild man—truly primitive—where did he learn to roll cigarettes?"

Now, that's a hard question. Surely he had no "makings" in the wilds of Deer Creek. Tobacco doesn't grow there, fine-cut or no fine-cut. Cigarette papers do not flower on the Tehama county weeds. Everybody knows that the rolling of a cigarette is a matter of effort and education. But Ishi rolls cigarettes and smokes them like any grocery store lounge. And so it is that a question mark attaches to his primitiveness.

Please, Wallingford, Let 'Em Alone

On the police court witness stand the other day Van Landingham, "The Lily," told how he had heard in New York that we had a lot of financial antiques here in San Francisco, and so he came out and exploited the Pacific Surety Company.

There was "financial antiques" in the company like Wallace Everson and Al Redding. They transacted their business in a thoroughly honest, safe, sane and practical way, making an excellent return on a genuine investment. When Van Landingham and the others got through with this honest company it was so full of water it was ready to sink of its own weight. It can't hope to pay honest dividends for a long time to come.

Now, most of our Californian institutions are on an old-fashioned, honest, straightforward business basis. They pay a reasonable return on the investment. They are safe, sane and practical, and Mr. Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford won't you please let our "financial antiques" alone? We like 'em. They suit us. If you must water stock and grab off promoter's profits, please stay in the East where they are used to your rough and tumble finance.

No Wonder They Form Companies

Every few days we see in the papers a story of the formation of some maritime company to bring freight and passengers to California when the big canal is opened. Some of these companies are "bunk," but most of them are genuine. San Francisco is really going to be a great, great seaport.

And no wonder the companies are forming. Do you know that our present companies cannot begin to carry the freight offered them? The steamers leave both eastern and western wharves loaded as deep as they dare, and then they have to leave freight behind them.

Bates & Chesebrough and the Pacific Mail are carrying all the Panama railroad can take care of. The American-Hawaiian line is nearly up to the capacity of the Tehuantepec road. And the applications for space are still crowding in. I know of a San Jose packer who had contracted to ship his pack by one of the routes, but hadn't engaged his space. This week when he came to look out for it the agent said:

"I can't ship a pound of your stuff before December. Every inch of space is engaged up to then."

The packer nearly fainted. But if grumblers tell you that times are bad in California, don't you believe a word he says.

Red-Hot Canvass For Mayor

The managers of the P. H. McCarthy canvass for Mayor report great gains for that candidate during the past week. They declare that the Rolph bubble has burst and that from now on McCarthy will rapidly increase his lead. The McCarthyites say that a fillip was given to his canvass by the big Labor Day parade and the speech of Gompers at Shell Mound Park.

It is understood that Gompers will make one or two more speeches in the interest of the election of McCarthy. As to the effect of these proposed political addresses there is a divergence of opinion in the McCarthy camp. Some think they will have a tendency to and will brace up the weak-kneed and faltering in the Union Labor ranks, while others believe that a feeling of resentment will be excited by reason of an outsider coming here and interfering in a municipal election which many regard as a purely family affair of the citizens of San Francisco. The speeches, however, are to be made and their effect will have full demonstration at the primary polls on the 26th inst.

The McCarthyites, too, have great confidence in the effectiveness of their machine, or organization, and declare that its force is now being substantially felt.

The canvass of Rolph for Mayor seems to be holding up well, and if there has been any diminution in the enthusiasm for this candidate his managers do not admit it, nor is it apparent to a casual observer. This candidate is being given the most remarkable district meetings ever held in this city for any aspirant for office. Even in out-of-the-way places he is filling small neighborhood halls to overflowing, the outdoor crowd not infrequently being many times larger than the assembly within. The Rolph managers hint at things to come that will contribute to the zest of this municipal campaigning during the next two weeks.

The personal campaign headquarters of James Rolph Jr., from which, under the management of Homer Boushey, his canvass was being badly shot to pieces, is now being straightened out and a better condition obtains since the retirement of Boushey and the installing of Max Kuhl and Major Francis V. Keesling.

Politics and the Exposition

The directors of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition are encountering difficulties in preparing the program for the reception of President Taft on the occasion of his visit to San Francisco to turn the first shovelful of earth for the big fair.

Complications have arisen by reason of the persistent efforts of the Governor Johnson entourage to introduce politics into the affair and load the program in the interest and to the advantage of La Follette, their candidate for President.

They are so bitter in their antagonism to Taft that they are blind to the fact that this is a reception to the President of the United States at a great event and seek to make this reception an opportunity to advantage themselves and make conspicuous their petty partisan prejudices and spites.

Their game, although being played with a bitterness and persistency, is so shallow and transparent that it is likely to prove a losing one so soon as the light of public sentiment is brought to bear upon it.

The weapon employed by the La Follette junta in their attempts to boost La Follette and thus effect their political ends, is the $5,000,000 appropriation by the State of California to aid the exposition. It is not believed, however, that they will succeed in making the international fair a vehicle for personal and partisan politics.

Large "Piece Club" Crop

One of the effects of the new direct primary law in this city is the springing up of many "piece clubs" to confound and plunder the unfortunate candidates. There is a swarm of these organized piratical crews. One plan is to form a club, giving it a non-partisan designation and starting out by indorsing Rolph. Committees are appointed to "consider" candidates for the remainder of the ticket and the aspirants that "come through" are placed on these ballots.

Some of these clubs have a regular schedule of charges, and the candidates deprived of regular party organizations to make their campaigns and secure for them the very essential publicity with the electors, in their distress, turn to the "independent" and "non-partisan" clubs for aid and are duly held up by the shotgun messengers of these raiding organizations.

This political piracy is not confined to the small districts clubs, but some organizations claiming to be representative are engaged in the same raids, which fact candidates have ascertained to their great financial cost. These demands of "throw down the box" have ranged in figures from $25 to $10,000, and the direct primary law, in this relation, has, even at this early date and before the day of election has been reached, developed more corruption than did the old plan of convention nomination and party election in the palmy days of the political boss.

TALK FLIPPANTLY

Already there are murmured threats among some of the mercenary clubs and other organizations of trading Rolph for candidates for patronage offices on the tickets that these venal clubs have indorsed. The reason glibly assigned for this is that Rolph has a sure thing and can afford to lose some votes.

It is this attitude of the hireling push that the McCarthy campaign managers have been looking forward to, and probably will take advantage of whenever they may benefit their ticket by so doing.

Hathorn and Heney

The Good Government League, under which misnomer a number of citizens have been doing peculiar politics in this city for some years, is at it again. The germ seems to be in its blood and cannot be eradicated. The organization is popularly regarded as a political asset of James D. Phelan and Rudolph Spreckels, but I do not believe either of the owners of its equities, if it has any, is proud of the thing. The arch manipulator of this hybrid institution is Isidor Jacobs.

In a recent campaign these Goo Goos distinguished themselves by holding a postage stamp primary, identification marks being concealed under the stamps in order to entrap the unwary electors. In the present campaign the league assumed to make up a ticket with James Rolph Jr. at its head for the office of Mayor. It now appears that Rolph was used as a stalking horse for another candidate, which was disclosed by the recent placing of large posters throughout the city having at their head twin pictures of Rolph and Ralph Hathorn, a candidate for District Attorney. The scheme was further accentuated by the placing of Hathorn's picture before that of the candidate for Mayor, that of Rolph being made to follow as of secondary importance in this campaign.

It is understood that if the league succeeds in electing Hathorn the program is to turn the office of District Attorney over to Francis J. Heney, as was done by Langdon, and revive the carnival of disturbance and distrust which held sway in San Francisco for five years.

The managers of the Rolph campaign deny any participation in this plan of the Heney-Hathorn combination that the Good Government League is endeavoring to put over on the citizens of San Francisco, but resent the use of their candidate's name as a blind from behind which a political conspiracy is being attempted.

The Rolph campaign managers have endeavored to keep that candidate for Mayor in a class by himself as a non-partisan aspirant, but Hathorn insists upon affixing himself to the tail of the Rolph kite and in that manner evidently hopes to be pulled through by the latter. He has even got out a picture of himself in which he seeks to make it appear that he is Rolph's political twin, imitating the lithograph of the candidate for Mayor in size, color and design.

At meetings Hathorn addresses he reads a telegram from Heney to himself in which the special prosecutor instructs the speaker, "The graft prosecution is dead; bury it." This personal communication is received with doubts by many who regard it as a mere "stall" or cloak for the real purpose of the Hathorn-Heney canvass for District Attorney.

Rush to Get Aboard

The scramble of old-time and well-seasoned politicians to get aboard the Rolph band wagon has given increased currency to ancient saws running to straws showing which way the wind blows, and that rats desert sinking ships. During the past week a conspicuous deserter from the McCarthy column was James C. Nealon, ex-Assessor, contractor, horseman, promoter, capitalist, expert letter writer and of other diversified talents. He resigned from the presidency of a McCarthy club and no longer responds at roll call of that division.

For shrewdness and cunning Nealon is reputed a veritable Reynard and although his only vote his course will effect, his friends and associates already being in the Rolph camp, his bolting, at this time, is regarded as significant. In explaining his action "Cousin Jim" takes high ground, declaring that McCarthy failed to follow his gratuitous advice and he no longer can endorse the Mayor's acts. For a long time Nealon was a contributor of copious advice to the Mayor, but the latter seems to have failed to heed it when he removed Percy Henderson, Nealon's son-in-law, from the post of Police Commissioner by process of accepting his resignation.

Nealon is too shrewd a statesman to permit of his jumping the traces at that time, lest a personal motive might be assigned, but now he has departed his sometime association and it is not improbable that if Rolph is elected Nealon will expect him to return son-in-law Henderson to the Police Board. Neither is it improbable that Nealon, who is very fond of flowers, would decline an appointment for himself as Park Commissioner.

Sheriff Finn is Restive

There has been talk in political circles, during the past week, of Sheriff Tom Finn having become restive in the McCarthy corral and inclined to escape from that enclosure, although it is said to have been built "mule high." Some time back there was friction between Mayor McCarthy and Sheriff Finn, but this was supposed to have been lubricated when the Mayor and the Sheriff were seen not long since riding together in the former's official automobile.

But on Labor Day, it is said, new trouble was brewed. Finn, who was one of McCarthy's aids, rode a horse larger than the charger of which the Mayor was astride, and it is further alleged that the Sheriff was inclined to ride a little ahead of the Mayor over the line of march. It is further asserted that Finn showed bad taste in using the parade for the purpose of advertising his candidacy for re-election.

In advance of the column was a tall man on tall stilts, bearing a Finn banner and other designs announcing that candidate's aspiration. At the rear of the procession was a led stallion blanketed with Finn banners. It is thus seen that Finn was at both the front and the rear of the parade and what will happen to him for this presumptuous course is yet to be demonstrated. But there is something doing and Finn is a part of it.

Not Sensitive About Name

Julius Kruttschnitt, director of operation and maintenance for the Harriman railroad system, who was in the city a few days ago on matters connected with employees' affairs, admits that he has an unusually hard name to spell, so far as the general public is concerned. There have been at times some witty remarks made about his family name. He is not sensitive on that score. About the best of these comments on his name, he tells his friends, was one made by a San Francisco newspaper man when he first came to this city as general manager of the Southern Pacific from New Orleans, in 1896. The reporter in question had called for an interview. It was in the printed account of the latter that the witticism occurred. The newspaper man told how he had sought admittance into Mr. Kruttschnitt's office. He first ran up against a couple of office boys. Telling them who he was he asked to be allowed to see the high official.

"Must you see him personally?" they inquired.

"I would like to see him if it is possible," was his reply to them.

He was then ushered into the presence of an executive secretary and finally landed safely before Mr. Kruttschnitt's private secretary. The latter listening to his request told him to wait a minute. Soon he was in the Kruttschnitt presence and according to the newspaper man in his published story the next morning:

"He wasn't half as frightening or forbidding as the consonants of his name would seem to imply."

Early to Bed; Early to Rise

Daniel Meyer, the aged and wealthy banker and philanthropist who died here this week, literally obeyed for fifty years of his life the old adage about "early to bed and early to rise," etc. He made it a strict rule always to retire at 8 o'clock in the evening. At 5 every morning he arose. His office always saw him there at 7:30 a. m. Before coming downtown he had read all of the morning papers. This is why he was always remarkably well posted on current events. He liked to read both sides of any question. Some of his broker associates remarked at times that they found no leisure to read the papers.

"Then you ought to," was his invariable and laconic remark.

The late Reuben H. Lloyd, the attorney, kept practically the same hours as did Meyer and those familiar with the habits of leading men in town knew it was an impossibility to see either of these two men after 7 or 8 at night, except under very rare exceptions.

The familiar remark that a woman is as old as she looks and a man as old as he feels, was only partially believed in by the lamented banker. He always would insist that a man is as old as he thinks he is. When a man got old in years Meyer contended that then was the time to work hard to keep up his end. Proper living and proper hours would, in his opinion, enable a man getting old in years to do this very thing.

He Did Not Live in Tacoma

The Rev. Dr. — has just returned from a trip to the Pacific Northwest and St. Paul and Minneapolis and tells what he thinks is a new story, one he heard while traveling. The tale is a slam at Tacoma, but as he is not responsible for the story he does not want the good people of that flourishing place to blame him with any but kindly feelings towards them and their town. The divine says he was traveling over the Northern Pacific railroad. Another clergyman boarded the train at Tacoma. The latter's stories of a life of hardship among the Esquimaux of Alaska, where he said he had been stationed for ten years, were instructive and interesting. Standing, while the colored gentleman removed the dust from his clothing, he gazed at the sparkling lights of Minneapolis, his destination, just coming into view as the train rapidly rounded a curve and enthusiastically exclaimed:

"Gentlemen, this is the first time I have been in civilization in ten years."

The porter's brush dropped to the floor. With bulging eyes he gazed at the clerical speaker and said:

"Mah Gawd! Do you live in Tacoma, sah?"

Went Gunning for Attorney

An attorney of fair repute, who makes a good living bringing damage suits against corporations and wealthy firms and contractors for injuries to employees, had a narrow escape the other night from being shot by one of his irate clients. The fellow was disarmed in time in the lawyer's office. As no one was hurt and no arrests were made, it is not necessary to mention names. It is not intended, either, to make any comment on the professional ethics of lawyers, such as this one, who go about digging up damage suits and taking them mostly on contingent fees. In this particular case, a foreigner, a laborer, was using a hammer and chisel on a piece of concrete. A small piece of the substance struck the man in the eye eventually causing him to lose the sight of it. The employer paid the man's wages and the doctor's bill while he was disabled and then offered him other work. At this juncture the lawyer appeared on the scene. He coaxed and persuaded the man to bring a damage suit for $5000 on the ground that the tools he was working with were defective. The man was finally persuaded to do so, he to get $3000 and the lawyer $2000 in the event the case was won, the attorney paying all expenses besides. After suit was filed the lawyer waited on the employer and his attorney to see what kind of a compromise could be made. A thousand dollars was offered. This was declined and the suit pressed. Recently a jury decided the case in favor of the employer. The man, of course, lost all chances of working for that employer again. A few days ago when the man found out his lawyer had refused to accept a compromise of $1000 without consulting him he decided to go a-gunning, with the result already mentioned.

Professor Ross Still Sore

A friend of mine, with a remarkably retentive memory and who likes to talk about all manners and conditions of people, especially if they are in any way connected with California or Californians, says Dr. E. A. Ross of the University of Wisconsin but formerly of Stanford, is just itching to have another fling at Dr. David Starr Jordan of the latter institution, but that President Van Hise and the trustees of the Wisconsin seat of learning will not have any more of the airing of the Ross-Jordan quarrel as long as Ross remains with them. My informant also makes some interesting comments about Mrs. S. A. Kidder of Nevada City and also concerning Dr. A. F. Schafer of Bakersfield. Mrs. Kidder is the president of a successful railroad in this state and is the only woman railroad president in this country, or the world for that matter. It is said she is shortly to be invited to make an address before an important railroad gathering of officials in Chicago. Dr. Schafer, it will be remembered, recently reported to the various old-school medical societies in this state, especially the San Francisco County Medical Society, that he had found a serum which he believed could cure some of the serious ailments of mankind. The local society by a close vote refused a vote of confidence in his serum. My informant assures me some of the leading Eastern hospitals are experimenting thoroughly and successfully with the Bakersfield physician's discovery, all of which, if true, shows once again how a prophet can be without honor in his own country.

Famed as Stamp Collector

Henry J. Crocker has been advised, I am told, that he is to be among the first of stamp collectors outside of London and one or two other British cities who is to receive several of the new stamps about to be issued to commemorate the beginning of the reign of King George and Queen Mary. They are to bear the effigy of King George. Mr. Crocker has been a philatelic enthusiast for many years and his collection of stamps is said to be valued at $50,000. Some day, it is surmised, it will be presented as a gift either to Stanford or the University of California. In the summer of 1906 Mr. Crocker was one of the exhibitors in London at the exhibition of the Royal Philatelic Society and was one of the prize winners. It was on that occasion he met King Edward, the Prince of Wales, who is now King George, and the Earl of Crawford. The two latter have fine stamp collections and Earl Crawford has just succeeded King George as president of the Royal Philatelic Society. At the time of the London exhibition of 1906 King George as Prince of Wales was the active president of the society. It is through the kindness and attention of Earl Crawford that Crocker is to be among the first to receive copies of the new stamps.

CORNERSTONE OF HOME TO BE LAID

Impressive Ceremony to Attend Event at St. Joseph's Orphanage.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—All arrangements for the ceremonies tomorrow attending the laying of the cornerstone of the new St. Joseph's Orphanage, on the site of the burned building on N street south, between Eighteenth and Twentieth avenues, have been completed.

Mayor P. H. McCarthy will officiate. The new structure is to be a fireproof class A building, constructed entirely of California material. It was made possible chiefly by the splendid success of the ball given by the San Francisco Social Club for the benefit of the orphanage, at which the sum of $12,500 was raised. The old building was entirely destroyed by fire about a year ago. Through the cool-headed and heroic work of the nurses all the 400 children in the institution were removed from the building safely, and the only fatality resulted from a little girl running back unnoticed because she had forgotten her doll. Her charred body, with the burned dolls clasped in its arms, was discovered the following day.

FRIENDS SURPRISE CARROLL SPENCER

A pleasant surprise party was tendered to Carroll Spencer, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Spencer of Brush street, the occasion being his 15th birthday. The young host was the recipient of a number of elegant presents. During the evening a splendid supper was served. Among those present were: Elizabeth Churchill, Blanche Farmer, Helen Folkes, Bernice Barlow, Mabel Matland, Grace White, Helen Harrison, Hazel Turner, Stella White, Loraine Duffy, Dorothy G. Limbach, Raymond and Chester Abernathy, Jolly O'Brien, Rudolph Folkes, Harold McKenzie, Frank Bradbury, Floyd Shain, Lloyd Tobey, Leo Fabry, James Manning and Albert White.

SCORE KILLED IN N. Y. BY EATING TOADSTOOLS

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—With a total of 22 persons killed within a week in New York and vicinity by eating toadstools, the board of health has posted notices in the Italian settlements where most of the fatalities occurred, giving warning of the danger of eating supposed mushrooms. Grocers were enjoined to use the greatest care. This city has three persons very ill of toadstool poisoning.

PHILIPPINES TO GROW THEIR OWN FORAGE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The Philippines probably will soon be able to grow their own forage as the result of scientific experiments now in progress in the islands, and thus eliminate the expensive methods of buying food for stock in this country. Major General Bell, commanding the Philippine division, today cable-d the war department, "I have succeeded in growing a year grass hay and possibly corn can be raised in the islands at a very moderate cost. The feeding of the army horses in the Philippines has been a problem for the war department ever since the islands were acquired."

Albert of Belgium Is Due To Make Visit to America

KING ALBERT OF BELGIUM, who is planning a second visit to this country in the near future. He is to visit New York with a view to increasing Belgium's trade with this country.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—King Albert of Belgium will make a second visit to this country soon, it is said. He has been making an investigation of the merchant marine and will visit New York with a view to increasing Belgium's trade with this country. When he was in the United States before he was plain Prince Albert.

The United States has never entertained a king, with the exception of King Kalakaua, sometimes known as "King Calico." So there are no precedents to govern the reception accorded the Belgian sovereign when he comes. King Albert is a democratic young man and he will probably take no offense when he finds his hand seized by American strangers and hears himself saluted with "Hello, King," or "Howdy, Al."

King Albert married Princess Elisabeth of Bavaria. It is not known as yet whether she will accompany the king on his visit.

J. STITT WILSON WILL MAKE LINCOLN ADDRESS

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—J. Stitt Wilson, Berkeley's Socialist mayor, is a busy man and an active campaigner for the things in which he believes. He puts in six days each week at the mayor's office in Berkeley, speaks every Sunday morning in San Francisco to a large audience at the Valencia theater, and for woman suffrage or Socialism almost every night in the week somewhere between Sacramento and Los Angeles.

Tomorrow morning he will deliver an address at the Valencia theater at 11 o'clock, his subject being "Abraham Lincoln, Emancipator," to which the public is invited.

THREE ROBBERIES INTEREST POLICE

Two Are Burglaries and Third Theft of Oil From Yard.

S. Tomook of 320 Seventh street reported to the police last evening that thieves had entered the store and had taken a suit of clothes, overcoat, gloves, fountain pen and other articles valued in all at $40.

W. B. Williams of 228 Twelfth street complained to the police that twenty-five gallons of oil, valued at $20.50, had been stolen from the rear yard at his place.

Miss N. Anderson was one of a party at a local cafe last night, and afterwards notified the police that upon returning to her room at 920 Broadway she discovered that a satchel purse containing $27 in money and a gold locket set with three diamonds, had been stolen.

CADETS TO GIVE MILITARY DANCE

Company L, League of the Cross, to Be Host at Annual Hop.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—The annual military hop under the auspices of Company L, League of the Cross Cadets, will be given Thursday evening, September 14, in Building Trades temple, at Fourteenth and Guerrero streets.

All the dances given by Company L have been successes. The committee in charge is following up the success of the past committee and promises to excel all past events, both in grandeur and in the matter of attendance. A large number of cadets will participate in the grand march in uniform. The march will be led by Captain Frank J. Grimley, and the music will be supplied by the League of the Cross band.

SAN RAFAEL, Sept. 9.—Congressman Will Kent will be the principal speaker at a union Equal Suffrage meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon at Tamalpais Center, Kentfield, under the auspices of the Woman's Franchise League of Ross Valley.

GOVERNOR OF TEXAS TO RESTORE ALAMO

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 9.—That the Alamo, which stands mute but eloquent in testimony of the heroism of its defenders, is to be shorn of all additions and restored to its original state is the determination of Governor O. B. Colquitt of Texas. Data of all kinds is being collected in order that the restoration may be as accurately planned as possible. The legislature has appropriated $5000 to be used in this work and in the beautification of the grounds surrounding the structure, and Governor Colquitt states that he will personally supervise the work of restoration.

RHODES SCHOLAR DEPARTS. SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—Vincent

MUSICAL SEASON LOCALLY PROMISES TO BE EVENTFUL

Farewell Northrup Concert Very Enjoyable

Although the season for big musical events has not really opened, a number of interesting concerts have been given recently and others are to take place shortly. Probably the most important affair of the past week was the recital given on Thursday night by Mrs. Grace Davis Northrup. The concert was in the nature of a farewell, as Mrs. Northrup is leaving shortly for New York. Although her singing has always been characterized with expression and brilliancy, she seemed to sing with unusual charm and feeling the other evening. She had the inspiration of an accompanist of rare ability in the person of Uda Waldrop and, too, the audience was appreciative. Mrs. Northrup's program was well chosen and was as follows:

- (a) Lusinghe piu care.....Handel
- (b) Intorno al idolo mio.....Costi
- (c) Dove sono (Figaro).....Mozart
- (d) Die Malmacht.....Brahms
- (e) Sonnet.....Brahms
- (f) Nachgange.....Von Hellitz
- (g) Pastoral.....Bizet
- (h) L'oiseau s'envole la bas.....Masse
- (i) Bonjour Suzon.....Thome
- (j) Depuis le jour (Louise).....Carpentier
- (k) Shepherd thy demeanor vary—arranged by Lane Wilson
- (l) Hindu slumber song.....Wara
- (m) The Shepherd.....L. Forge
- (n) Sing, break into song.....Malmanson
- (o) Lullaby of the poor.....Moussorgsky
- (p) Hopak.....Moussorgsky

MISS RIEGELMAN TO SING.

Miss Mabel Riegelman, the gifted Oakland girl who is to appear in concert at the Columbia Theater on next Sunday, will leave shortly afterward for Philadelphia where she will appear as "Gretel" in "Hansel and Gretel." A brilliant career is predicted for the young Californian. She has had the advantage of studying under Louis Crepaux of San Francisco and under Frau Schroeder-Choloupka, who was Mme. Gade's teacher. Miss Riegelman has appeared in grand opera in Germany and in this country.

Her program for the coming concert will include: Aria of Zerlina, Don Juan by Mozart, several selections from Schubert and Schumann, "Le Bonheur est chose Legere" from Saint-Saens and a group of German songs that will show to advantage the singer's voice.

Among the other numbers will be several in English, and the Aria of Anna from "Lustige Weiber" by Nicolai.

STEWART ORCHESTRAL CONCERT.

The first concert of the Stewart Orchestral Club for the season will be given at the Macdonough Theater, Thursday evening, October 12. Rehearsals are now being held in preparation for this concert. Mr. Alex Stewart, the director, is planning to give several Liszt numbers, as the present year is the one hundredth anniversary of this great composer's birth. Another interesting feature of the program will be the "L'Arlésienne suite" by Bizet. This suite is considered among the best of Bizet's works and is very popular with the large symphony organizations of Europe and America.

Much interest is being manifested in the work of the club and many instrumentalists of the city are enrolling as active members.

An executive committee composed of F. S. Stratton, F. M. Smith, Wallace Alexander, George W. Scott, Owen Holt, Frank Bilger, Miss Cora Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Garthwaite and C. Z. Morit are active in working for the further success of the club.

BOHEMIAN GIRL

An elaborate revival of "The Bohemian Girl" is one of the interesting features promised for the coming musical season in Oakland. The opera will be given by the English and Opera Company, the organization which presented the popular composition so successfully during the past season in New York, and which is said to be one of the best English companies seen in the United States in many years.

The revival is given with a cast and company of more than a hundred people, so the managers claim, elaborate scenic equipment and a corps of excellent accompanying musicians. The cast engaged to render the opera will be an all-star company, including Edith Helena, Jane Abercrombie, Edna Silverling, soprano; Louise Le Baron, Zoe Fulton and Hattie Belle Ladd, contraltos; Leonid Samoiloff, Domenico Russo and Arthur Green, tenors; Louis Kreidler, Ernest Tordt and Philip Fein, baritone; William Schuster and George Shields, baritone; Carlo Nicolai, first tenor; and Emanuel Camoin as his assistant, and Carl Schroeder as stage director.

This will be the first season that the Aborn company, under the direction of Milton and Sargent Aborn, has invaded the Pacific Coast, although for a number of years its productions of grand and light operas in English in the Eastern cities has been most successful. During the latter part of last season the company came as far west as Denver, but its visit to the Pacific Coast, scheduled for the

HOW FAT AFFECTS THE LIVER
Next to the heart, there is no organ of the body more susceptible to an abnormal increase of fatty tissue, than the liver. When the liver becomes too fat, its action is impeded, allowing the fat-making foods to make more fat than is needed for normal symmetry. The liver, clogged with excess fat, becomes inactive, and, from disease, the nature of the organ undergoes a change. Constipation, headaches, biliousness and similar local disturbances of the system are not the least of the fat man or woman's troubles, for the rolls and layers of fat on all portions of the body increase, clogging other organs, paving the way to obesity. All this can be avoided, if the proper remedy is resorted to at once. Nothing ever discovered for the removal of fat is so effective as the famous Marmola Prescription. However, from the same high authority came Marmola's element of this sure, harmless Prescription and offering a more convenient means for reducing to normal weight at the rate of 10 to 18 oz. a day, without dieting, exercise or resulting wrinkles and flabbiness. Marmola's Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or the Marmola Co., 75 Monroe Ave., Detroit, Mich., at 75c the case.

near future, marks a notable innovation. As for the opera to be given, Balfe's "Bohemian Girl," while it has been sung for many years by all sorts of companies, it is said that it has never seemed so popular as during the present revival.

AT GREEK THEATER.

This afternoon at the Greek Theater there is to be a song recital by Charles E. Robinson, with Frederick Maurer, Jr. as accompanist.

Robinson has for a number of years been a pupil of Edward Xavier Rolker, who speaks enthusiastically of his work and of the splendid quality of his bass. The audience at the great amphitheater will undoubtedly be accorded a great musical treat at this afternoon's affair.

The following program will be presented: Recitative, "Thus Saith the Lord," and "But Who May Abide," from Handel's "Messiah"; "The Garden of Allah," Charles Marshall; "The Dying Warrior," Max Spicker; "Vision Fair," Massenet; and "For You Alone," Gechi.

ALBERTO TO PLAY.

The young Oaklander, David Alberto, who leaves soon for Vienna, where he will resume his studies with Leschetzky, will be the principal soloist at the entertainment to be given by the Cap

CARRIES $5 BILL IN POCKET FOR 30 YEARS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 9.—Carrying a five dollar bill for thirty years without spending it is a feat that few men can perform, yet M. P. Halliwell of Menden, Kas., who has large interests in this city and vicinity, turned the trick. Thirty years ago an aunt of Halliwell's bequeathed him $5 in a will. The bequest in the form of a five dollar bill was paid to him in 1881. This bill was folded away and kept until today when it was invested in silver mining stock. The bill had been so carefully kept that it was but little soiled, having been almost new when it came into the possession of Halliwell.

EXCELLENT PROGRAM.

To assist in providing funds for the girls' dormitory of the University of California, a concert was given in Century Hall in which the Treble Clef and the Glee Clubs assisted. Miss Mabel Clench sang several songs, which were enthusiastically received, and Esther Wisner delighted the audience with two violin selections, Max Bruch's "Adagio Cantabile" and Kreisler's "Viennese Caprice."

Mrs. O. K. McMurray sang Saint-Saens' "Bonheur est chose Legere" and Densha's "May Morning." —SOUZA COMING.

It has been announced by William Dallen Arms, chairman of the musical and dramatic committee at the University of California, that John Philip Sousa's band will give concerts, evening and afternoon, October 5, at the Greek Theater.

EURYDICE CLUB.

The members of Eurydice Club met on Tuesday for their first rehearsal for this season. Under the able direction of Edwin Dunbar Crandall, the organization will, without doubt, have a most successful year. A number of new voices have been added to strengthen the work and the associate membership list is rapidly growing.

FIGHT FOR HOME INDUSTRY WAGED

German Products for Germany Is the Slogan for Fatherland.

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—The systematic efforts of German traders to induce the German public to abstain from using imported goods are shown by a pamphlet recently published and circulated throughout the empire.

It is a catalogue of German commodities and contains the following precepts: In all expenses keep in mind the interests of your own compatriots. Never forget when you buy a foreign article your country is the poorer. Your money should profit no one but Germany.

Never profane German factories by using foreign machinery. Never allow foreign eatables to be served at your table.

If you do not like German malt coffee drink coffee from German colonies.

Use only German clothes for your dress and German hats for your head. Let not foreign flattery distract you from these precepts, and be firmly convinced, whatever others say, that German products are the only ones worthy of citizens of the German fatherland.

IMPROVEMENTS BEGIN ON STREET RAILWAY

FRESNO, Sept. 9.—One hundred and fifty tons of "T" rails have recently arrived here for use in construction work by the street railroad of Fresno. The "T" rails, it is said, are not needed by the company for any work on the system as it now stands, and buying of this material is taken as evidence that the proposed extension of the line out Belmont to Reedling Park and thence to Mountain View Cemetery, is an assured thing. Extension work at Bakersfield is now waiting only for the arrival of all the material. Ties and spikes are on the ground, but some of the rails have yet to come. This rebuilding work in Bakersfield is being done with a further extension of the size of the system in mind, but one will say as yet that this extension will be made anywhere in the near future.

Diamond Vista

That heading up there tells the story!

Not all of it, but sufficient to give you a general idea of where that new tract is located. Now we'll have a little chat and tell you some more that you may have no difficulty in finding it or fixing the place in your mind.

This "Dimond Vista" of ours is just what the name implies—a vista of beautiful Dimond Canyon that winds up through the valley at the head of Fruitvale avenue and beyond "The Heights," where Joaquin Miller holds his haunts and writes his verse.

And it's more than that.

It's a vista of mile upon mile of rolling hills and the lowland beyond, embracing a birdseye of the Golden Gate and the Santa Cruz mountains. Oakland itself is at your feet, building out day by day to meet these twenty-six lots and the homes all about them. It can't be beaten when it comes to "view" and the tract is far enough in to be entirely out of the fog belt.

of those Fourth Avenue hills, take off your hat and whoop with the joy of living, for the air has zip in it, there's freedom and "breathing space" and there's that peculiar quiet of the hills.

Ah, man; you don't need to look longer nor further than "Dimond Vista"—it's all there, all the advantages you've ever hoped to find in YOUR particular homelife.

And the oaks—more than one hundred years old, all of them—studding the different lots and inviting you to the shade of their boughs.

Coming down from the artistic element let us consider the more prosaic matter of other advantages, such as the street work and improvements.

Stand out there with us on the crest 1218 Broadway, Oakland

The streets will follow the contour of the hills, with a gentle dip here and there to lend individuality, the work on them will be high-class, in keeping with the neighborhood and the curbs and gutters will be high and of concrete. Such matters as water, gas and electricity will all be given attention and when the work is finished and we have done with it all that could be desired, then you will feel that our prices of $25 and $35 a foot could well have been higher and you will wonder how we did it.

The Fourth Avenue cars will take you within two blocks of the property which is but a few hundred feet from Dimond Canyon. Our salesmen will be glad to assist you in finding the right lot, and they will explain our easy-payment plan which has helped thousands to become property owners.

We have two or three roomy, big automobiles here at the office that will take you out in a jiffy. If you cannot come, telephone us and the car will call for you.

The offices of the sales department will be open all day. Now do your share.

WHEAT YIELD SHORT IN WASHINGTON STATE

TACOMA, Sept. 9.—The large wheat yield anticipated by farmers and millers in Washington is not materializing, as well as expected, according to H. C. Shivers, chief deputy state grain inspector. He says that the crop will not be as heavy as everyone at first believed. The reason given by Mr. Shivers for the over estimate is the failure of the heads of grain to fill out entirely.

Dear Sir:—Referring to an article appearing in the daily press of a Rolph bottled meeting, held at Eighteenth and Collingwood streets on September 7, 1911, that I confiscated a lot of eggs thrown at people entering the hall, I will state that I never made such a statement and did not confiscate any eggs, or see any eggs thrown, only received information from officers and citizens that eggs were thrown.

NEGOTIATE FOR 14,000,000 FEET OF LUMBER

LIBBY, Mont., Sept. 9.—Brooks Bros. are negotiating with the Forestry Service for 14,000,000 feet of timber on Pipe Creek, which they expect to cut and dispose of to the Bonners Ferry Lumber company, according to Forest Supervisor Skeels. COMMITTEE TO URGE CONSERVATION SCHEME

STOCKTON, Sept. 9.—A committee consisting of M. D. Eaton, George W. Grupe, G. W. Ashley, G. B. Ladd and Frank Israel, has been appointed to interview the property owners east of Stockton and secure their signatures to petitions urging the Supervisors to proceed with the Calaveras conservation proposition. It is proposed to build a concrete dam across the Calaveras Canyon at a point six miles above Jenny Lind. This will form a natural reservoir, which will impound 80,000 acre-feet of water. This water can be used for irrigation purposes in the summer. It is calculated that the dam will prevent the flooding of the eastern part of the county. The dam will be 700 feet long and 100 feet high and will cost about $600,000.

What Oakland Most Lacks.

"You Oaklanders do not appreciate your opportunities, at least you do not improve them. I do not desire to draw discourteous comparisons, but we do things much better in Los Angeles—we improve every opportunity presented to us and every resource we possess, and we take pains to let the world know what we have got and what we are doing. That is why Los Angeles is going ahead so fast."

So spoke a citizen of Los Angeles who has been making a short stay in Oakland. He confesses that he has found this town to his liking, but expresses surprise that public spirit is not better organized in this city, more aggressive and more bent on utilizing the numerous advantages offered here.

"The trouble with you people," he added, "is that you don't realize what you have got, or lack initiative, or something, I don't know what. You have the finest site for a city in California. I should say it is one of the finest in the world. The country around is beautiful and fruitful, the climate salubrious and agreeable and the facilities for commerce and manufacturing unsurpassed. I know of no city that can be so easily and cheaply adorned and beautified. Your residence districts overlook one of the finest bays on earth. Your magnificent harbor basin is something Los Angeles would give many millions to possess and your bay front can be made an inestimable asset. I see you have begun to improve it, but you have started late and are not improving fast enough. You have not learned how to advertise properly. You are not good boosters and your schemes are too modest and not comprehensive enough. You have not learned the art of attracting attention and exciting interest. You lack—pardon me for saying it—boldness and vigor. You do not carry things to an ultimate conclusion as you should."

"For example, there is Lake Merritt. That should be a jewel in your crown. But is it? If that sheet of water were in Los Angeles all the world would know about it. Every foot of its shores would be beautified and highly improved—planted to trees, grass, flowers and shrubbery, and every stranger who comes to town would be told of it and taken to see it. The picture it would present would make every visitor remember the town with pleasure and admiration. You are improving the shores of the lake, but the work is being done too leisurely. The beauty that can be developed is now only illustrated by a disagreeable contrast. The improved sections of the shore make the unimproved sections appear all the more unsightly, excite regret that more has not been done, and surprise that a start was not made sooner."

"The country around Oakland is not half developed. You have fairly good roads, but they are not good enough for your purpose, and there are not enough of them. You wish to attract the Eastern tourist. Doing things by halves will not attract them. You should put your town and the country surrounding it in such order that the person who once sees it will want to come again, and will carry away a picture of it in his remembrance that will give him something to talk about when he is far away. You are building one of the finest hotels in the State. The way to make that hotel a paying proposition and a famous advertisement for Oakland is to improve your city up to the standard of taste and culture that it symbolizes. If you do that Oakland will be one of the show towns of America, a place of rare charm and beauty. Your plans of development are good, but you need the Los Angeles spirit to make them a success."

What do the people of Oakland think of this presentation of their case? This gentleman was not talking for publication, but expressing his views and the results of his observations here to a few friends. He was struck by the possibilities this city presents, and frankly confessed that Oakland held a charm for him that even his own city did not possess. He admitted that our leisurely pace had an attraction for him, but added that it was not business. "Do your work now and take your leisure afterward," he remarked. "When you have improved your park lands and water front, grid-ironed the contiguous regions with fine, modern highways, paved your streets and developed your commercial facilities, you can rest and contemplate with pride your achievements. But the city will have gotten a start that nothing can stop."

Every intelligent person in this community knows that this Los Angeles man has accurately diagnosed the situation in Oakland. He is a clear-eyed, but a kindly critic, and in pointing out our derelictions and shortcomings he has not failed to do justice to our natural advantages. We have not felt the urging of stern necessity, and Nature has been so lavish in her gifts that we have not felt the need of improving them. We do things by halves. We form plans, but we do not carry them out. Our improvements are never completed. We make a good start and then let things drag along till they become disagreeable reminders of duties neglected and half performed.

Yet if our citizens had shown the same grit, energy and courage that the little city of Galveston has displayed since that city was practically destroyed eleven years ago, Oakland would today be one of the beauty spots of the world, prosperous and commercially eminent. The spirit that has made Los Angeles a marvel is all that we lack, and it is precisely what we should not lack, since we have the intelligence, the wealth and the incentive to supply it.

Henry Clay Beattie's lawyer contended that his client ought not to be convicted because the evidence against him is circumstantial. The answer to that is that when a man plans a deliberate murder he is careful not to take a witness along to tell about it. Circumstances are frequently at fault, but if circumstantial evidence was never accepted as conclusive, the most heinous of crimes would go unpunished. The evidence against Theodore Durrant was purely circumstantial, but it was none the less conclusive. He laid his plans so carefully that there was no eye witness to either of the foul murders he committed, but even the pains he took to hide his tracks forged links in the chain of circumstances pointing to his guilt. The murder of Mrs. Beattie was brought more directly home to her husband. He was with his wife when she was slain, the motive for the murder was clearly established and the weapon with which the murder was done was traced directly to the defendant.

A justice of the peace has decided that a minister of the gospel cannot lie. We are compelled to admit, however, that some of them can come very near doing it. But a miss is as good as a mile.

Senator Heyburn of Idaho says he will support the Republican nominee for President whether he be standpat or insurgent. That is what every Republican should do, what every true Republican will do. Every man who believes in the principles of the Republican party should stand by the party flag and the party organization. It is folly to desert to the enemy when you cannot have your own way. If the party organization fall into bad or incompetent hands, stay with it and try to redeem it. Nothing is gained by abandoning it to take up with what you believe to be wrong. Believing that the party is necessary to the welfare of the nation, try to save the party and put its guidance in safe hands.

"WHO BELIEVES IN GHOSTS?"

The Starvation Issue in England.

When they are made acquainted with the facts, most people will agree with David Lloyd-George that the railway employees of Great Britain, particularly the unskilled laborers, have been treated with an inhuman lack of consideration.

Mr. George points out that the scale of wages on English railroads has remained practically unchanged for over ten years. During the same period the cost of living has increased fully 50 per cent. Clothes cost more and the general conditions of life are harder for the laboring man. No account has been taken of his wants and needs. The advance in the price of food and clothes has had the effect of reducing his wages and lowering the standard of comfort for his wife and children. What he formerly bought for a shilling costs him eighteen pence, while the hours of labor remain the same.

The effect of a standing wage scale and a steady rise in the price of food and clothing was to reduce a poorly paid class to a condition approaching starvation. It was unfair and unjust, and it was inhumane since it caused untold suffering and hardship. The wages paid to certain classes of laborers were in fact starvation wages. Men who received twenty shillings a week for the hardest kind of work were compelled to pay from two to three shillings a week for the rent of a miserable hut or a still more miserable tenement. With what was left the laborer had to feed and clothe himself and family.

He could not do it decently, of course. Each year he had fewer comforts, less food and poorer clothes. The longer it went on the worse his condition became. The future held no hope, the present no pleasure.

No wonder the railway workers became desperate. No wonder they demanded more pay and were willing to fight with the police, the soldiers or anybody else who stood in their way. A famished man becomes a wild beast. Hunger has no respect for laws or persons, for when the starvation point is reached the first and supreme law of nature asserts itself.

What do men being slowly starved care about the rights of property or the stability of political institutions? Why should they care? Why should they assist in preserving the system that is reducing them to a level with the beasts of the field?

Lloyd-George preserved order and protected life and property with courage and decision, and then he told the railway managers the truth about their conduct and their policy. He said they had treated their men inhumanly and thereby had provoked the uprising of labor. He plainly told them that they must pay their men better and treat them better, else society would not hold together.

He was right. There is an equation in human affairs that is bound to be reached in some way. In this day and age no government can survive that permits its toiling masses to be starved and degraded. That kind of a government existed a long time in France, but finally the people rose and broke it to pieces. The system has never been put together again.

The railway and dock strikers in England failed in one sense, but they succeeded in a broader sense. They brought to light hoary wrongs and hideous conditions, and the work of amelioration has commenced. A readjustment is in progress that will improve the condition of the laboring class and provide a better scale of wages for those who are compelled to eat their bread in the sweat of their faces. It is well. Wrong will be long endured, but when starvation is coupled with it human nature revolts and when human endurance revolts in desperation it sometimes inflicts awful retribution on the state or class responsible for the wrong and the hunger. It is fortunate for England that she had a man in her government firm enough to quell the outbreak and the courage to compel a redress of the most grievous ills complained of.

It is rather difficult to keep up with the politics of Senator Works. He told a Toledo paper about the time Congress adjourned that he was opposed to Taft and favored the nomination of La Follette. Since his return to California he is quoted as favoring the renomination of Taft. It does not greatly matter whom he favors, but it would be interesting to know why he changed his mind so quickly. Perhaps the feel of the public pulse out here warned him that the Republicans of California will not stand for any La Follette foolishness. If they want any tariff smashing done they will let the Democrats do it. But they are not in favor of tariff smashing. They do not want to deprive the leading industries of this State of the tariff protection they now enjoy.

The Portland Telegram suggests that "Sunny Jim" Sherman designs running for Governor to escape the "continued obscurity of the Vice-Presidency." Mr. Sherman has been anything but obscure since he became Vice-President. He has had plenty of publicity of all sorts, sizes and complexions. We should think he would prefer obscurity for a change.

DOG SENSE

There is a dog in Atlantic City deserving a Carnegie medal. Being a dog he won't get it; but he ought to have all the good bestsakes he wants from now until he dies. Incidentally, this canine hero who saved his master from drowning may not have a soul—but he kept his head when his master lost his. Which cannot be said of all heroes.

The man started to swim around the end of one of the piers. The dog followed him. When his master was in deep water, he was attacked by cramps. The dog realized he was in trouble, and gripping the man's jersey in his teeth, as a matter of course, started for shore with him. Then the master lost his head. He "thought the dog was trying to drown him," he said. Life guards, attracted by the cries, rowed out to the struggling pair. One of them tried to assist the dog in rescuing his master, and the animal, naturally enough, snapped at him. Thereupon the life guard promptly batted the dog over the head with an oar.

Both were saved. The dog refused to leave the man who didn't keep his head, who doubted the faithful animal's love, who thought he was "trying to drown" the human being, for whom willingly he would have died.

Sometimes, when the Almighty gives a human a rather gloomy brain, he prescribes the eternal reward by awarding the dog with a splendid quality of common sense.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

COST OF SMOKE

About 6 per cent of the coal that fills the firebox of the locomotive actually drives it across the country. The rest is wasted. Not more than 10 per cent of the fuel value of their coal is consumed in the furnaces of manufacturing plants.

The rain of cinders from the stack of the locomotive, the pillar of black smoke from the factory chimney, account conspicuously for a part of the waste. But these are minor losses. The chief difficulty lies in the failure to use the combustible gases that arise from the burning coal. They are either allowed to escape unlighted or are discharged without having done any service beneath the boilers, to expend their heat on the air. It is estimated that the "smoke nuisance" costs the country, through waste of fuel, injury to merchandise and unnecessary labor caused by clouds of soot, over $800,000,000 a year. There is, moreover, an undeniable menace to the public health through the polluted air of great manufacturing towns.

Much of this tremendous economic waste is at present unavoidable, because we have not learned how to utilize the energy of coal directly. Steam, and often electricity as well, must be generated before the power can be applied. But there are improvements in furnace construction which reduce the losses of imperfect combustion, and progressive manufacturers are saving money for themselves and benefiting their communities by adopting them.—Geological Survey.

A NEW RACE?

That there is something left for the explorers to do, after all, appears from the letter of Vilhjorn Stefansson, the leader of the American Museum's scientific expedition to British Columbia. In a region supposed to be uninhabited, the expedition has discovered a strange new people, Eskimo in speech and habits, but Scandinavians in appearance, who never had seen a white man or an Indian, though they had heard of both.

Explorer Stefansson believes his discovery will result in the solution of one of two problems—what became of some of Franklin's men or what became of the 8000 Scandinavians who disappeared from Greenland in the fifteenth century. Here is romance indeed; the anthropologists, the historians and the fiction writers alike will be thrilled by the news. What possibilities lie in such a discovery! The world is larger than it has seemed for many years, when such a tale came out of the frozen North.—Chicago Record-Herald.

TUNNELING ENGLISH CHANNEL

The project for constructing a tunnel under the English channel, which has been agitated so many times before, is being once more revived, with a better prospect that something will come of it than at any other time in the past. Most people forget that the building of such a tunnel was at one time actually commenced, but the military authorities of Great Britain became alarmed at the possibility of invasion by the tunnel route and compelled the abandonment of the enterprise.

With England and France more friendly than they have been in centuries, and with many of the practical difficulties solved by the experiences of recent years in constructing underwater tunnels, there would seem to be less cause for opposing the project than ever before. It is now evident that a tunnel could never be made the medium for the movement of large forces from one country to the other, as the power in possession of either end could promptly cut off its own end of the underwater passage by simply using a few sticks of dynamite, which would effectively destroy the entrance to the tunnel and drown all the people that might be undertaking a surreptitious crossing in war time. The present agitation for a tunnel is purely on commercial considerations. The travel and traffic between other cities in England and France, are enormous, but it is recognized that both would be very much greater if the stormy sea passage across the English channel could be avoided. Short as the voyage across the channel is, it is proverbially uncomfortable for landmen, and without doubt many travelers are deterred from making the trip by fear of the inevitable mal-de-mer. All freight must also be transported in shipping across the channel, which is both a slower, as well as more costly, process than would be through shipment via the proposed tunnel. While such an enterprise would entail a large investment and would present some engineering difficulties, it is not a more difficult undertaking than the tunneling under the Alps or the extensive tunneling under the rivers surrounding New York. Since the military opposition to the tunnel has been abated it is certain to be built sooner or later as to commercial necessity, as there is no getting over the fact that the present system is primitive and restrictive to traffic.—New Orleans Picayune.

WORLD'S INTERDEPENDENCE

The mutual interdependence of the world never has been more aptly illustrated than in an article published during the time when war clouds seemed hovering over Germany, France and England.

It was pointed out that the effects of such war would be felt hardly less disastrously in the United States than in England. Figures were adduced to prove that such a conflict would have as immediate and serious effect upon the finances and manufactures of the New World as upon those of the old.

One of the common assumptions in the event of war involving other powers is that it develops prosperity for neutral nations, for the reason that productive workers are taken from fields of activity in the contending powers and other countries are called upon to make up the deficiency.

It was proved, however, that during the first year of the Boer War American export trade declined $48,000,000 as compared with the preceding year and that the decrease amounted to $67,000,000 on the same basis of comparison the second year.

It was explained that England was forced to call upon her numbers of ocean vessels as freighters and troop transports. For instance, it is stated that a tonnage of approximately 1,262,000 was withdrawn from lines operating between Boston and Great Britain.

Freight rates rose immediately, thus adding to America's burden. Even so, it was impossible to ship abroad the usual amount with the available craft fewer in number. Into the home market was thrown a greater volume and a cut in prices followed.

If such were conditions when England engaged a country without a navy and much smaller in every way, it is not difficult to understand how much more serious would be the situation were that nation, or any other of the great powers, to become involved in a war with one of its powerful fellows.—Seattle Times.

--- THAT MOTHER USED TO MAKE

Progress has laid its iconoclastic hand upon the bakers. The men of dough met recently in convention in the city of Chicago, and prompted by an insatiable desire for more "dough," they resolved that housewives of this country ought to be taught that it is a waste of time and money and a menace to the public health to persist in the home manufacture of bread. "The bread that mother used to make," said the bakers, "is not the nutritious provender which tradition would have us believe. On the contrary, it is sooden, unsatisfactory, indigestible, and many other things that look condemnatory in print. We are to eschew it if we would be wise, and turn the bread making industry over entirely to the professional dough-mixers."

In the opinion of the common run of men the bakers are up against a hard game. In the bread baking line "mother" still holds the trump hand, just as she has in many another line since the time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. Whether it be salt-rising, potato-yeast or hot biscuit, that fairly melted on the tongue, the baker's in point of palatable excellence stands no more show with the handiwork of "mother" than an artificial flower does with that which Nature creates.

The baker is a creature of convenience, a product of progress to serve the needs of those who have had the misfortune to get out of touch with "mother." He has become one of the necessities, and however much we deprecate the contrast between what he gives us and what we used to receive at the hands of "mother" he is a city requirement. He ought to be wise enough to let it go at that, and not bring himself into disrepute by meddling with the sacred traditions of the race.—Portland Telegram.

BREAKING RECORDS AND NECKS

Flying in aeroplanes, according to Claude Grahame-White, the English aviator, is safe enough if the aerial "stunt" the spectacular, sensational, feat, is left out of the count. To that he attributes most of the accidents. "The man who were your greatest aviators when I was here last are dead," he says. "War! Because they attempted foolhardy feats. I have been doing just plain flying, and am hence to fly some more."

At Chicago, on Friday, a record for altitude was smashed, amid the plaudits of a great crowd. The man who made the new record is said to have exclaimed just before he climbed into his machine:

"I'll break a record or tear up this machine." Yet only a couple of days before two of the airmen at that Chicago meet had plunged with their machines to get out of touch with "mother," the conquer of the air, the cause hardly seems great enough for exhibition of the do-or-die spirit without a liberal dilution of common sense. We question whether the art of air navigation or the construction of aeroplanes or the advancement of the human race is served by the smashing of records at the imminent risk of the smashing of necks.—N. Y. Tribune.

OUT OF THE GAME

Baseball has deeper tragedies than a strike-out with three men on bases. One of these is seen in the unconditional retirement of "Cy" Young, the famous Cleveland pitcher, the only slabanman with 500 victories to his credit. For twenty-two years he has been a major league figure. Now he is sent forth, an "old" man, as the game has it, although he is but 35.

The going of Young comes home to other clubs which have men who may soon be in like case. Here it recalls the recent fears that Mathewson had struck the down grade, as has been the case with this resourceful pitcher scattered last week when he whitewashed Philadelphia and banished this when he held Cincinnati to one run and at the same time made two records in the baseball—twenty-two consecutive victories over the Reds; a game won with only ninety-two balls pitched.

At about 35, when men are just establishing themselves in other callings, the clock strikes for the successful ball player. Few have the consolation of Brown, whom Chicago applauded as victor even when he failed to hold the Athletics. So imperious is the efficiency test, so short the memory of the crowd, that, in place of the huzzas of yesterday, hisses may greet the veteran and he knows the bitterness of the gladiator who saw the down-turned thumbs.—N. Y. World.

HUMOR PAYS BEST

Humor pays better than fiction. As a commercial proposition the man or woman whose fingers itch to write should develop all the ability they possess to awaken laughter. Unlike Dr. Holmes, they should ever dare "to be as funny as they can." The public will pay dollars for tickles, but only cents for thrills. Mark Twain dying left over half a million in personality to his daughter and he might have left a million or two had he not trusted in a business management which made him a bankrupt burdened with debt about twenty years before his death. On the other hand, F. Marion Crawford, whose novels were best sellers, left but $48,000, according to an inventory filed Tuesday in New York.

From 1882 to 1909 Crawford wrote 42 novels. "Mr. Isaacs," the first of his list, was the greatest success prior to the publication of Du Maurier's "Trilby." In the following years he achieved at least eight notable successes and every book he published was welcomed by Crawford public. His work added notably to the profits of publishers and book sellers, yet his accumulation of money was trifling in comparison with that of the humorist.

Crawford had the gift of story telling. His plane was not high; he aimed only to hold the interest of his reader till the story was told. He seldom preached and never attacked. His pen was ideally guided for popularity, yet the meager return in dollars. "The comedian was showered with gold while the facile teller of good tales gathered his little dola.

20 YEARS AGO IN OAKLAND

A few years ago a two-story business block was considered quite an improvement in Oakland. Now a three-story building is considered "rather small potatoes." This is another indication of the city's growth.

The concert at the Piedmont baths last night drew a large crowd.

Tub races created life, while the trapeze and slide-for-life performances were very interesting.

There are two habits which every Oak-lander should cultivate with assiduity. The habit of trading at home and the habit of saying a good word for the city whenever opportunity offers.

The sea of matrimony seems to offer great inducements for the fool who rooks the boat.

GERMAN JINGOES WOULD OPEN WAR

Editor Declares Time Has Come to Punish French and English.

BY COUNT VON ELPHBERG.

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—How military circles in Germany really feel is best expressed in an inflammatory article in the Deutsche Armee Blatt, the organ of the society of inactive officers of the German army.

"The question may be asked: Is the present time favorable for war against the United States and England? That question can be answered absolutely in the affirmative. The popularity of such a contest even such moderate press organs as the Koelnische Zeitung and the National Liberal have admitted by stating that the threats of leading English ministers have greatly excited the national German feeling. For the sake of Morocco, perhaps the Kaiser would not draw his sword, but surely to punish certain French and English impudence. We have great confidence in our navy and know that it would relish the opportunity to throw itself on the English naval colossus. For German domestic conditions war would be well as we are becoming effeminate and war frees the good and noble qualities in people."

CLASS PREJUDICE.

The fearful class prejudice which still exists among German military people is demonstrated by the tragic suicide of a lieutenant in Wurzburg, who was much in love with a salesgirl in Hamburg. His relatives and fellow officers objected to the match and he was placed under the alternative of either quitting the military service or giving up the girl.

On this the pair decided to commit suicide. They rented a boat on the Elbe and the lieutenant tied himself to the young woman, the shot her and himself. A letter written by the young woman was found in which she said:

"As we cannot be united in life we will be joined in death."

But even this sad consolation was not granted for the relatives of the officer refused to have the lovers buried in one grave as the young people wished.

BRITISH CUPID IS IDLE YOUTH

The Marriage Rate Falls Off
Wales.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Fewer people than ever, in proportion to the population, are getting married in England and Wales. In his quarterly return, issued yesterday, the registrar-general states that in the first three months of this year, the marriages of 89,566 persons were registered, being equal to an annual rate of 10.0 persons married per 1000 of the estimated population, against an average rate of 11.4 per 1000 in the first quarter of the ten years, 1901-10. Of counties with populations exceeding 100,000 Buckinghamshire, with 7.2, had the lowest rate, and Northumberland, with 11.3, the highest. London's rate was 11.5.

The births dealt with in the report are those for the second quarter of the year. They numbered 226,777, and were in the proportion of 25.0 annually per 1000 of the population.

This is 3.0 per 1000 below the mean rate in the ten preceding second quarters. The natural increase of population last quarter by excess of births over deaths was 105,793, against 122,782, 111,487 and 119,161 in the second quarters of 1905, 1909 and 1910, respectively.

While the natural increase of population declines, emigration grows. In the three months ending June 30, of the past year, said to be of British nationality, the departures exceeded the arrivals by 75,354 persons, an increase of 6.4 per cent, as compared with the corresponding period of the previous year.

"LAZY LIGHTNING" HAS PASSED TO REWARD

LONDON, Sept. 9.—"Lazy Lightning" is dead. The donkey known to Islington for the past nine years as "Trotter's Lark" succumbed to an internal complaint, leaving his master, Mr. William Wilt, a cool dealer, disconsolate for his loss.

"Lazy Lightning's" career has been one of great fame. Bought nine years ago, this faithful donkey had, from the moment when he came under Mr. Wilt's roof, brought good luck to his proud owner. Ever since the momentous purchase was completed Wilt's fortunes have risen and the bereaved man looked upon him as the prince of maseats. He has won numerous prizes at shows and race meetings, including first and seconds at the Olympia Horse Show.

INSPECTORS DESTROY THOUSANDS OF FOWLS

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—In the last few days city food inspectors have destroyed more than 3,000 pounds of chickens which have been smothered in coops while being shipped here from Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin points. Health Commissioner Young says large numbers of chickens smothered in transit have been sold to cheap restaurant keepers this summer.

SAGE TEA DARKENS THE HAIR AND RE- STORES COLOR TO FADED AND GRAY HAIR

There is nothing new about the idea of using sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our great-grandmothers kept their locks soft, dark and glossy by using a "sage tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance they made a brew of sage leaves and applied it to their hair, with wonderful results.

Nowadays we don't have to resort to old-time, tiresome methods of gathering the herbs and making the tea. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves, and all we have to do is to call for the ready-made product, Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy,

APPLE INDUSTRY IS GROWING BIG

Northwest Expects to Furnish 100,000 Carloads in Few Years.

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 9.—"It is no idle statement to say that in a comparatively few years there will be 100,000 carloads of apples marketed from Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana alone."

This statement is contained in a letter received by the management of the National Apple Show, Inc., headed by F. Cartier Van Dassel, from Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, forwarding a subscription of $1000 for the railroad and $250 as a personal contribution to the fourth annual competitive exposition and Enakopa street carnival, November 22 to 30.

"The National Apple Show, by bringing together the best minds in the business, is a potent factor in helping to place the apple industry upon a sound, scientific and commercial basis," Elliott says. "The day of the commercial orchard has come, not alone in the West, but all over the country, and men are giving the same careful and thorough attention to the production of apples that is devoted to the making of steel or to any other business that is conducted with skill and intelligence."

"The study and attention and care given to the production of fruit by the grower, must, as the production increases be supplemented by efforts for publicity, thus giving the building the shape of an 'L.' The building will rise to a height of six stories and is to be of light colored brick limestone with roof of red tile. There has been an appropriation of $500,000 so far, to build the structure. The building will rise high above the surrounding structures and be visible far down the harbor."

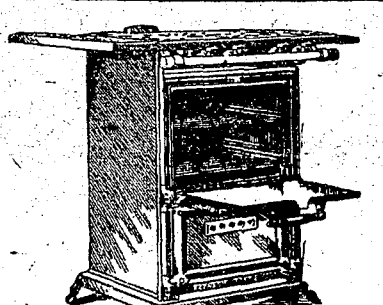

"Therefore, it will be necessary for the apple grower to do what the grain grower has done. This means that as the production increases the grower must have facilities at his home orchard, at the nearby station and throughout the country to properly care for his crop to receive the best market prices."

AMERICAN "GATEWAY" WILL BE ENLARGED

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Ever since Revolutionary times there has been a large office of some kind at the foot of Manhattan Island, through which immigrants pass as they step for the first time on American soil. The present structure has long been inadequate for the half million or more foreigners who reach New York annually. A new gateway to America has been decided upon worthy of its important position. The new structure will be 220 feet in length and a wing will run seaward for 186 feet, thus giving the building the shape of an "L." The building will rise to a height of six stories and is to be of light colored brick limestone with roof of red tile. There has been an appropriation of $500,000 so far, to build the structure. The building will rise high above the surrounding structures and be visible far down the harbor."

COAL PRODUCTION BREAKS RECORD

The Geological Survey Bulletin
Shows Half Billion Tons.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—For the first time in the history of the United States the coal mines of the country in 1910 were credited with an output exceeding half a billion short tons. The combined production of anthracite, bituminous coal and lignite having amounted to 501,576,395 short tons, with a spot value of $629,529,745. This great output according to Edward W. Parker, coal statistician of the United States geological survey, was attained in spite of the fact that most of the mines in Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma were closed for nearly six months by one of the most bitterly contested strikes in the history of the industry. The heaviest tonnage mined in any year previous to 1910 was in 1907, when a total of 480,353,424 short tons were produced.

"Compared with 1909," said Mr. Parker, "the output in 1910 showed an increase of 40,762,279 short tons or 8.85 per cent. Prices generally were a little higher in 1910 than in 1909; the average for Pennsylvania anthracite being $2.12 per long ton, against $2.06 in 1909, and the average for bituminous coal was $1.12 per short ton in 1910, against $1.07 in 1909. The total value increased 13.50 per cent.

INCREASE GENERAL.

"Except for the states affected by the strike order, the increase in production was general among the more important coal producing states. The output of anthracite in Pennsylvania increased from 81,070,359 short tons, valued at $149,131,587, to 84,485,238 short tons, valued at $160,275,302, a gain of 4.21 per cent in quantity and of 15.73 per cent in value. The bituminous production, including semi-anthracite, semi-bituminous, cannel, splint and sub-bituminous coals, lignite, and a small quantity of anthracite from Colorado and New Mexico, increased from 379,744,257 short tons, valued at $406,486,777, to 417,091,659 short tons, valued at $469,254,443, a gain of 9.83 per cent in quantity and of 15.73 per cent in value.

"The total increase of 40,762,279 short tons in 1910 over 1909 was equal to 27 per cent more than the entire output of

THE SMARTEST FASHIONS OF WELL-DRESSED FOLK

THE FIRST DAY OF SCHOOL

MADGE DEAR:

School opened this morning. Of course, I had to take my precious Babbie and see that she was properly introduced to her new teacher and, incidentally, see what type of woman it was that is to have the care of my lamb during one of the most critical years of her school life.

I think mothers cannot be too particular in the training of their tots. It is very important that a 7-year-old should have a kind, gentle teacher for her first year at school.

Miss May is, I think, an ideal girl, and I'm sure will prove to be an excellent teacher.

She is an attractive girl and had on such a pretty frock. It was a fine blue linen with a darker stripe made over a one-piece model. The upper bodice was of plain dark-blue linen, over which was lapped the lower part of the bodice in a shieldlike piece in front.

Under the arms was a row of dark linen-covered buttons, and the same trimming was used on the broad pointed cuffs of striped linen which finished the three-quarter-length sleeves.

Over the shoulders, extending to the knees in front and almost to the skirt hem in the back, were two straps four inches wide, cut of the striped material. These were finished with bias ends showing coarse linen fringe and three large buttons. The bodice and plainly cut skirt joined under a broad girde of plain blue linen.

My precious child wore a natural-colored linen frock, with a round yoke of white embroidery and cuffs of the same. The bodice was slashed up from the waist line for three inches, opening over an embroidered underbodice. The skirt is perfectly plain.

Jane's little Jane wore a white frock and over it a long coat of scarlet serge made with a deep box-pleat in the front and back and deep stitched cuffs, trimmed with ball buttons of brass. The sailor collar had a pretty white lace collar over it. Her straw hat was trimmed with a soft crown band of black satin tied with a long looped bow on the side.

Little Mildred Jones wore a "coed" suit of white linen, having a dark-blue linen sailor collar braided with white. Around her neck was a rich red tie and her dark locks were held in place with a red hair ribbon, giving the little maid quite a patriotic aspect.

Another little girl wore a plain dark-blue serge frock, brightened with a scarlet hairbow, and another had on a sensible school dress of natural pongee made with a deep double box-pleat both back and front. A deep sailor collar of black satin finished with a sailor tie in front, where two rows of black satin-covered buttons were used to fasten the dress.

Five sensible school frocks, my dear, to choose from when making your own darling her outfit for the winter.

I think I shall copy Miss May's gown for myself; it would be lovely in a black-and-white combination with jet buttons.

Heigh, oh! How time does fly! Here it is 6 o'clock. I must hurry and dress for dinner.

Farewell, dear sister, until next week.

ELEANOR.

1911, July 2.—Rebellion against Sultan Moulay Hadd. Fez besieged by rebels; lives of European residents alleged to be endangered; French army under General Monnier advances to Fez; disperses besiegers and occupies capital; Spanish military expedition advances from Larache and occupies Alcazar.

1911, July 2.—German gunboat Panther appears off Agadir, ostensibly to protect interests of German subjects; "conversations" opened at Berlin between Herr von Kiderlen-Waechter and M. Cambon.

THE FRENCH MINISTER
M. JULES CAMBON

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—Europe is waking up to the fact that it has a big—or at least a bold diplomatist; and the waking up is unpleasant, for big diplomacy means storms, and the modern purveyors of Bismarck, Gortchakoff, and Andrássy prefer to sail in zephyrs.

Alfred von Kiderlen-Waechter, the stormy petrel of Morocco, is the big diplomatist in question. When Kiderlen-Waechter succeeded the nice mannered do-little Schon as chief of Germany's foreign office, experts predicted trouble. They are proving right. Their forecasts are based upon Kiderlen-Waechter's antecedents and character, which show him as an active, able, unselfish, energetic man, with a passion for raising new and worrying questions and a contempt for the views of his fellow men. This flattering reputation, echoed from Budapest, where he had vegetated idly for a decade, and vanity, if not policy, continued the experts, would force him to live up to it. This he has been doing, to the great discomfort of England and France and to the amusement of cynics of other countries.

Until Kiderlen arrived Europe boasted—in the shape of Alois von Aehrenthal—only one real diplomatist. Diplomacy of the Metternich school is out of date, and diplomacy generally is discounted. France cannot keep a foreign minister long enough for him to read a dispatch; Russia is in the hands of Savonoff, who is far superior to Izvolsky, but is hampered by inferior colleagues and court intrigues.

England's diplomacy for six unfruitful years has been fearfully and wonderfully conducted by Sir Edward Grey, who despises and is avowedly ignorant of diplomacy, who cannot write a letter in side English, and who has never traveled outside England. Into this stagnant pool has suddenly plunged Alfred von Kiderlen-Waechter, the self-confident, ambitious, brainy, not very cautious man, whose favorite dictum is the Bismarckian: "Europe's greatest diplomatist is he who to contemporaries is always making trouble."

To make trouble—not wanton, but effective, profitable trouble—is the function of Kiderlen-Waechter, and the latest proceedings in Morocco show him in this almost genius.

SELF-MADE DIPLOMATIST.

He is a genius made, and by no means born. Kiderlen-Waechter, like Aehrenthal, is a diplomatist of personal merit for whom rank and money have done nothing. The Aehrenthals are descended from Jewish bankers who rose to wealth and competed even with Aehrenthal Kiderlen-Waechter is a parvenu. When he was born in 1852 his family was not even noble. His father was a mere bourgeois director of a Stuttgart bank, who married a noble lady named Waechter, so that the family adopted the semi-aristocratic name Kiderlen-Waechter.

Young Kiderlen fought as a volunteer in the war of 1870-71 and afterwards entered Tubingen university, where he distinguished himself by seeking as many aristocratic friends as possible, not out of snobbery, but in a praiseworthy, reasonable desire to get on in the world and help his native country. Since then he has been secretary of embassy in St. Petersburg and in Paris and counselor of embassy at Constantinople.

His chance came in 1888. Chosen for his knowledge of Russian things and men he was taken by Kaiser Wilhelm when on his first visit to St. Petersburg, Stockholm, and Copenhagen. Kiderlen's genius effloresced in the sunlight of his sovereign. He had picked up tremendous knowledge during his three years at the Russian court, he surprised Kaiser Wilhelm by speaking the Russian language fluently, and he rendered services all round.

HE IMPRESSES THE KAISER.

Wilhelm II. was all the more struck by this as on the journey Kiderlen began to him merely a good story teller and wit, and the revelation that the apparently frivolous young man of the world had a well stocked and scheming mind made a strong impression on young Wilhelm who was already looking out for promising underlings.

From that day on Kiderlen has been looked on as the Kaiser's friend. As a result he was attacked bitterly by enemies of "the personal regime," but Wilhelm II. stood by him.

During Kiderlen's long stay at Bucharest a scandal was caused by his insistence on introducing to haughty diplomatist wives a lady who was known to Bismarck as "Baroness Housekeeper." Here Kiderlen was only showing his characteristic contempt for other people's prejudices.

In 1909 the Berlin newspapers got hold of the story and printed it with piquant details, and puritanical persons began to ask, "Is it right that the German empire should be represented abroad by a minister who, etc., etc.?" Kaiser Wilhelm's answer was to remove Kiderlen from Bucharest, but to promote him to Berlin to manage the foreign office.

In place of Von Schoen who had gone away on a "diplomatic illness" caused by his indiscretions in connection with the Kaiser interview in the London Daily Telegraph.

LOUD WAISTCOAT RIDICULED.

November, 1909, saw Kiderlen-Waechter's first appearance in the Reichstag. He made a bad impression. His unimpressive bourgeois appearance, his brilliantly striped waistcoat, and his self-confident manner displeased the legislators, and his maiden speech met with general laughter. Kiderlen showed his qualities by taking the ridicule good humoredly, but there was a look in his eyes which the perspicacious interpreted:

"The time is not far off when the laugh will be with me."

"The man with the waistcoat," as enemies called him, was right for when a year ago Schoen was transferred as ambassador to Paris, Kiderlen was summoned a second time from Bucharest, and this time to stay. He was welcomed as the inevitable man. Schoen had been bitterly attacked by the pan-Germans for his weakness in dealing with Russia, and Kiderlen arrived as hero of these same pan-Germans, who are the chief propagandists of a strong foreign policy and almost the only body of public opinion with a voice in external affairs.

THREATENS PEACE.

No question of late has so threatened the peace of Europe as the Moroccan dispute. Pre-eminent stands the figure of Emperor William of Germany backed by his army and formidable navy. The latest addition to the German navy is the super-dreadnought, the "Thuringen" of 22,000 tons. This great fighting machine carries twelve 12-2 in., fourteen 6-7 in., and sixteen smaller guns.

Agadir, over which the Moroccan situation has come about has from being a name known only to geographers or close students of Morocco suddenly leaped into fame. Its position is indicated on the map herewith presented. There is a lonely Arab fort perched above a rocky shore. The anchorage is however protected from N. E. winds.

FOUNDATIONS LAID FOR MME. CURIES' "PALACE"

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Foundations have just been laid at a great depth of "radium palace" for Mme. Curie. All her laboratories will be installed there, and she will carry on her researches which she began with her late husband, and has never interrupted since his death. The radium palace will stand appropriately in the Rue Pierre Curie, in Southern Paris, beside the pavilion of the Oceanographical Institute, founded by the Prince of Monaco. The building will be lined throughout with a thick layer of lead, which is impervious to radium rays. Its weight will therefore be enormous, and exceptionally deep and massive foundations will be required.

OVER-PIOUS YOUTH LANDS BEHIND BARS

PARIS, Sept. 9.—The Paris courts have just sentenced to two years' imprisonment a young swindler and thief, who was detected at last because he was too pious. He seems to have been well acquainted with the churches and clergy of Paris. At one place he presented himself as the secretary of the Catholic Youth Society, at another time as a Catholic law student, and at a third as the servant of a well-known abbe. On one occasion he presented himself with a brand-new bicycle, which, he said, had been given to him for his services by the archbishop, and on Fridays he invariably got a good meal at the par-

MILLION LEAVE PARIS FOR THE HOLIDAYS

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Statistics published by the railway companies show that more than one million persons left Paris for the recent holidays. It was well that French railways were not in the throes of a strike like those on the other side of the channel. The exact number of persons who left Paris during the three days of the "Assumption" is given as 1,349,697. The P. L. M. handled nearly 160,000, the Northern line close to 150,000, the Eastern line about 85,000 and the Orleans line more than 125,000.

FATHER HURLS GIRL TO DEATH IN RIVER

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Pont Neuf, which has seen many a drowning incident before, has witnessed one more, and a cruel one. A father threw his own daughter, a little girl of 5, into the river, where she was drowned, and then plunged in himself to put an end to his life. The scene was in the evening. Many people had come to the banks of the river to enjoy the cool air. The man was seen crossing the bridge from the left, with the little girl walking by his side. As she was walking over the bridge the child was chattering pleasantly and had not the slightest idea of the intentions of her father.

LABOR TROUBLE BRINGS BIG PROFIT TO LLOYDS

LONDON, Sept. 9.—It is an ill wind that blows nobody good, and the labor troubles have been very profitable to the Lloyds underwriters.

It is said that there has not been profited a single claim arising out of the strike troubles, with the result that every penny taken in the form of premium—in the case of one syndicate alone the sum amounts to $250,000—becomes so much net profit. Almost all damage to property and goods occurred in centers from which no business was done at Lloyds.

Not for several years, moreover, have there been so many profitable transactions, so far as war policies are concerned. A large majority of them expire this month, and in this case also the underwriters will reap a fine harvest.

New policies to cover the risk of hostilities between France and Germany before the end of the year can now be obtained at a guinea ($15) per cent.

The possibility of the postponement of the durbar at Delhi has led to some business at 12 guineas per cent premium.

JAPAN'S NAVY GROWING FAST

Average Speed of Battleships Exceeds That of Ours.

Torpedo Boats and Destroyers Fewer in Nippon's Fleets.

TOKIO, Sept. 9.—Nowhere is modern progress in Japan so marked as in that department of the Government of which Admiral Togo is the head—the Navy. The recent launching of the cruiser Hirado at the Kawasaki dockyard in Kobe brought this vividly to the front. The ceremony of the launching made one feel almost as if one were back at the Newport News dockyard, or over by the long slips of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and the crowds were hardly to be differentiated from those at the launching of a United States battleship.

As early as 7 o'clock in the morning 5000 people had gathered on the stands near the decorated hull. The arrangements were all that could be desired, but we cannot say that there was adequate forethought in assigning some of the officials to their places.

The stands reserved for officials were utilized by some civilians, and it seemed strange to not a few observers that the chief official of the Prefecture—Governor Hattori—was not accommodated with a place in the central pavilion, where his Imperial Highness Prince Kito Shirakawa, his Excellency Baron Saito, Admiral Ito, and about a dozen other high dignitaries, together with Mr. Kawasaki, vice-president of the dockyard, stood to watch the proceedings.

PRINCE REPRESENTS THE EMPEROR

Shortly after 7:30 a. m. the Prince arrived, accompanied by his aid de camp and the Minister of the Navy, and after a brief rest in a specially reserved pavilion which had been erected on the northern side of the entrance, His Highness was conducted to the pavilion at the prow of the new cruiser by Mr. Kawasaki, the band meanwhile playing the national anthem.

The Prince, dressed in a simple suit of khaki, carried himself well. Responding to the salutes of the bystanders as he approached the stand, he impressed every one as a worthy representative of his Majesty the Emperor.

When all had taken their places the signal was given to knock a war the first dog shores. Seven times the signals were given, seven times the work was executed, without fuss or excitement and with no more noise than was made by the falling of blocks of timber.

By this time it was close upon 8 o'clock. A minute later Mr. Kawasaki released a cord, the time-honored bottle of champagne, threw its contents on the razor-like stem, and a few seconds later the huge hull was sliding down the ways amid shouts of "Banzai" from the assembled multitude. The Hirado had gracefully taken to her native element. A few minutes later the small crowd party left the central pavilion to the strains of the Kimigayo and walked slowly afterward, they were driven off in carriages escorted by three or four cavalrymen.

CRUISER HIRADO'S DIMENSIONS.

The warships which the Kawasaki dockyard has constructed heretofore have been Chinese gunboats, the Japanese gunboat Yoda, and several destroyers and submarines, not to mention vessels for Siam and Korea, but none of these has exceeded 1500 tons. This is the first time that such a large warship as the Hirado (4960 tons) has been built here. Today's event, therefore, reflects no small credit on the Kawasaki dockyard. Shortly after other great armored cruiser, which has been ordered by the Government, will be laid down.

The Hirado is officially described as follows:

Class	Second-class cruiser
Tonnage	4960 tons
Length	475 feet
Beam	46.6 feet
Depth	23.6 feet
Draught	16.7 feet
Horsepower	22,500
Speed	22 knots
Engine	Latest turbine
Boilers	Water tube style

Word has reached here of the launching recently from the Middleborough yard of the first of four steamers which the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha of Japan have ordered in England for carrying on the coal trade between their Milke collieries and the ports of China. Hitherto the company has carried on its business in chartered steamers, but having decided to possess a fleet of its own, ordered two 8000-ton and two 3000-ton steamers from England.

FACES SIBERIA IN DEFENSE OF WOMAN

Handsone Count Roniker Will Be Tried for Murder of Relative.

The Warsaw Case Promises to Rival Trial of Mme. Steinheil.

WARSAW, Sept. 9.—This city will witness next month Europe's most dramatic trial since Mme. Steinheil fascinated and fooled Paris judges and juries. Count Roniker—handsome, clever, and aristocratic—is to be tried on September 5 for the murder of his brother-in-law, Baron Chrzanowski, sixteen months ago.

The prosecuting attorney has arrayed over 100 witnesses against him, mostly old boon companions of his own class, who are loath to reveal the secrets of their lives, and only mean to appear under the greatest pressure. So the trial is expected to last for weeks.

Count Roniker's case has assumed new aspects since the murder was reported. Greed of gold was supposed to have prompted the profligate count to entice his 18-year-old brother-in-law into a furnished room of shady reputation thickly hung with carpets and portieres, where he is alleged to have taken the head with a knuckle breaker. The boy evidently defended himself with almost frantic despair, for the hangings in the little apartment were covered with blood and his body bore seventeen wounds.

RONIKER SUSPECTED AT ONCE.

When the body was found two days afterwards the boy's own parents declared "Roniker has done it!" The count's reputation is none of the best, and though extremely handsome, his eyes are famous for their particularly evil, though fascinating expression. His gallantry had become notorious, and it soon became evident that some society woman had also visited the scene of the murder, either before or just after the crime was committed. Roniker made no secret of the fact, but refused to give the woman's name.

"I would rather die under this stigma than reveal her name," was the only answer the examining magistrate could get from him. "The lady is mixed up in it in such a way that her explanation would clear me from this terrible charge. But she is a married woman, and her honor must come before all things."

His wife, who is devoted to him and has moved heaven and earth to help him, visited him in prison and begged him on her knees to give the woman's name. But he refused, and so far the mysterious lady has not come forward to clear the count.

Meanwhile, the count's finger prints, stained with blood, were found on a lamp shade in the room where the murdered boy was discovered, but when questioned about them he said he could explain even that if his tongue were not tied, owing to the mysterious lady.

Having given the dark hints, Count Roniker took another line of defense. Suddenly, when his wife was visiting his cell, he appeared to go raving mad. The terrified woman screamed to the warders who rushed in and held him down. Since then—that is, for over a year—he has spent most of the time upon his knees. He refuses to take any exercise, saying it interferes with his devotions.

He answers only to the name of "Father Peter," letting his hair grow long and vainly begging his warders to let him have a tonsure. When not praying he writes letters to the pope and draws figures of saints on the walls of his cell. He refuses to see his wife, saying he never had one.

This poor lady, who is nearly distracted with grief, persuaded the public curator to allow him to be moved to the lunatic asylum at Tvolk, near this city, so that he could be under medical examination.

PLAN FOR ESCAPE FAILS.

Her plan was to get him kept there for about a year and then quietly effect his escape into South America. The thing had been done before, and she planned that they and their three children, the younger of whom was born a week after her father's arrest, should live there on her large private fortune. But the doctors refused to let her go for more than two months, sending him back to prison with the verdict that Count Roniker is perfectly sane and a dangerous criminal, responsible for his actions.

He was sent back to the prison, but he still refuses to make any coherent statement. When brought into court the other day to hear the charge made against him, he pretended to be madder than ever, signed the charge sheet "Father Peter," and pointed with his finger to some stranger lounging about the court when the judge asked if he wanted a lawyer to defend him.

This comedy has spoiled his chances with the judges. Their sympathy was with him so long as the mysterious lady plea was kept to the fore. Now, the case, he made no attempt to deny, and could not go through all that pretense. Nevertheless, they have little substantial evidence, except the finger prints. If found guilty, he will have from fifteen to twenty years' hard labor, and perpetual exile in Siberia.

WIFE BELIEVES HIM INNOCENT.

His wife will, she says, follow him there, though, according to Russian law, she can divorce him as soon as he becomes a convict. She still believes him innocent, though her mother and father are firmly convinced that he murdered his young son. The count never was received into their house. As the family is tremendously rich and the count's extravagance had ruined his own large estate, they accused him of murdering her for her money.

Why should he murder his brother-in-law?

AMERICAN GOLD AND LEAD WASTED

United States Citizens Have a Royal Time On British Moors.

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Sept. 9.—The Americans who are shooting away lead and gold on the highland moors are having fine sport. Before the season ends the grouse will be more than decimated and the bank accounts of the landlords and the canny Highlanders greatly augmented. But he who prouettes must pay the piper, and the sport-loving Americans, dancing in the exuberance of their wealth, rack nothing of the cost.

Harry Payne Whitney's annual $50,000 trip across the Atlantic with a party for a few days' grouse shooting at Halwick Hall, Upper Teesdale, which he leases from Lord Strathmore, as usual, received much notice in the Edinburgh and London newspapers. They print full details of the cost of the trip and remark with some wonder that more than 100 have engaged for the shoot. The Whitney party saw the Ebor handicap race at York, Wednesday, traveling there by special train. "Billy" Thompson of New York left his wife at St. Moritz to join the party at Teesdale. They will return to New York next week.

On the Perthshire moors, which American sportsmen greatly favor, Howard Gould of New York has a small party at Dunkeld House, the Marquis of Tullibardine's handsome residence. In two days the bag made by Mr. Gould and his friends totaled 115 brace of grouse, four brace of snipe, twenty-one brace and six rabbits. Besides, Mr. Gould has the salmon fishing.

That fine moor, Balmakelley, is rented again this season, as usual, by Frederick W. Whitridge of New York, who married Matthew Arnold's daughter. Lord Sandhurst and Arnold Whitridge are in the party at Balmakelley. They have had good sport and are sending many grouse to distant friends. But so far Mr. Whitridge has been too modest to tell the number of birds the guns have brought down on the estate.

So has G. D. Jordan, Boston, who occupies that fine Highland home, Drum-na-Castle, the seat of the Earl of An-

WALES IS PROMINENT

In the pictorial exposition of affairs of the old world the Prince of Wales is a prominent factor. The picture herewith presented shows the future king of England visiting the battleship Hindustan (16,350 tons) on which vessel he will have his training as a midshipman. On July 16, King Emanuel inaugurated several pavilions forming part of the ethnological exhibition in Rome. Whoever visits Rome this month will have much of interest to see, for the Italian capital has expended much money, time and taste in preparing various exhibitions which are being held in different parts of the city. The older type of fighting people in Scotland is fast disappearing. Seldom nowadays can one see the sturdy old fisherman, with the hard-working wife, who, carried into the big towns in her creel, the fish which he caught. The fishing hamlets dotted around the coast are "dying out" for the big steam trawlers can enter only the large ports. The German soldiers are put through severe training while in barracks. One requirement is to climb an iron fence with projections, as shown in the accompanying picture.

CHANGES EXPECTED IN SYSTEM OF TAXATION

Copenhagen Eager for Coming Session in Parliament, When Many Questions Will Be Discussed

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 9.—The all-absorbing topic here is the coming session of parliament, which is expected to make national changes in the prevailing systems of taxation and suffrage. Some of the proposed tax legislation will be supplementary to the acts passed at the last session when taxes on theater and other amusement tickets, revenue dues and additional railroad rates were added to the budget.

The new taxation acts will include a higher impost on spirits, an increase of the income and property tax and probably a real-estate value raising tax. The necessity for these measures to increase the income of the state is due chiefly to the operation of the new social laws providing for old-age support and workmen's compensation. The budget for this purpose has already grown far beyond the original estimate. The burden has been increased further by the higher pay given civil and military officers. On the other hand, the usual revenues have been decreased by the reduction in custom duties. It is expected that the new taxation laws passed by the last session of parliament and the ones proposed for the coming sitting will give the state an additional income of 20 million Danish kroner. The position of the present government, already shaky on account of its taxation policy, may be made very uncomfortable, especially by the taxation of spirits, which up to the present it has feared to touch.

Among the suffrage proposals will be an act making the franchise for the lower house of parliament universal. Both men and women over twenty-five years of age will be permitted to vote for the members of the lower house. It is also planned to do away with the restricted suffrage of the upper house whereby only highly taxed voters are allowed to vote for its members.

Among other acts to be proposed will be a law to compel beneficiaries of old age support to share in the expense of the plan. An act contemplating the reform of the present management of the elementary public schools will also be proposed by the government.

KASER WARNS COLLEGE MEN

Points Out Dangers of Drinking to Students of His Land.

Spread of Sleeping Sickness Arouses Officials in the Colonies.

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—Emperor William now seldom misses an opportunity of warning German students to moderate their drinking habits and to adopt rather the American model of student life. Several days ago, upon the occasion of presenting a flag to the gymnasium at Cassel where he was prepared for the university, in order to commemorate his connection with that school, he made a brief address to the students of the senior class, advising them when in the university, to use less alcohol.

The traditional drinking customs, he said, were no longer adapted to a time in which Germany must struggle for its position in the world's markets. Then he praised the abstemious life of American students, and he had often been impressed, he said, with their ability. German students, his majesty repeated in a line with what he has often said to other student assemblies, must give more attention to sports of all sorts, including fencing and rowing, instead of trying to create new records for the amount of beer that they can swallow.

SPREAD OF DISEASE.

Emil Zimmermann, a German writer who has recently been traveling in German East Africa, announces an important fact bearing upon the spread of the sleeping sickness in that colony. Hitherto it had been supposed that the tsetse fly, the cause of the disease, was exclusively in grassy or lightly wooded strips of land bordering on lakes or rivers, keeping about the paths where animals come to drink.

Hence the chief method of combating the pest has hitherto been to cut down the trees along the lakes and rivers and to prevent the shoreland from becoming overgrown with high grass and reeds. Zimmermann found, however, that the fly finds one of its favorite haunts in groves of the oil palm. He mentions the case of two huge palm groves aggregating 800,000 trees situated near Isambura, at the northern end of Lake Tanganyika, in which the natives are rapidly dying off. There was formerly a dense population in the groves, but now there are only about 200 persons left, and the physicians say that fully half of these are affected, and it is only a question of time, and not very long time, till the groves will be completely depopulated and revert to wilderness. All this is of no little economic significance for the colony, where the Germans have been vigorously exerting themselves to promote the cultivation of coffee, sisal grass, cotton, rubber and palm trees.

KING'S GENEROSITY.

The generosity of the late King Chulalongkorn of Siam has brought the little town of Homburg, the emperor's favorite watering place, into some trouble. Upon the occasion of his last visit to Homburg several years ago, the king announced a gift to the city of a temple, like pavilion to cover a spring which had been named in his honor. He also promised the sum of about $500 for erecting it after his arrival from Siam. It was built and shipped according to promise, but the king died before sending the money for erecting it, and now the city is wondering who will bear the expense of putting it up.

It is announced that the Bayreuth summer opera season will be repeated next year, the Wagner family having decided in this instance from its usual practice of having operas given only on alternate years. The reason for this change appears to be connected with the expiration of the Parsifal copyrights at the end of 1913, after which that famous opera will naturally be placed upon the repertoire of all the leading opera houses of Germany.

The state railroad administration is determined in the future to keep its personnel in the highest condition of physical and mental fitness, and thus to avoid as far as possible the occurrence of accidents on a system arising from breakdowns of the men's health. Orders have just been issued for the holding of a series of stringent tests, to which all locomotive engineers, firemen, signalmen, switchmen and other track employees are to be immediately subjected.

Up to the age of 45 these tests are to be repeated every five years, eight, hearing, nervous condition being submitted to thorough investigation. After the age of 45 the examination is to take place every three years, and after every man's condition he will be sent before the examining board much more frequently, and in case of deficiency of some kind being confirmed he will be pensioned.

GEORGE PROFITS BY KAISER'S HINT

Fast Vessel Planned for Surprise Visits to British Fleet.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The return of the King from Scotland is not expected until a fortnight before his departure for India. The new yacht now being built for his majesty's use will not be a pleasure cruiser, but a fast vessel for use in surprise visits of inspection to the fleet on naval fortresses. The King is taking deep interest in Germany's relations with the fighting services.

Prince Arthur of Connaught will be commissioned to inspect the King of the Belgians with the Order of the Lion, and will be accompanied by Lord Roberts.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught will probably visit Washington and New York in February.

The Prince of Wales and Prince Albert will not start on their voyage around the world until both are midshipmen. The Bacchante's well remembered tour will be repeated before the departure of the new ecclesiastical appointments will be settled when the Prime Minister visits the King at Balmoral, the transfer of Bishop Gore from Birmingham to Oxford is considered probable, and the selection of a more moderate churchman for the bishopric of Salisbury will be an offset for the evangelical section. The Episcopal bench is no longer recruited from the public schools, but from the clergy interested in social and labor questions.

DISAPPEARING TYPE OF SCOTCH FISHER FOLK

Panama canal will be opened in 1915 has again given rise to the rumor that negotiations for the cession of the Danish West Indian Islands to the United States have been opened. Dr. Maurice Egan, the American minister, refuses to discuss the matter, but his frequent interviews with business men interested in the islands have given some color to the rumor. It is known that Dr. Egan believes that the commercial growth of the islands would be facilitated by the proposed change in ownership, but evidently he is convinced that all overtures on the subject should emanate from the Danish government. The story that there has been a proposition broached to cede one of the Philippine Islands to Germany in exchange for later cession to Denmark with the two years' option of the islands in exchange for Schleswig has been pronounced ridiculous by the American legation here.

Besides, the opening of the canal and its possible effects on the Danish West Indies, the growing interest of the United States in the islands, and the fact that commerce is exciting interest here, are largely to the growth of exports from the United States to Denmark. A remarkable feature of the trade relations between the two countries is the fact that in spite of the lowering of the duties on hides by the United States, the exports of them from this country to America have almost ceased.

The plan to send a resident Cuban minister here is not meeting with much favor. Argentine will soon have a minister here and Brazil another in place of Senor Campesina, who goes to Paris.

Although a year has passed since the death of the popular Princess Mary, her remains have not yet been removed from the body to the Royal tomb in Roskilde cathedral, but the husband of the late princess, Prince Waldemar, will not consent to the removal, preferring to have the body near his home, where he can visit it frequently. Every day he goes several times to the church.

The gift of a number of Danish American citizens of a large work of art for the decoration of the new Christianburg castle in Copenhagen has been received with keen pleasure here. The tribute to the mother country by her children, who have become good citizens of another nation is received by all classes with admiring comment.

CONVICT WEDS.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—The town hall of the Fourteenth Arrondissement of Paris has been the scene of a curious marriage. A convict, provisionally sentenced to eight years' hard labor, who may receive several years more at the end of another trial in October, was there duly and legally married to a young woman named Blanche, a dis-

'WHITE RACE' MISNOMER, IS CLAIM

Sir Harry Johnson Declares Pure Strain Is Out of Existence.

Thinks Caucasians Are Destined to Be Redeemers of the World.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Sir Harry Johnston, in the English Contemporary Review, considers what may be the future of the human race in a thoughtful article entitled, "Racial Problems and the Congress of Races." In the intermarriage of races Sir Harry sees nothing which is not to be expected and even, in certain cases, to be hoped for, and he brings forward as a point the fact that there is no such thing as a pure white race. In part he says:

"So far as we can read prehistory and history, the Caucasian race seems to stand revealed as the redeemer of the world, the creator of Paleolithic, Neolithic, and early Metal-age civilization."

Discussing inter-marriages between white and black, Sir Harry Johnston says: "There is a far greater tendency to inter-mixture in this direction (white men marrying native wives in tropical countries) than there is between colored men and white women. We white men are, or affect to be, shocked at the latter, while we shrug our shoulders at the former, and with some justice, for the colored woman, by union with the white man is raised more or less to his standard of living, which is a superior one; whereas, the white woman marrying the colored man is in her new surroundings sometimes brought to a lower level of life. But if the white man is to continue to form temporary or permanent unions with the women of other races, he cannot be surprised if, as education increases his womanhood should see no harm in marrying colored men, or colored men aspire to possess white wives."

"It may, of course, be more advantageous to the world at large that there should always remain a stock of white people to represent the highest development as yet known, physically and mentally, of humanity."

"At the same time we should bear in mind that nowhere in the world exists a pure white race, in whose ancient ancestry there has been no mixture whatever with the Mongol, the negro, or the Dravidian, and that perhaps a white race which receives no admixture of blood from the other human types from time to time may die of physical degeneration. For myself, I seem to see the prospect of great racial development in Asia by mixture of blood."

"Russian Siberia is going to play a great part in the development of Asia. The white type, which is being developed in that region, is of fine physique and of no mean mentality, and is mingling already with the indigenous Mongols, intermarrying with Japanese and even Chinese, and producing offspring of good appearance, physical vigor, and mental alertness."

In conclusion, Sir Harry Johnston says: "If some such inter-racial congress as the one now being held in London could define a religious basis on which all nations and civilized races could agree (as they may agree on a universal language, weights and measures, currency, quarantine regulations, scientific nomenclature, an international code of law), and on this basis regulate their inter-racial, international dealings, then in their own homes and local temples they could still continue to carry on other forms of worship of divine, human animal, vegetable, or meteoric attributes, (one word, Divine covers all these phases of life and energy), such as were not inconsistent with the principles of the 'Thasic religion.'"

There could still survive the stately ritual of the Latin church, the beautiful services of the Anglican cathedral, even the more reasonable practices of Jain Buddhism and the prayers to Allah as seen through the mental vista of pure-minded Mohammedans. Japan would take a tremendous step forward in the comity of nations if tomorrow she declared her State religion to be undogmatic Christianity. The only hope for the continued survival of the Turkish dynasty and empire is for it to have no State religion at present so that Christianity and Judaism may be placed on at least an equal footing with Islam, so that mass may once more be sung at St. Sophia's, and Jerusalem be restored to the Jew as a religious center."

BRITISH BEAUTIES GET FEVER AND STRIKE

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Of all the various strikes afflicting the United Kingdom perhaps the most curious and unusual was one that was brought to a triumphant conclusion at Folkestone. At that resort on the south coast there is to be an international beauty competition today. Last Friday there was an elimination competition to choose six English girls to compete against the foreigners. Two girls were tied for the sixth place, so it was arranged that the English contingent should number seven.

But foreign competitors have kept on arriving, until yesterday there were twelve, and two more are expected. This would make fourteen foreign beauties against half that number of the home-grown variety.

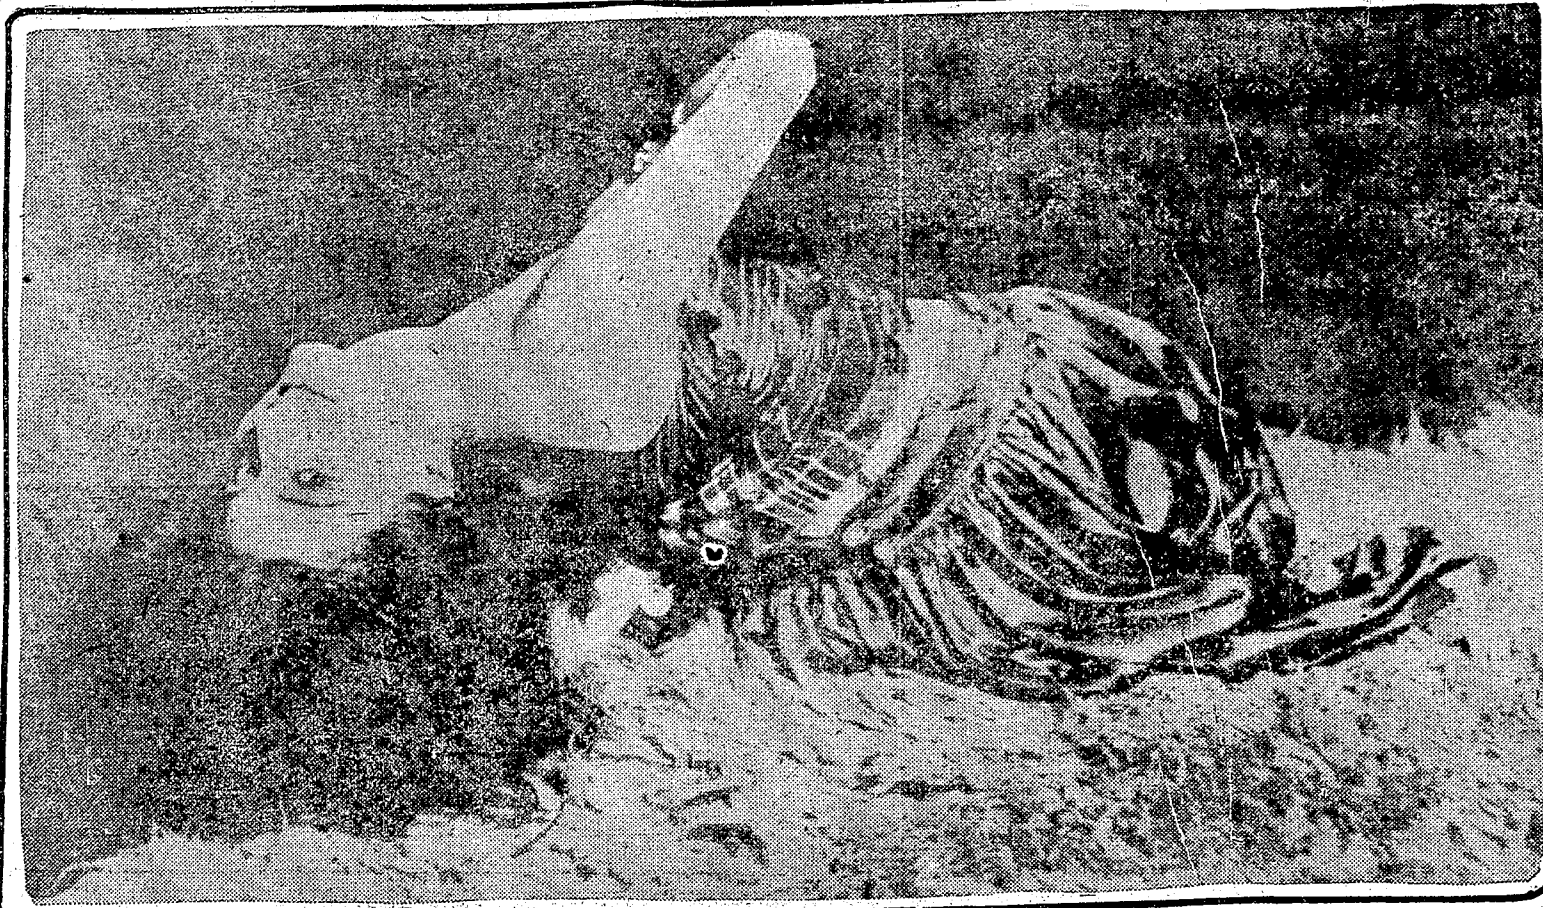

The English girls decided that they would not stand it. Yesterday Miss Kitty Darling from Plymouth, who bears a wonderful resemblance to Nell Gwyn in the National Gallery picture by Lely, presented an ultimatum on behalf of the English competitors, that they would not compete unless there was an equal number of English and foreign competitors.

The manager replied that it was too late then to alter all the arrangements made, and that several of the foreign entrants were traveling very long distances, one coming from Malaga and another from Naples. It would not be fair after having brought these ladies so far to prevent them from competing.

The reply of the strike leader was that they had come to their decision. Only they would return to their homes by the first train today unless the manager agreed by 9 o'clock last night to have only fourteen competitors, made up of seven English and seven foreign ladies. The manager at first refused to accede to their wishes. But argued, pleaded and beseeched, but all to no avail, and at 9 o'clock last night, rather than disappoint the hundreds who had reserved seats, he reluctantly agreed to reduce the number.

The Algerian beauty, Princess Belgandouze, having traveled specially to compete, will appear, and the remaining thirteen foreign competitors will have to bullet to see who stands down.

Threaten Crinoline Revival

PARIS, Sept. 9.—"La Grande Semaine" of Dame Fashion has ended and numerous Americans at present in Paris will have the advantage of being the first to gaze at the new and very wonderful creations for the autumn and winter which half a dozen leading Parisian dressmaking establishments will have on public view from Monday onward.

History repeats itself, and so, it would appear, does fashion. Crinoline is to become fashionable during the next few months. The daring idea belongs to M. Poiret, who hopes it will become very popular. Judging, however, by the opinion of the comparatively few Americans who have already seen the models, either as buyers for large American firms or as very privileged patrons, admitted very exceptionally at this week's exhibitions,

"avant la lettre," the stiff material is doomed to meet with disfavor on the other side of the Atlantic.

Princess Anita of Braganza and Mrs. James Henry Smith were among the visitors at the exhibition this week, and both of them looked simply amazed at the mere suggestion of donning such gowns.

Another American who was at M. Poiret's, picking out dresses, was Gretchen Dale, the actress and playwright.

"I fear I should forget how to act in worrying about how to sit down," she said.

In fact, how to sit down will be the important question for those who adopt crinoline.

One of the most attractive models of the kind is a white satin skirt with a

GERMANY LOOKING OUT FOR BIG FRAUDS

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—American importers of Limoges and other high-grade china and porcelain may be prepared to have their consignments scrutinized more closely than ever as a result of a comprehensive inspection of European potteries which is just being completed by a special commission of American customs experts.

The commission, which is now finishing its work in Germany, consists of Frederick Achenbach of the treasury department, Edwin R. Wakefield, a special attorney in the customs division of the department of justice, and George C. Davis, deputy appraiser at Chicago.

The commission spent nearly two months at Limoges, France. Its inquiries there and at other earthenware centers, such as Carlsbad, Meissen, Munich and Copenhagen, concerned the cost of production and other factors entering into invoicing.

The system of rigidity with which Collector Loeb's department scrutinizes European products continues to agitate the German exporting world. It is stated that the recent seizure at New York of heavy consignments from Solingen, the famous German cutlery center, owing to valuation frauds, has paralyzed the Solingen trade, which is largely dependent upon the American market.

Local manufacturers hear the New York customs house contains hundreds of cases of their wares which cannot be forwarded to their destinations until the suspected frauds are investigated.

It has been decided, therefore, to suspend American shipments indefinitely, with the result that several factories have closed down and thrown their hands out of employment.

The Anglo export press is howling with indignation over this state of affairs and is calling upon the German government to make forcible investigation of American customs chicanery before other industries fall into similar decay.

green chiffon tunic reaching just below the knees spread out by crinoline and bordered with green fringe. The shape suggests something like a ballet skirt or a huge lamp shade.

Besides crinoline there are some other very daring models, on the whole indicating a tendency to return to the flimsy fashions of the Directoire period.

According to rumors circulating in the principal dressmaking firms, American buyers purchased much less this season than in the last few years.

A great many Americans are beginning to flock to Paris now that the sea-side season is nearing an end.

EX-CONTROLLER METZ GIVES ROSE TO PRINCESS

BERLIN, Sept. 9.—Ex-Controller Hermann A. Metz of New York is spending the week-end at the grand ducal court of Saxe-Meiningen, where he went for the special purpose of presenting to the hereditary Princess Charlotte of Saxe-Meiningen, eldest sister of the Kaiser, a selection of American Beauty roses on the stalk.

When Mr. Metz was at Meiningen last year the princess, who is an ardent rose fancier, expressed regret that German flower growers did not enjoy an acquaintance with American Beauty roses. Mr. Metz promised the next time he visited Europe her wishes should be gratified, but hardly thought it would be possible for him to "make good" owing to the rigid restrictions placed upon the importing of foreign grown plants and shrubbery into Germany.

He brought with him on this trip, however, three well developed stalks which arrived on this side in an excellent state of preservation. By careful wrapping with fresh soil and solidous nursing during the last few weeks it was possible to deliver the stalks to Princess Charlotte in a condition which will enable them to break forth into blossom within another fortnight, if the weather is sunny.

Her royal highness is delighted over the success of Mr. Metz's importation and promises to become a pioneer in introducing American Beauty culture into Germany.

Mr. Metz, who is still none the worse for his cross country flights in the airship Parosval at the beginning of the week, will return to New York early in September, providing he can find an empty berth on some comfortable liner.

FRENCH DEPLORE AMERICAN WAYS

Movement Afoot to Free the Language of Anglo-Saxon Words.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—A remarkable revolt has started against the "Anglo-Saxonization" of the French language and customs, and leagues are being formed by persons who fear the influence of the new world in Europe is a dangerous one.

A society calling itself "The Friends of the French Language" has just been constituted, its object being the purification of the language from the horde of Anglo-Saxonisms which in the last few years have invaded it. It has a large number of influential members, representing all the professions, as well as politicians, journalists, scientists, and even army officers, and they seem determined to expel "intruders" from the native words for them. They will also try to rid the tongue of certain remarkable creations like "footing," meaning "walking," that have no existence even in English.

Side by side with this movement, protests have recently been made against the introduction of American free-and-easy manners in place of the old "finesse Francaise." The handshake, for instance, has almost ousted the courteous "baisemain," the old fashioned little ceremony in which the cavalier bends gracefully over the hand of the lady and imprints a kiss upon her fingers.

The first way in which French society women now generally conduct themselves in the streets and in intercourse with men is regarded by the upholders of the old regime as being principally due to American influence.

This movement is already well on the way to restoring the "basematin" to its former popularity, and in most of the fashionable summer resorts it has made great progress among the elite.

GOD OF PAIN DUCKED BY HINDU WORSHIPERS

BOMBAY, Sept. 9.—A spectacle which has not been seen for nearly half a century—a procession of Hindus to the seashore to offer prayers for rain—was witnessed here recently. The God of Rain was lowered into the sea head first, to the accompaniment of shouts from thousands of people.

A large bullock cart, gayly decorated and filled with young native tom-tom players attired in yellow robes, drove up to the entrance of the market, followed by a flower festooned palanquin, and amid the deafening noise of the band the officiating priest reverently brought out the idol and placed it gently in the palanquin, which was covered with a red umbrella.

Brahmans immediately swarmed round the sacred vehicle and formed the vanguard of the procession. Behind them walked two hundred priests singing hymns, dealers in cloth and other traders who had been compelled to close their business premises owing to the drought.

At one point two hundred children from the Lady Northcote Orphanage joined the procession, and, singing a hymn, specially composed, invoking the god to send rain.

When the seashore was reached Brahmins put the idol in a boat, which was lowered into deep water. The idol was then lowered, head first, into the sea.

ANTARCTIC EXPLORERS TO FLY ABOVE SNOWS

Monoplane Taken by Mawson Expedition Will Go on Ice or in Water; Do Not Expect to Reach South Pole

LONDON, Aug. 9.—The steamer Aurora, which is now on the way to the antarctic with a scientific exploring expedition led by Dr. Douglas Mawson, will take on board a monoplane in Australia. The ship is to be sent to Australia shortly on a liner, accompanied by its pilot, Lieut. Watkins. It will then be shown in a series of flights at the chief centers of the commonwealth, this being the first appearance there of the monoplane type.

The primary plan of the expedition is not to use it for a mere dash to the south pole, but to keep it for reconnoitering the ice hummocks and barriers encountered. It is, therefore, so constructed that it can become a motor sleigh or an aeroplane by turns.

The only motor sleigh which has previously been made to compete with the same kind of conditions is one which is in the possession of a Russian grand duke, who employs it for traversing the steppes. This original example showed a tendency to suck up the snow with its propeller when the snow was at all powdery. In order to avoid danger, the monoplane has its propeller considerably higher, so that the snow dust will at least not be drawn into the engine.

MONOPLANE ALSO A SLEDGE.

The monoplane is the first which has been constructed to pull loads or go over the ground in an emergency. Its frame is made entirely of steel tubes, and it carries a 90-kilometer 80-horsepower motor, with fuel enough for six hours. This kind of motor was used by Gilbert in the circuit of Europe, and remained unchanged throughout the flight. It has already been tested on the south pole motor, and has given from 55-horsepower to 60-horsepower for five hours. The machine is 45 feet wide by 37 feet long.

When the monoplane is to become a motor sleigh it is fitted with considerably longer skids, which are painted with phosphorus for the prevention of rust. The motor would act in the same manner as in an aeroplane, but with the diminished power needed. The wings then detach and slide into a cradle within the body, overlapping the edges of the body so that the appearance of the machine comes almost like that of a moth with folded wings.

The tail piece is also taken off and a steering skate fastened round the tail in the place of the present skidding paddle. For the purpose of flight smaller skids of ordinary length are put on, and their elasticity is specially increased by means of sliding sockets strengthened with elastic, so that the "give" in landing under rough ice conditions may be unusually large.

CAN RISE QUICKLY.

The monoplane will rise in from twenty to thirty yards' distance and it has been tried over a rough field at Dartford. It is expected that, if the fields of ice be too rough, enough speed could be cleared to insure easy ascent and stages for descent would be selected by the flier.

The body is so constructed that a passenger can be carried, the seat being in front of the pilot. The expedition is to take place in the antarctic summer, so that the conditions of freezing have not to be so seriously considered. The steel is, however, heavily tinned and the motor is air cooled. If the temperature were to necessitate the precaution, the tanks would be covered in jackets of thick felt. It is possible that if the expedition nears the south pole and is obstructed Lieut. Watkins will make a six-hour rush to reach it. The high head wind which continuously blows from due north when the south pole was last attacked, and which is probably a chronic atmospheric condition, would, however, be an obstacle. In any case this monoplane is likely to prove a valuable aid to the speed of this expedition by its work in reconnaissance of the traversable routes.

FINANCED BY AUSTRALIA.

The venture is largely in Australian interests and largely financed with Australian money, and the thirty botanists, zoologists, biologists, geologists, physicists, meteorologists and scientific men of all kinds who are to join the Aurora at Hobart are chiefly recruited from graduates of the universities of Australia and New Zealand.

The object is to survey and explore as much as possible of the coast line which stretches for 5000 miles round the pole, and is known only a little here and there. The expedition is the first big attempt to undertake this general exploration, apart from dashes to the pole.

The question of the sperm whale is an example. Sperm whales have become exceedingly rare in the southern seas; there is reason to believe that they are not becoming extinct, but are simply trying for refuge from the whalers to some unknown sea. The only unknown sea is that which the Aurora is to explore. If it discovers, as is possible, a large haunt of whales, it will mean that the whaling industry will experience a big revival, and that the unhappy whales will have to scour the seas once more for a harbor of refuge.

ON LOOKOUT FOR MINES.

All commercial possibilities will be closely watched. It is expected that coal mines will be discovered, and keen eyes will be open for mineral deposits of every sort. Three parties will be landed on points about 500 miles apart along the coast, to make their way inland on sledges. These journeys will be accomplished by man hauling, dog teams and motor sledges and sledging over sea ice may be possible in the early spring, with seal meat and blubber collected en route as the unattractive daily menu.

One inland party will be dispatched to the magnetic pole, approaching it from the opposite direction to that made by Dr. Mawson's party on the Shackleton expedition. By this journey it is hoped to complete the magnetic data yet wanting in the vicinity of the magnetic pole. Search will also be made for a favorable spot where a permanent wireless weather station may be erected to warn Australia of coming weather.

But perhaps the most fascinating possibility of the expedition lies in the fact that it is expected that evidence will be collected tending to show that Australia was once united through the antarctic continent with South America. It is a theory which is strongly held by many scientific men, and proof of this union between the far western continent and the far eastern would be one of the most remarkable of the many romances of science.

LONDON IS STILL QUARRY ANCIENT DANCE-MAD CASTLE IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Sept. 9.—It really seems as though the heat wave has bred, instead of a longing for apathy, a desire to dance and to watch others dance. A glance at the playbills of the London variety houses, discloses an extraordinary multiplicity of terpsichorean prodigies. To the Palace theater has come a very famous dancer in the ordinary sense of the word, but her performance—one item of which consists in her weaving her way blindfolded through a number of eggs laid out in a circle on the floor—has been hailed as a revelation to the ordinary theater-goer. Mella is of Hungarian birth, but learned her dancing in the Russian ballet. Armenie Oghanian, who has appeared at the Hippodrome, has had bestowed upon her by the Shah of Persia the title of Vadjih-es-Sultan (the beauty and nobility of our empire). This she merited by founding the National Turkish Theater. Of her peculiar kind of beauty much could be said, but it suffices to note that as an Oriental she is considered bewitchingly beautiful. As a dancer she is unsurpassed, and her reception at the Hippodrome last week as remarkable for its genuineness.

GARDENING SOLDIERS DISPLAY THEIR WORK

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Soldiers who are not in active duty often find time heavy on their hands, but not those who are stationed at Caterham Barracks. Every inducement is offered to the men stationed at this post to pursue the cultivation of flowers and vegetables and, as a consequence, gardening has become one of the features of the place. The men recently gave their annual flower, vegetable and industrial show, and notwithstanding the ravages of prolonged drought many of the exhibits showed up remarkably well.

The officers, of whom Major G. D. Jeffreys is the commandant, take the greatest interest in the show, which is one of the social events of the year. Caterham Barracks boasts of having in Corp. Holt of the Coldstream Guards not only the tallest man in the army, but the champion vegetable grower of the service. He is the leading competitor at this show, being awarded nine firsts for his vegetables, and also first prize for the best kept and cropped garden.

When the seashore was reached Brahmins put the idol in a boat, which was lowered into deep water. The idol was then lowered, head first, into the sea.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—In spite of the fact that a commission has been appointed in England to inventory the ancient and historical monuments and constructions in Wales and Monmouth and to specify those which seem worthy of preservation, it seems powerless to effect any real good in the way of keeping old castles and ruins from absolutely disappearing. The commission calls the attention in the public press to the gradual destruction of the prehistoric camp at Penmaenmawr and the castle at Dyserth, but as the properties are privately owned nothing can be done about the matter unless somebody steps in and buys them.

The commissioners urge the desirability of Parliament establishing some machinery with power to intervene in order to regulate the destruction of the historic treasures of the nation, which at present are too often sacrificed to selfishness and greed, or allowed to suffer from the consequences of ignorance and neglect.

Details are given of the case referred to of the castle of Dyserth—a historic ruin dating from Henry III, and standing on a hill in Flintshire.

SPURNS ALFONSO'S BID TO DINNER

Comic Opera Singer Turns Down King's Coveted Invitation.

MADRID, Sept. 8.—A story about King Alfonso, which has been doing the rounds in England, is that the young king monarch is as tickle as a cat. And the story is all the better because in it the gallant is snubbed by the fair.

The King has been extremely attentive to Julietta Pons, leading comic opera singer and favorite of the theater Di Comedia. Indeed it was suspected that the charming Julietta was at the Cowes regatta, where she was to appear, and that she was one of the women on board the Duke of Westminster's yacht on those two days, when the King and the Duke sailed to the Forest, landed and enjoyed quiet picnics in that ancient royal hunting demesne.

But it would appear that the King, as a father, was not so much attracted. Returning, Alfonso's fancy lightly turned to La Fornarina, a music hall artist, tremendous favorite with her audiences. The gossips are telling each other in their bouillottes that the King invited the fascinating La Fornarina to supper and to have a little mission two 1000 peseta notes—about $500 in all, but that the haughty music hall star replied that while she was highly honored by the King's attention, she was not in the habit of "playing second fiddle" to anyone. Senora Julietta being the "first" of course. La Fornarina declined his majesty's invitation, thanking him gratefully for the $500 and told him she would give the money to a charitable institution.

as the leading man. He was for twelve years in the company of Sir Henry Irving.

"The Sang Froid Athletes" is as good a description as could be given of the Wynne Brothers, a team of European gymnasts that will appear at the Orpheum. These "cool customers" execute a number of really clever and unusual acrobatic tricks and perform them with a grace and ease in a most nonchalant manner. They appear in street attire, with a most refreshing coolness, go through a series of very difficult acrobatic feats.

Cadets de Gascogne is the title of a French quartette very well known and very popular in Europe. This will be their season tour in America as they have been exclusively engaged for this circuit, and their originality and fine ability will no doubt appeal to vaudeville audiences here as it has abroad. The four includes one lady soloist and three male singers, and they dress in the attractive costume of the French peasant. Their repertoire is large and varied and they change their selections at nearly every performance.

There is no more pertinently named team in vaudeville than Crouch and Welch, who are known from coast to coast as "That Lively Pair." They will dash through the week at the Orpheum in their whirl of singing, talking, acrobatics and dancing. They are both featherweights, and to behold their high speed dancing and acrobatic feats, one would imagine they could toss themselves about with the ease a breeze carries a feather. They are both excellent comedians. George Welch affects the attire of the Oxford boy, while Rosa Crouch dresses in an effective soubrette costume.

Rosa Crouch is one of the twenty-five children of Prof. E. Nicholls Crouch, the author of "Kathleen Mavourneen," and other famous melodies. George Welch was at one time one of the best known of the "featherweight" boxers of England.

The Pianophiend Minstrels, a dozen lively and clever singers and dancers, who have scored a smashing big hit during the last week with their playings will remain one of the stellar features of the bill. Karl Emmy and his pets, the latter including a dozen bright little fox terriers who have been trained to perfection, will offer an act that is quite sure to delight the children and also to amuse the adults. It is one of the showiest animal acts on the stage.

Carlton, the English magician, one of the cleverest men in his line in the world, who has created a vast amount of talk with his illusions, is to be on the program. Carlton's burlesque hypnotism is always good for a laugh and again this feature alone has created a great deal of talk during the last week. Bob Pender's Giants, who do a series of grotesque clowning stunts, will round out the program. The motion pictures include views of recent events throughout the world. The Orpheum is showing these pictures week by week, and they constitute a novelty to all who are weary of the usual run of subjects used for motion pictures.

Considerable people where he was setting a big mark for himself in the famous music halls of that city. This youngster is a most amusing juggler, so much so that he has most of the old hands at the business beaten far in the race. He is gifted with irrepressible humor which he mingles liberally with his dexterity and the combination makes more than good every minutes he is out in front. Diversity is the life of vaudeville and in presenting Herbert Charles, this feature perhaps more than any other is responsible for the departure of this young man from the legitimate to saffly forth in the sketch of feminine impersonations he will present this week. Mr. Charles is particularly adapted to this kind of work, having devoted a great part of his stage career to feminine impersonations in various successful appearances. All of his lightning changes are made before the audience in order that they may gain an intimate knowledge of the art of making up.

The Bell Boy Trio is composed of three of the liveliest gaminers in the vaudeville. They are thoroughly equipped with everything that makes the laugh come, particularly with their songs and patter. Their act has decided earmarks of originality and looks like a big winner on this week's show.

MACDONOUGH

If you never saw Richard Carle in former years, don't fail to see him during his engagement at the Macdonough theater, which begins tomorrow, Monday night, September 11, and extends for three nights and a Wednesday matinee, with his latest success "Jumping Jupiter," for discerning critics have said that the elongated comedian was never so funny as in this place and never appeared in a funnier play. Carle's plays are all constructed for laughing purposes only, and as he writes them himself, stages them and acts the star part in them himself, he certainly has every opportunity to be as funny as the law allows. Crowds always flock to see Carle cut the capers.

that only Richard (himself) Carle can cut and sing songs in that placid, quaint style that only Carle can assume. Carle has not been in this vicinity for several years and the public has missed a treat in the tall, ball-headed, bespectacled genius who has a talent for amusing in a way strictly his own, so there can be little doubt that "Jumping Jupiter" will attract largely.

Next to the star it is wise to admit that the play is the thing and "Jumping Jupiter" is said to be the merriest musical farce of the year. It was elaborated by Mr. Carle from a tried and true farce by Sidney Rosenfeld called "The Purple Lady," and in its new form carries sufficient plot and probability to justify the fun and melody. Mr. Carle plays the part of an expert dermatologist, a profession that endears him to the woman of the plot he is forced to acknowledge as an extra wife and his struggles to disentangle himself from the tangle of lies in which he finds himself give this original comedian ample opportunities.

The music is from the prolific pen of Karl Hoschna, that genius of melody who wrote "Madam Sherry," "Three Times and a Host of Other Successes." In "Jumping Jupiter" he is heard in his best and such numbers as "Little Girl I Love You" and "Snuggle" will captivate the ear. Others which are popular are "I Like to Have a Flock of Men Around Me," "Thank You" and "The Strains of the Wedding March."

Surrounding Richard Carle is a splendid company headed by Edna Wallace Hopper, who is said to have the best role in her marvelous career, affording her the opportunities of displaying her talents as an actress and vocalist as well as wearing some gorgeous gowns. Other members of the cast include Charles Edward Wright, George S. Trimble, Harry H. Meyer, J. S. Kinslow, Isabelle Winlock, Albertine Benson, Inez Bauer and Helen Raymond.

The Macdonough Theater will offer on Thursday, Friday and Saturday night and matinee the comedy-hit of last season, "The Girl in the Taxi." This French

Some more great vaudeville is promised at the Oakland Orpheum this week. "The Woman Who Knew" is an admirable vehicle for the famous Anglo-Parisian artist, Madame Besson. It is the last and possibly the best of the playlets of the late Victor H. Smallley. It scintillates with a cleverness that would do credit to G. Bernard Shaw—indeed, critics have said that if Smallley had lived he would have held a place in American literature corresponding to that of Shaw in England. The title role is that of a brilliant, beautiful woman who finds fine excuses for her wrong doings and in a verbal battle with a lawyer protects her conquest from the rightful owner during a most sparkling scene. Madame Besson is famous both in London and Paris. She has made a name for herself in such roles as Zaza and Camille. In her support is a capable English company with Charles Dodsworth.

CHARITY IN A FLOATING HOSPITAL

MOTHERS AND CHILDREN ON UPPER DECK

THE world is full of charities, but none are more vital or as good for mankind in general as those which tend toward the betterment of the little ones—the coming generation—and the mothers of the nation.

It is this fact which makes the work of the floating hospitals of New York, the Helen C. Juillard, particularly, notable and good. Every day from the first of July, or thereabouts, until September, this splendidly and uniquely equipped boat sets sail for the Seaside hospital at New Dorp beach, Staten island. The entire charity is under the auspices of St. John's Guild and it is in most able hands.

This season the first trip down the bay of the floating hospital was made on July 5, when the summer outings for sick mothers and babies of the tenement districts began.

The day was an extremely hot one right in the midst of the great and prostrating heat wave which recently swept over the country, and the starting of the season just when life seemed most unendurable in the tenements could not have possibly been more timely or life-giving and saving.

Eight hundred and fifty mothers and children were furnished an opportunity to breathe life-giving sea breezes when the Helen C. Juillard swung broadside to the ocean breezes off New Dorp.

On the way down the doctors found that forty-nine of the mothers and their children needed more than a day's outing to make them right again, and transferred them by launch to the Seaside hospital at New Dorp beach, which thus opened its forty-fifth season. At this hospital the little patients are kept a week or more in the hope that they will improve. The steamer, after landing her patients at the hospital, returns to New York after sunset with the others, in order to be ready for a fresh load the next morning.

This beneficence is intended for the deserving poor in all parts of New York. Tickets for the trip are distributed through the department of health, hospitals, dispensaries, day nurseries, physicians, churches organizations in touch with the poor. Physicians and nurses are part of the outfit of the boat. There is no charge for their services, or for such hospital treatment on shore as they may advise. They also give the mothers instructions as to bathing and caring for the children at their homes.

The boat itself is a floating hospital. Those who arrive for the trip in condition to be put in bed are assigned to wards, while those who require only dietary care and fresh air go to the upper deck. There are medicated baths on board and showers for the women and children. Milk is passed around among the children morning and afternoon between meals.

In cases in which children are assigned to the land hospital—the mothers always go with them. When they become strong enough there the patients have the run of an ocean beach, of they may sit in the shade of a large cedar grove which faces the Atlantic, and is always breezy. Since it was established the land hospital has cared for more than 1,000,000 patients. Like the Juillard, it is supported by voluntary contributions.

A LITTLE MOTHER AND THE DOCTOR

With the Busy Nature Fakers

WINSTED, Conn.—When trolling for bass in Lake Mahkeeneac in the Berkshires, Frank Parsons got a strike. When he began to take in line a girl bathing 150 yards away shrieked, "I'm hooked!" She had dived off the float after Parsons' boat had passed and the trolling hook had caught her bathing suit. She swam to the boat and was unhooked.

NEW YORK.—John Skowinsky and Michael Webb, of Bloomfield, N. J., landed a carp from the Rockaway river, at Pine Brook, which weighed 27 pounds, but in doing so both men were thrown into the water. The fish practically ran away with the boat down the river, and then, turning suddenly, darted across the stream and upset the boat.

Skowinsky and Webb swam ashore and sought assistance. Another boat was procured, and with it the men towed the upset boat to the shore. When the boat was righted Skowinsky's line was still fastened to the seat. The men hauled in the line and found the carp still on the hook.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J.—Ernest C. Zeim, captain of active horse company, No. 3, went with John Walker to Sellers Beach to fish. They had not made their tackle ready when a huge object loomed up from the deep. On examining it through marine glasses the creature was found to be a turtle, weighing at least 80 pounds.

Walker and Zeim decided to capture the turtle. When Walker leaned over to get a good grip on it the turtle fought him and he fell overboard. A boat put out from the shore and after great difficulty Walker was rescued. The turtle was afterward captured.

NEW YORK.—Otto Schmidt, and Fred Dieckman, two young fishermen of Broad Channel, hooked a shark in Silver Hole, Jamaica bay. Schmidt turned their boat and tried to attack them in the water. They got in the boat again, killed the shark, and towed it ashore. It was 7 feet 9 inches long, and weighed 287 pounds.

PITTSBURG.—Up rainpools, down chimneys, through parlor windows, and along the highways and byways, thousands to a free hippodrome while police, firemen, letter-carriers and boys tried to capture them. Glad to escape surgeons' lances and hostiles' fire, the monkeys tracked general hospital, where they had been used in scientific experiments, the monkeys scurried hard to avoid recapture. Eight have been caught and returned to their cages in Riverside park, but the others are snugly hidden in and behind chimneys.

One is in the custody of a youngster whose mother holds the monkey for hostage until she is reimbursed for two pairs of lace curtains ripped and torn to shreds and some vases that were recklessly knocked down by Jocko after he slid down a chimney and invaded the family dining-room. There were twenty-four monkeys in the cage when Keeper-Bishop entered to clean it. One minute later there was none. A hurried scramble of the park attaches to recapture the fugitives followed. Everyone took a hand. Police reserves were called, but the job was too much. Firemen's ladders could not be shifted fast enough.

NEW YORK.—"We took our cat to the country with us this summer," said the flat dweller just back from vacation, "and that cat's education was expanded thereby. Puss had been anywhere out of our apartments, except once, when he fell from the fourth-story window to an awning below."

"Our apartment is about sixty feet long over all. For the first few days that he enjoyed the unknown freedom of a big yard up in the country the cat puzzled us by his antics. He would make a short run of fifty feet or so and then stop abruptly and look worried. He was snarling and growling and bawling, and he was very much annoyed. Finally we guessed what was the matter. That cat didn't care to run too far for fear he would run off the lawn."

LANCASTER, Pa.—For David Long, a tenant on the B. H. Brunner farm, from a setting of eggs one fowl was produced which was a combination of chicken, turkey, and guinea hen.

It had the shape of a turkey, head and body of the guinea and the markings of a Plymouth Rock chicken. It makes the noise of a guinea.

WAITING TO GO ABOARD

Queer Names You Find on Pension List

Tadpoles, buzzards and goats are about the last things on earth that one would expect to find drawing pensions from the United States Government for services during the Civil war, but, nevertheless, they are actually on the rolls as pensioners or applicants. Not only tadpoles and buzzards, but bees, kidneys, herons, oysters, socks, grasshopper and many other strange-sounding things that would seem to be at home almost anywhere in the world, but on the field of battle.

That such a queer assortment of veterans or veterans' relatives has existed was learned through a peculiar coincidence. Three officials of the Pension Bureau, unknown to one another, had been impressed by the oddity of the names coming under their jurisdiction years ago, and each had kept a pocket memorandum of the "freaks" against some time in the future when he would assemble them.

The three chanced to bring up the subject together, and, after they had recovered from their surprise, compared lists and compiled a conglomeration of names that not even the most exuberant fictionists could duplicate. The collection represents a pleasant and amusing labor of 10 or 15 years, and hardly could be matched in any other bureau in the world.

Some of the names are so ridiculous that it seems a wonder a human being could assume them and live, but their authenticity is vouched for. They are on the rolls of the Pension Bureau, and under these names pensions have been paid and are being paid, or the applications are pending. None of the names has been altered so much as a single letter to make it unique. It would be impossible for any one to make a parallel list without enormous research; moreover, the perusal of the pension book by persons not officially doing so is prohibited by law. As the oddity of the names was emphasized better by assembling them in groups, the three officials did this.

First comes a group with a patriotic streak, such as Mr. J. Yankee, Preserved Ireland, Mexico Washington and Alfred Constantino. Then follow a few in

BANK HAS MILITARY GUARD

LONDON.—There could hardly be found a better instance of the Englishman's love of custom and his passion for precedent in all things than in the mounting of a military guard at the Bank of England each night. It has been the practice ever since the Gordon riots, when an attack was made on the bank by the mob, for a detachment of guards to do "sentry go" there each night, and, of course, since it has been done for so long, the authorities can see no reason why they should discontinue it now.

When the practice was first started the soldiers used to be brought from the tower of London to the bank, but for some reason that was changed for a number of years, and they were brought in a most prosaic manner by train from an ordinary barracks. However, it was decided a few days ago that they should be marched up from the tower again. So if the visitor to London waits by the bank any evening about 6:30 he will see about thirty men marched up in parade dress with fixed bayonets and loaded ammunition belts under the charge of two sergeants and a lieutenant. And, by the way, these are the only troops that have the privilege of marching through the city of London with fixed bayonets; the corporation has made an exception in its very strict rules on the subject in the case of the bank guard.

The men themselves like this duty, as it is what is called here a "hot job." When they are marched back to quarters, about 7 in the morning, they can do as they please for the rest of the day, and they receive an extra 25 cents a day pay from the bank managers. Also they get a couple of exceedingly good blankets apiece to wrap themselves in while waiting for their turn to go on, and in the winter time big fires are lighted for them. This is apart from the shrewdly chosen refreshments which are left for them and which rumor has it they do more than justice to.

The lieutenant also fares well on bank duty. He has a snug little room and a dinner is brought to him from one of the best taverns in the city. He is allowed to entertain two guests, the only stipulation being made that they depart before midnight. The officer is only allowed one bottle of wine for himself and two for each of his guests, and what is lacking in quantity is made up in quality.

In the daytime a custom equally as useless, though not on such a big scale as the mounting of the guard, is kept up. In spite of the fact that detectives guard the doors and other places where a guard is necessary the old-fashioned beards are paid for the job. From a utilitarian point of view these officials are more in the way than anything else, but then as long as the Bank of England has been in existence the beards have posed it, so in accordance with the best precedents of English business houses the beards are allowed to remain.

the hardware line, like Minerva Hatchett, John Hammer and George Ax—all well deserving of pension if they lived up to their names.

Peter Beets, James Beest, Susan Cale, John Garlick and Daniel Mustard are associated with John Mustard, John Dew, Thomas Tongue, W. H. Lamb, David Mutton, W. T. Kidney, Samuel Heart, William Fish, Samuel Crab, William Oyster and John Herring.

One of the most peculiar, and its peculiarity is more pronounced here, is A-dam Buzzard, and flying neck and neck with Buzzard came George R. Swallow, Thomas Lark, William Fowl, Hiram Fowler and Pleasant Grass Swan. Then there are John Popple, David Oppe and a few doing a lunchroom business, such as John Gobbie, Jacob Meas, Enoch Fritters, Henry Pancaakes, John Crumb, Charles Drybread, George Goodbread, Thomas Butterbaugh, Irwin Huckleberry, Obadiah Gooseberry, John Jelly, Tom Cherry, Adam Apple and Sandy Dates.

William Roof, Margaret Floor and Joseph Door might well mingle in the building with John Mustard, John Dew, John Hammer and George Ax—all well deserving of pension if they lived up to their names.

Isham Vinegar heads a combination that would make a Raines law climb a tree if it saw him coming, for there are with him J. P. Dry, John Sourbeer, John Sourbeer, George M. Goodrum, Benjamin Sherry and S. G. Goodale. In the hazy background can be heard Andrew Laugh, David Jolly, Jane Shriek, Angulish Smith, Dreary Graves, Daniel Death and Mourning Ashby. Elkanah Dampman, Louise Wetright, Davis Mofist, Jephtha Showers, Milton Sloppy, James Blizard and Seacat Showers probably are weather prophets. David Tadpole, Cochran Roach, Robert Catt, Frank Geon, Henry Deer, Amos Hogs and James J. Frog are in the list.

The cream of the list is an aggregation that exudes a religious atmosphere. For instance, Susan Sunday, Christian Eastard, Philip Easternlight, Mary J. Chapel.—New York Herald.

Hunting Lions With Hounds, Paul Rainey's Feat

LONDON.—The latest mails from East Africa bring the news that the expedition of Paul Rainey, of Chicago University, is meeting with remarkable success in tracking and harrying lions and other carnivores with hounds. On his last trip, which was made in the Guaso Nyro country, among other mammals bagged were 27 lions and lionesses, four cheetahs, one leopard, eight wild dogs and a large number of hyenas and jackals.

Mr. Rainey has employed several classes of hounds in his hunting. First come the trackers, who are able to follow up the scent of a lion even if it is ten hours old. At first some difficulty was experienced because the dogs would run off on the wrong scent and several of them were lost in this manner. A little tuition got them in good working order and they were soon taught to stick to a lion's scent. The tracking animals are full bred bear hounds, and the fellows would go for the hind quarters of the lion, and if he turned on them they would go and others would catch on, thus keeping the lion busy in repelling their attacks.

Among the hounds there are several staghounds used for jackals. These staghounds were able to overtake their quarry in a hundred yards and after that to follow up with the jackal. Hyenas and other flesh carnivores were also brought down by the staghounds.

One curious fact is that little or no damage was done to the attacking dogs by lions; but when they went against warhogs the tale was different, and most of the dogs were killed. The dogs were inflicted by the old pigs.

With Mr. Rainey on this trip, which started on April 10, were Dr. Johnstone, J. C. Hemmett, a photographer; Hunter Black and Messrs. Heller, Outram and Nalroth. Leaving Nairobi, the starting point of all such expeditions, the party struck out for the Guaso Nyro, thence cutting across the German border and into the direction of the Guaso Nyro by way of the Lolita plans, and so on into Nalroth, which was reached on June 9.

The greatest day, and one not likely soon to be forgotten by the party, was while they were in the region of the good luck in rounding up some eighteen lions by means of the hounds. The chase hunters came upon the lions and started in with their rifles. Eight lions were killed.

A lioness managed to escape the harrying dogs and slipped by the camp, where an Askar took a pot shot at her, hitting her in the left groin. The lioness attempted to crawl off with the aid of her forelegs.

Mr. Hemmett thought it would be a good opportunity to get a moving picture of the lioness charging. Approaching to within 50 yards of the wounded lioness, he fired a shot, which was aimed at the lioness's head.

Mr. Hemmett, supported on the right by Mr. Rainey, with a 350 and Mr. Black, with a 450, began to set up his camera. The lioness showed signs of charging, so one of the native boys was told to throw stones at her. A snarl was the only response. The lioness continued to endeavor to crawl off, but fell back, this time facing the camera.

Mr. Black shouted "Look out, she means business!" Mr. Hemmett was ready to fire, but he had already killed one of the lions, and thinking she was only going to give a last shot and die, did not fire. The lioness turned the handle until the animal got out of focus.

At 15 yards Mr. Outram fired, but failed to stop her. Mr. Hemmett endeavored to prepare his tripod to jab her when she sprang, but seemed unable to move. Mr. Black, who during the whole process was as cool as a cucumber, held his fire until the animal was 15 feet off. Mr. Hemmett then let her have one barrel of his 470. His finger was ready on the trigger to give her the other barrel, but he saved his fire when he saw the lioness with one last bound fall three feet from the camera, driving her head into the ground.

When he was saved, but Mr. Hemmett would likely have suffered severely if Mr. Black's last shot had not caught the animal in the brain.

By this time Mr. Rainey and his party are well out on another trip in another part of the country.

In the Guaso Nyro country a Dutch youth 21 years of age singled handed killed seven lions in ten minutes, which is a record, even in East Africa. He was in charge of an ox team and at dawn he arrived at a little stream known as Deer loose, where he was attacked by nine lions. The young man jumped on his wagon for his gun, a 350, and opened fire on the lions, who had already killed one of the oxen. In less than ten minutes he had fired ten shots, with the result that seven lions lay dead in front of him, three lions and four lionesses, the furthest only 15 yards distant. The other two escaped, but both were wounded.

A woman who has no opinion of her own when she was engaged has all the more after she is married.

A self-made man nearly always looks like the kind of a job he might be expected to turn out.—New York Post.

Love Gave Abe Lincoln His Start

ST. LOUIS.—Love of a lassie, Mary Lillard Warnick, started Abraham Lincoln on the way to fame. For, in crossing the Sangamon river to see Mary Warnick, Lincoln got a wound ducking and had his feet frozen. His armor was of the sort that could not be cooled even by sudden immersion in water. He was obliged to remain there for three weeks. It was during this period that he got his first look at a law book. Major Warnick was sheriff of Macon county and had the statutes in his house.

This statement is made upon the assurance of Captain Robert Warnick, of Blue Mound, Ill., brother of Mary Lillard Warnick, Captain Warnick, who is 36 years old, has been a resident of Blue Mound township for 35 years. He knew Abraham Lincoln well when the great war President was a gawky farm hand, then in his twenties, lived with his shiftless father, Thomas Lincoln, on the north bank of the Sangamon river near Blue Mound. Abraham worked many seasons for Major Warnick, father of his inamorata twice over. Lincoln was one of the most distinguished citizens of central Illinois in the "prairie-breaking" days, which were also heart-breaking, man-breaking and woman-breaking days.

To visit Mary Warnick the tall country lad was obliged to cross the Sangamon river. In order to accomplish this he made a "dugout," which, as the name implies, was a log hollowed out with file and ax into the form of a rude canoe. One night, in the winter of 1829, this dugout capsize and precipitated its owner into the water. A wetting even in an icy stream does not seem to have chilled the ardor of Lincoln's passion. He tied up his rude shallop and went his way to Major Warnick's house, some three miles down the Springfield and Pere Haute pike. It was bitterly cold, and when Abe reached his destination it was found that, though his destination was a warm and comfortable home, he was a frozen man.

He read and reread the statutes of Illinois in Major Warnick's home, and when he left, he carried them with him. In 1830 he moved to Springfield, where he began the career which landed him in the White House and made him one of the world's great men.

POLICING VAST TERRITORY

Last year these 649 men made 10,489 arrests, and convictions resulted in 9042 cases. Their wonderful work can be hardly appreciated until one stops to realize that this entire force which patrols a country one-third as large as the whole of Europe is no larger than the police force of a city like Buffalo, Detroit or Cleveland. The Athabasca and Mackenzie river district, for instance, is patrolled by three officers and twenty-five men, and this district comprises 620,000 square miles, slightly less than a twelfth part of the North American continent, and about a fifth of the whole of Canada. And yet no lawbreaker is safe in the remotest of this vast country, for once set upon a trail, a man hunter of the Royal Mounted is a veritable Nemesis. If a murder is committed in an American city the whole police and detective force of that city, perhaps numbering hundreds of men, is put into action; if a similar crime is committed in the Mackenzie river district, for instance, one man is detailed to bring in the murderer. And in nine cases out of ten he does. He is absolutely fearless in the face of odds, for only men of indomitable courage are retained in the service. For six months to a year for the time allotted for a "rookie," or new recruit, to prove himself. After that first year he either becomes a "reliable" of the Royal Mounted or a "discarded." Success.

"THE ANCIENTS CALLED THE NOSE THE ORNAMENT OF THE FACE."

Intemperate Living Will Ruin It"

This Nose Means Not Only Good Health but Good Nature.

A Large, Well Shaped Nose Is an Ornament to the Face.

BY LILLIAN RUSSELL

(Copyright, 1911, By Lillian Russell.)

WEBSTER defines the nose as "the prominent part of the face," which is the organ of smell, consisting of two similar cavities called nostrils, and serving to modulate the voice in speaking, to discharge moisture from the eye, and to afford a passage for the breath.

The ancients called the nose "the ornament of the face," and in many of the old saws handed down to us from ages past it figures prominently. We have all heard of "a nose of wax" attributed to a person easily led by others; "having his nose on the grindstone," "paying through the nose," "biting the nose to spite the face," "meddling nose," "leading by the nose," "carrying the nose high," and many others—each in itself expressing decidedly human characteristics.

All ancient philosophers were great students of physiognomy, and it is a subject that has always had a peculiar fascination for mankind. Aristotle was one of its first exponents, but, like many of the then so-called occult scientists, he tried to make generalities instead of going into the study from a strictly scientific point of view.

The modern diagnostician looks much to the nose for his knowledge of the state of the health of his patients. Perhaps to a greater degree than any other organ of the body its webbing contributes to the health of the person whose face it adorns.

Nose an Acute Barometer.

As the organ of smell and part of the apparatus of respiration and voice, it performs a notable function. Besides for the very breath of life are we dependent upon the lower part of the nose [the respiratory region] to filter and warm the air we breathe. It is an acute barometer and quickly registers the fact that its owner is cold, that her circulation is poor, or that she has been injudicious in the selection of food, or, as the saying goes:

"Sinnamon and ginger, nutmeg and cloves,

That gave her that jolly red nose."

A red nose is sometimes caused by tight lacing and sometimes by indigestion, but whatever the source its unsightly nature is at all times distressing to the owner.

While the brain is the principal ingredient in our makeup, being the seat of the mind or intellect, bone ranks next. It typifies the executiveness, energy, will power, intensity, and endurance of the individual. The more bone people possess the better able they are to endure physical hardships. A person may have an enormous brain, but unless he has high and well developed facial bones he is like a balloon without ballast to keep it steady or a ship with no rudder to guide it.

The character of facial bones is seen in the height of the bridge of the nose, in the prominence of the cheek bones, in the length of the jaw from the ear downward before it turns in an angle to form the chin, and in the breadth of the chin itself. The angle of the jaw defines the amount of will and determination; height and prominence of bone mean intensity; width and breadth denote permanency and vitality. Hence persons possessing high facial bones are more energetic and intense for the moment but not so reliable in their actions as those with broad, wide heads and faces.

Little Noses Rule of Today.

Close observers among novelists have always had much to say about noses. Edith Wharton, in her book, "A Motor Flight Through France," devotes a considerable space to the subject of noses. She says:

"We live in a day of little noses. That once stately feature, intrinsically feudal and aristocratic in character, has shrunk to democratic insignificance, like many another fine expression of individualism. And so one must look to the old painters and sculptors to see what a nose was meant to be—the prow of the face; the evidence of its owner's standing, of his relation to the world, and his inheritance from the past."

The nose with a ridge at the top denotes the highest mark of intensity and executiveness. It indicates aggressiveness and the desire to fight on the least provocation.

The convex ridge, commonly called the "Roman nose," is found on people of an enterprising character, giving force and executiveness to its possessor; when the ridge is in the middle of the nose, it is also a sign of moderation of intensity and embraces quietism—the taking up of other people's cudgels and fighting their battles for them. This nose is found in persons of highly wrought and rather romantic dispositions; it denotes protective and chivalrous qualities, and the individual is easily irritated by anything like encroachment upon the rights of others—particularly of children and of the simple and weak who cannot well defend themselves.

A Rag Nose Is Equant in a Youthful Profile but It Is Not So "Cute" When You See It from the Front.

When the ridge is at the end of the nose, giving it an upward tendency, then self-defense comes to the fore. This nose signifies sensitiveness to self-advancement, and if not counterbalanced by benevolence, great selfishness would reign supreme. It is the pushing nose—that of an individual who generally manages to be first in everything, who is capable of taking care of himself and not easily put down. The person with the up-tilted nose is witty, pert, and wanting in reserve.

The Grecian nose has no ridge whatsoever, and is perfectly straight. It indicates excessive refinement, and when it comes direct from the forehead without a ridge at the top, leaving a depth in the inner corner of the eye, the organ of form is always largely developed, revealing architectural tastes and abilities. The Grecian nose typifies a love and appreciation of art. Such an individual does not attack, neither does he defend his friends or himself, and to a certain extent is rather wanting in what is termed "grit" or strength of character. He has a love of repose and refined luxury; he seldom does anything vulgar or coarse, for the simple reason that it gives him no pleasure.

Characteristics of Perfect Nose.

Lavater claims that a beautiful nose is never associated with an ugly face. It is possible, he adds, to be ugly and yet have beautiful eyes; but a regular nose necessarily exacts a happy harmony of the other features. Many beautiful eyes are seen for one beautiful nose.

The perfect nose, according to this physiognomist, must unite the following characteristics: Its length must be equal to that of the forehead; it should present a slight depression near its root; seen in front, its arch should be wide and with its sides almost parallel, but its width should be a little more noticeable near the middle; the point of the nose must neither be sharp nor fleshy; the lower contour precisely outlined, neither too narrow nor too wide; the flanks of the nose must be distinctly seen from before, and the nostrils delicately shortened below; in profile the lower part of the nose should be only one-third of its length; the nostrils should be more or less pointed in front and rounded behind—they must be lightly curved and divided equally by the profile of the upper lip; the sides of the nose will form a sort of wall above, it will almost join the orbital rock and at the side of the eye it will be at least half an inch wide.

Today many persons of great intelligence and merit have noses which do not conform with Lavater's standard, but it is wise to discriminate between the kind of merit which distinguishes them. We have all seen men of great integrity and generosity who are uncommonly judicious, and who yet possess small noses which slope in profile though otherwise happily organized. They possess estimable qualities, but these are limited to a disposition gentle and patient, attentive and docile, formed for receiving and relishing delicate sensations.

Thinness of the bridge of the nose indicates generosity and tendency to part with money quickly, while noses that are wide at the bridge and spread on to the face shows acquisitiveness and love of gain.

What the Tip Indicates.

The nose which is wide at the tip indicates a trusting and confiding nature. Queen Alexandra has a nose of this description. When pointed, it shows reserve and caution. If it droops, suspicion and intrigue are strongly indicated; and it generally belongs to the person who hatches plots, listens behind doors, and peeps through keyholes.

The wings of the nose and nostrils are furnished with muscles of compression and expansion. As compression indicates a restraining of energy and expansion, looseness, and freedom, the persons with large nostrils are usually courageous, while the smaller nostrils indicate a lack of it.

Courageous people and animals scent danger and seem to invite it. On the contrary, those who are timid and nervous move cautiously and scarcely dare to breathe; their nostrils get no action, remain close to the face, and are consequently small in size. The hare and the cat have the smallest nostrils in the animal creation, and they are the most timid, while the bull, the mastiff, and large leonine animals have large nostrils. Long, narrow nostrils also denote activity and physical courage.

Pride curves the nostrils upward at the back, making the wings curl. Nostrils which run up the front of the nose, resembling the snout of the pig, suggest coarseness of taste. Nostrils which elongate downward on to the cheeks denote dramatic talent and the faculty of imitation. Where the nostrils elongate and the nose tilts it means comedy, as a tilted nose suggests wit and fun, while a drooping nose with elongated nostrils indicates reserve and tragic force. In all her projects Nature rejects lines perfectly straight. The nose whose ridge is broad, no matter whether straight or curved, always announces superior faculties. When the wings of the nose are free and movable they denote great delicacy of freedom, which may easily degenerate into sensuality and voluptuousness.

Intemperance at Cost of Beauty.

The woman who eats intemperately or drinks spirituous liquor of any kind may be sure that after 35 her nose will coarsen and nothing but the strictest diet and simplest food will bring it back to its youthful contour. About the curving nostrils and the wings of the nose is a place where you usually find blackheads. One should be careful in washing the face to rub this part carefully, keeping it thoroughly clean, and at the slightest hint of blackheads it should be scrubbed at night with a lather made of tincture of green soap and water and some healing cream put on afterwards. It is almost impossible to change the shape of the nose without a surgical operation after one has grown to adult age, but if mothers would make a little effort they could mold the plastic bones of their babies' noses with ease.

I need not mention the fact that mothers should be careful to see that their children have not adenoids, as these growths not only change the contour of the face but they are sometimes the precursor of tuberculosis, and I have known them to affect the brain of children, making them appear stupid.

Above all things, no woman who cares for her appearance should neglect to powder her nose judiciously, as nothing so detracts from the beauty of one's face as to have that part of it which the ancients called its chief ornament look red and oily.

OLD OPIE DILLDOCK'S STORIES

(Copyright: 1911: by The Tribune Company, Chicago, Ill.)

I was summoned by a man high in the nation's state affairs to deliver a message to one of his subordinates. This was in the old days of the "pony express," before railroads were zigzagging across the country, and it therefore behooved me to catch a wild mustang—one of the fleet ones, and tame him.

So I lassoed one of the fastest desert wild horses that ever was captured. He gave me a big fight before he finally made up his mind that I was his master, but I sat upon his back easily and let him have his fling. In seven or eight hours he was completely tired out and even understood what I said to him.

Across the mountainous country and over great plains we dashed at breakneck speed, for I had lost so much time in breaking this mustang of mine that I was forced to put him to his utmost speed. I had a message to write, but to my great consternation and chagrin I learned I had not brought a pencil.

I had plucked several willows on my mad dash over the rocky slopes and sandy plains, and puffing vigorously at my cigar until it burned brightly, I held these willows to the fire and burned them thoroughly. Necessity being the mother of invention, I thus provided myself with fairly good charcoal with which to write.

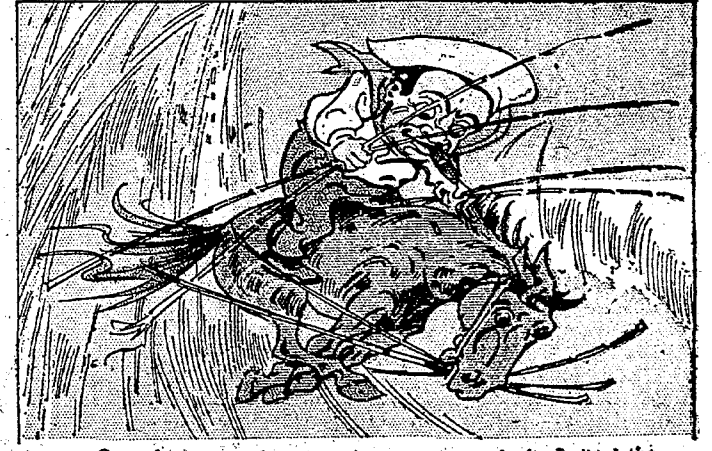

So intense was I on jotting down notes of interest that I gave little heed to the time; but my little mustang was now going at a most magnificent pace, almost crouching to the ground in his long strides. I gave him free rein as I wrote my notes on the topography of the land and he did the rest without prompting.

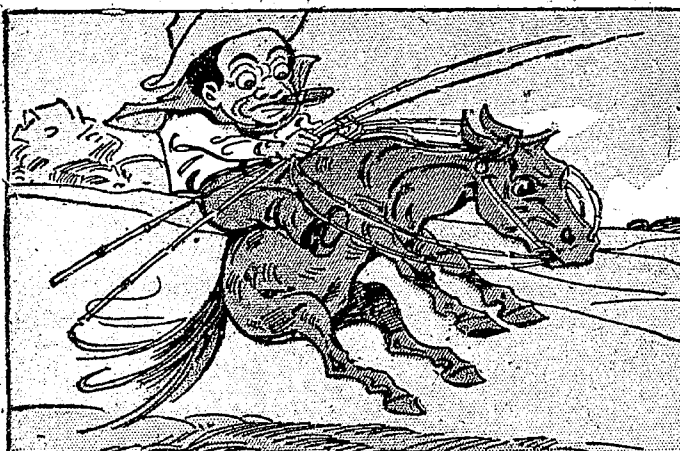

Suddenly, however, I was reminded of a wide ravine which I had to navigate. The sides of the mountain at this point were precipitate and the width of the chasm was about four hundred feet. Naturally, I knew my mustang couldn't jump across this, so I prepared for the emergency as we reeled off mile after mile.

Patting the horse on the shoulder to let him know I fully appreciated his loyalty, and whispering words of encouragement in his ear, I turned and rode backwards upon the faithful mount. With great care I selected the longest and strongest strands of hair and plucked them gently from his flowing tail.

On and on we sped, and coming across a canebrake I urged the animal into the midst of it. Faithfully he crashed into the brake, and as we plunged through it I plucked several of the stouter reeds. These I clutched in my hands as the mustang, with a sort of triumph, emerged on the other side of the brake.

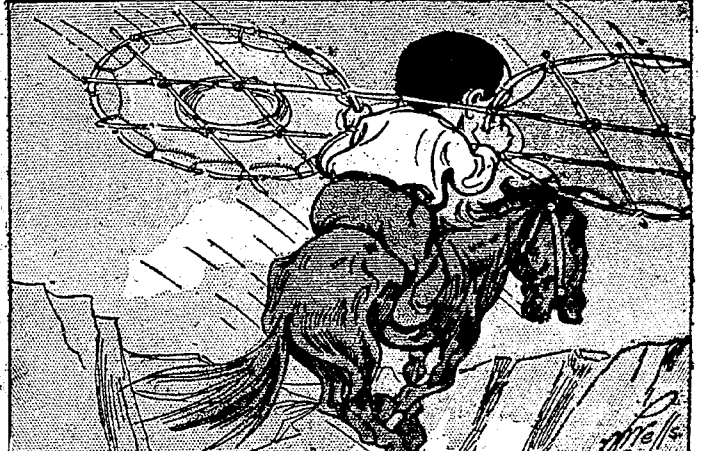

Coming out into the open country, I started to construct two large wheels, resembling, as I recall them now, a huge dumbbell. Over the horse's head I looped the strands of hair and the reeds, the intelligent animal holding them between his teeth as I hurriedly, but neatly, went on with my weaving and tying.

The ground had grown quite rough and rocky as we flew along, and it was surprising to me how smoothly the mustang hurdled large stones. I was working with almost feverish haste, for I knew we soon would come upon the ravine and I did not desire to waste any time when we came to it. The horse seemed to know it, too.

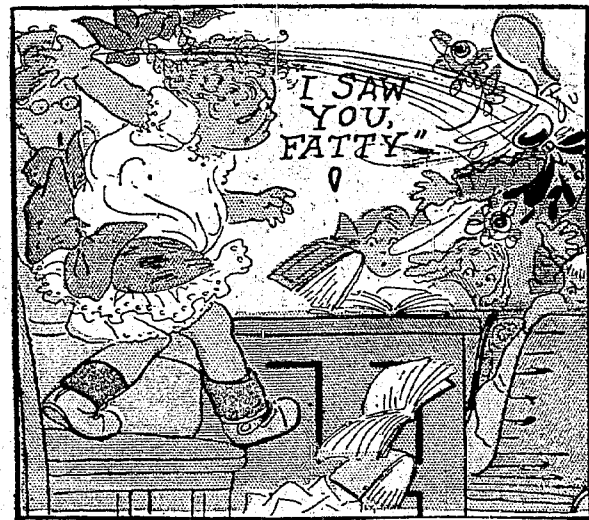

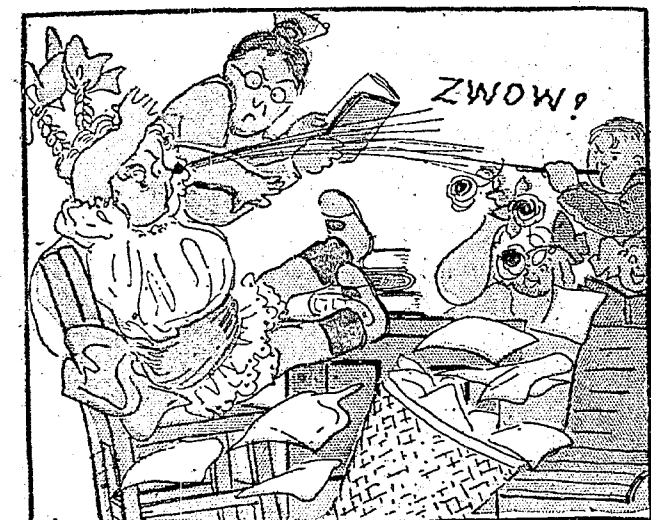

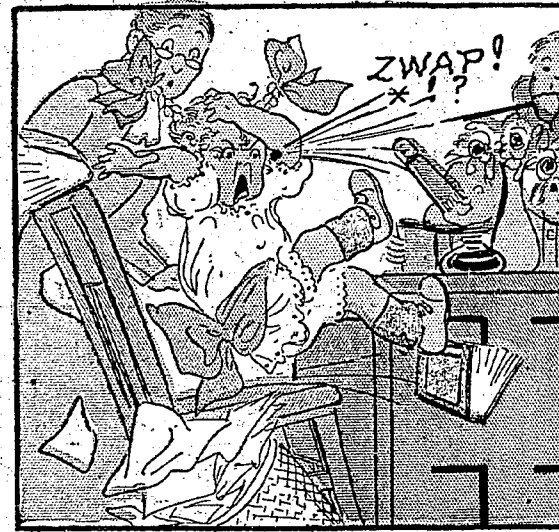

Snatching off my big sombrero, I fastened it securely to the circle at one end of my frail dumbbell. Then I tore off a great big handkerchief that I had knotted about my neck and, without checking the speed of my dear old horse a particle, I tied the handkerchief about the other globular end of the apparatus.

Then I thrust my head through a space in the middle of the machine, the great round ends on either side of my head. An instant later we came to the ravine. I urged the horse over the cliff, the wind caught the improvised sails of my machine, and we floated over the canyon—the first aeroplane glide ever made.

The Bungalow Living Room
By L. W. SICKERT.

Perhaps no other room in the California bungalow is so interesting as the living room. It is this room which reflects the congeniality and hospitality of the family.

The sketch shown above is interesting, for it shows a somewhat different arrangement of furniture. The idea of having the table and Davenport match, both in length and height, is not a new one. The table here shown is built on very simple lines, following the craftsman's idea. The settee or Davenport is of the same style and is faced toward the fireplace. With the approach of cooler weather one welcomes an opportunity to settle down among the cushions, and, warmed by the heat of the glowing embers, enjoy a favorite volume by the soft mellow light of the craftsman lamp on the table.

The windows in the sketch have light cream colored storm curtains, with an overhanging of valance. The curtains are made to hang about five inches below the sill. The Davenport is upholstered in the same velour and the walls are covered with a Japanese grass-cloth of the same color, a warm, rich brown. The rug is plain brown, with a suggestion of green in the border to relieve the scheme. The tile in the fireplace is the brown unglazed, the whole combining into a most harmonious general effect.

THE TRIBUNE welcomes inquiries regarding the bungalow and interiors shown in this series. Address all inquiries to "Tribune Bungalow Editor," 22 Bacon block, Oakland, Cal.

CALIFORNIA DEATH RATE IS COMPARATIVELY SMALL

Registration Area Vital Statistics Are Given Out in U. S. Preliminary Report

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 9.—Preliminary statements regarding the vital statistics of the United States for 1910, were submitted to Census Director Dorrance by Dr. Cressy L. Wilbur, chief statistician of vital statistics in the Bureau of the Census.

One of these is a comparative summary of the number of deaths from all causes per 1000 population in the death registration states for 1900 and 1910. In California the rate per 1000 population was 16.5 in 1910 and 18.3 in 1900; in Connecticut, 15.6 in 1910 and 18.0 in 1900; in Indiana, 13.5 in 1910 and 14.2 in 1900; in Maine, 17.1 in 1910 and 19.0 in 1900; in Maryland, 16.0 in 1910; in Massachusetts, 16.1 in 1910 and 18.3 in 1900; in Michigan, 14.1 in 1910 and 14.0 in 1900; in Minnesota, 10.9 in 1910; in Montana, 10.6 in 1910; in New Hampshire, 17.3 in 1910 and 18.5 in 1900; in New Jersey, 15.5 in 1910 and 17.3 in 1900; in New York, 16.1 in 1910 and 18.2 in 1900; in Ohio, 13.7 in 1910; in Pennsylvania, 15.6 in 1910; in Rhode Island, 17.1 in 1910 and 19.0 in 1900; in Utah, 10.3 in 1910; in Vermont, 15.0 in 1910 and 16.5 in 1900; in Washington, 10.0 in 1910; and in Wisconsin, 12.0 in 1910. Stillbirths are excluded from the basic figures.

In 1900, California, Colorado, Maryland, Minnesota, Montana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Utah, Washington and Wisconsin were not included in the death registration area from which transcripts of all deaths are returned to the census bureau for statistical purposes, so that comparisons for these states cannot be made.

Another tabulation shows that there were 85,399 deaths from all forms of tuberculosis reported during the calendar year 1910 from the death registration area. The estimated population of Continental United States on July 1, 1910, was 92,309,448, while that contained in the death registration area was 53,843,896, or 58.2 per cent of the grand total. On this basis there were 1603 deaths from all forms of tuberculosis per 100,000 population in 1910.

In the death registration area in 1909, the number of deaths, by sex, from tuberculosis of lungs was 29,456 males; 29,584 females; tuberculosis of the larynx, 529 males; 276 females; tuberculosis meningitis, 2448 males; 2187 females; abdominal tuberculosis, 1339 males; 1643 females; Pott's disease, 425 males; 298 females; tuberculosis abscesses, 43 males; 30 females; white swelling, 233 males; 140 females; tuberculosis of other organs, 516 males; 369 females; general tuberculosis, 611 males; 573 females; scrofula, 63 males; 47 females.

From diseases of the respiratory system the number of deaths, by sex, registered from the death registration area in 1909 were: laryngitis, 189 males; 146 females; other diseases of the larynx, 257 males; 199 females; diseases of the thyroid body, 40 males; 154 females; acute bronchitis, 2584 males; 2904 females; bronchopneumonia, 10,757 males; 10,289 females; pneumonia, 10,757 males; 10,289 females; pleurisy, 21,443 males; 21,443 females; 1215 males; 867 females; congestion of lungs, 1299 males; 1251 females; gangrene of lungs, 159 males; 62 females; asthma and emphysema, 859 males; 697 females; hemorrhage of lungs, 375 males; 226 females; other diseases of the respiratory system, 470 males, 284 females.

In the death registration area, during the calendar year 1910, the deaths from typhoid fever numbered 12,673; malaria, 1177; measles, 6593; scarlet fever, 6285; whooping cough, 6146; diphtheria and croup, 11,531; influenza, 7774; purulent infection and septicemia, 1877; tuberculosis of the lungs, including "acute miliary tuberculosis," 75,211; simple meningitis, 5347; cerebro spinal meningitis, 2054; cerebrospinal fever, 220; pneumonia, 10,757; and unqualified, 60,187; diarrhoea and enteritis, under 2 years of age, 54,285; diarrhoea and enteritis, 2 years of age and over, 8914.

TYPHOID BUSY.

Another comparative table shows that in the death registration for the census year 1899-1900, the death rate per 1000 of population was 18.8; for the census year 1909-1910, the rate was 19.5; for the calendar year 1909, the rate was 14.4; and for the calendar year 1910 the rate was 15.0. In 1899-1900 the population of the registration area formed 17.0 per cent of the grand total for continental United States; in 1909-1910, 58.2 per cent; in 1909, 56.1 per cent; and in 1910, 58.3 per cent.

In the state of Washington the number of deaths from all causes, exclusive of stillbirths, per 1000 population, in 1908 was 9.3; in 1909, 9.8; in 1910, 9.7; in 1911, 9.8; in 1912, 9.7; in 1913, 9.7; in 1914, 9.7; in 1915, 9.7; in 1916, 9.7; in 1917, 9.7; in 1918, 9.7; in 1919, 9.7; in 1920, 9.7.

LINCOLN'S BODYGUARD IN SERIOUS CONDITION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—William A. Lewis, President Lincoln's bodyguard and for 35 years a White House employe, is in a critical condition at his home as a result of a stroke of apoplexy. He is 85 years old.

BROUGHT ALONG HIS TOOTH BRUSH

M. Saint-Saens Needed it to Turn His Door Key.

PARIS, Sept. 9.—The "Ciel de Paris" contains an amusing story of M. Saint-Saens, the composer of "Samson et Dalila." The celebrated master is above all things fond of the sun and spends most of his time in the Canary islands; but whenever he comes to Paris all the ladies in search of "lions" for their evening parties vie with each other to secure his presence in their salons.

One of these lately succeeded in persuading him to accept an invitation to dinner, promising to send and fetch him, also to deposit him at his door when he left, his only stipulation being that he should be allowed to make his adieux at 10 o'clock. The son of his hostess was dispatched in good time and found M. Saint-Saens in a velvet coat seated before his piano. He rose at once, however, and asked for ten minutes to dress, at the end of which he appeared tying his white cravat. As he was shutting his door behind him he ejaculated: "Good gracious! One minute more! I have forgotten my tooth brush!"

YOUTH SURPRISED.

The young man could hardly believe his ears, but to his amazement saw his guest dive into his dressing room and reappear with a tooth brush, which he put away in his breast pocket. On arriving home he told his mother, who, in some uneasiness, informed her friends, and everybody was in wonderment as to what the great composer was going to do with his tooth brush. Every eye was fixed on him throughout the dinner, watching him as he ate and drank and used his finger glass. In the drawing room Saint-Saens talked with the ladies and played any piece that was asked of him till 10 o'clock struck, when he bade farewell politely to the company.

The journey home was without incident and when they reached his house M. Saint-Saens simply offered to shake hands and say good-night. Curiosity was too strong, though, for the youth, who said: "Excuse me, maître, but I should so much like to know why you so persistently wanted to take your tooth brush with you."

"Oh, my young friend, replied Saint-Saens, 'It is very simple. My lock is very stiff and I always hurt my fingers in turning the key. So I now pass the handle of my tooth brush in the ring of the key and turn it easily. Voilà!'

It was, in truth, the most natural thing in the world when it was explained, and again wishing his host good evening, the composer gravely stepped inside.

CONVICTS PLEAD TO STAY BEHIND BARS

HUTCHINSON, Kan., Sept. 9.—Carl Ralston and Sam Campbell, inmates of the state reformatory here, have petitioned against being paroled or pardoned before their terms have expired.

The sentences of both expire at the end of the year. Both are learning trades in the reformatory and desire to remain until they have finished. It was expected that both would be recommended for paroles at the next meeting of the reformatory board.

GRANGE HASTENS TO PRAISE TAFT

Unexpected Support of Reciprocity Agreement Is Received.

BEVERLY, Mass., Sept. 9.—Unexpected support of the Canadian reciprocity agreement from a part of the Connecticut Grange came to President Taft yesterday. Recently the executive committee and the officers of that Grange declared that they did not agree with the President's reciprocity idea and refused the proposition of state fair officials to yesterday the day on which Taft visited the fair at Hartford, "Grange Day."

The protest against this action came to the summer White House today from Orange Grange No. 128, in the shape of a resolution, which recited that Orange Grange deplored the action of the officers of the state Grange in treating so discourteously the first citizen of the land and deprecated the authority to do so.

ACCUSED OF STEALING FOR SEVEN YEARS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 9.—Harry B. Holliday was arrested here, charged with the theft of money which may amount to $10,000, from the Brown-Ketcham Iron Works, during his service of seven years as paymaster of the Haughville plant of the company. Holliday, it is said, has confessed.

The Holliday thefts are said to be in no way connected with the defalcations of Frank V. Vinson, purchasing agent of the company, who was arrested last July and admitted a shortage which may reach $60,000.

Brown-Ketcham Iron Works is now in the hands of a receiver.

AUGUST DECLINE IS LONG SLIDE

One Billion Dollars Less Than the Late in July Dealings.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—A Wall street statistician estimated today that the market value of securities traded in on the New York stock exchange was $1,000,000,000 less than late in July, when prices reached the high point. Quotations today fell to the lowest level of the year.

Following the long decline last month, there came a recovery which began last week. The improvement was short-lived, however, and in the latter part of the week prices crumbled away steadily. The selling was of uncertain origin and was of the same mysterious character as that which was responsible for the August slump. The recent gains were cancelled, and today the active stocks fell below the bottom of the August decline.

Canadian Pacific, the heaviest loser of the day, declined six points. It is now 29 points below the high price of the year.

Students of the market admit they are unable to ascertain the direct cause of the heavy liquidation.

Conditions of Frank V. Vinson, purchasing agent of the company, who was arrested last July and admitted a shortage which may reach $60,000.

Brown-Ketcham Iron Works is now in the hands of a receiver.

HYDE AND VEILED WOMAN CREATE LONDON SURPRISE

British Capital Is Dazzled by Gorgeous Raiment, but Naught of Identity Is Revealed

(By CHESTER OVERTON.)

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The most interesting figure in London this week has been our friend James Hazen Hyde of Paris, who has deigned to visit England for the first time in eight years.

It has been an event for Mr. Hyde as well as for the natives, for here he has been compelled to speak English occasionally. A large number of persons have asked him if he had any intention of returning to New York, thus somewhat jarring him, by this time, well adjusted Parisian artistic temperament. Of the many rumors connected with his visit, one is that he intends to marry and that a present trip has something to do with such an intention, but when approached on the subject he airily raised his fingers with the old "Egalite Assurance" style, whispering gently:

"All such matters are dark secrets." It is a fact, however, that a woman is secretly with him continually here. She is always closely veiled, and as no one knows her, she is believed to be French. I saw him today at the Ritz hotel, where he is stopping. He certainly was picturesque, being clad in bright plaid trousers, velvet waistcoat, heavily braided morning coat, a flowing tie, a grey-inked and a large brown emerald and a large diamond. He was the admiration for all the hotel flunkies, many of them wondering audibly if their gorgeous guest really has so much money as is reported.

JOINED BY WOMAN.

While being interviewed he was joined by the woman, heavily veiled, as usual. He told me he intended to give England a fair chance this time by visiting Harrowgate, the great international, and Spa, where he will solemnly drink the waters for a week before returning to his dear Paris. He exhibited no curiosity on American affairs, but said he thought English women much more artistic than they were eight years ago.

Lily Elsie, queen of English musical comedy, who will shortly visit America in the new Lehar opera, "Count Luxemburg," is really going to marry at last, after spending several years in turning away the sons of Britain's most noble families. Lily, unlike American stage favorites, seldom grants an interview, even keeping her residence a mystery. She has refused to talk about the matter, but authoritative rumors at the clubs have it that the object of her choice is John Bullough, a brother of Sir George Bullough, owner of the Isle of Rhun and Kinloch Castle in Argyshire.

This Bullough's only claim to fame is that he was the husband of Maudie Darrell, a well-known London actress, who died recently. He also possesses an annual income of $400,000, which may have something to do with Lily's decision. Anyhow Marc Klaw declares that Miss

WELL-KNOWN LAWYER CURED OF ECZEMA

By Cuticura Remedies Which He Recommends for Skin Troubles.

"While attending school at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1882, there was a small-pox scare, and we were all vaccinated. Presumably, I caught the virus used. I became afflicted with boils, which lasted for about two years, when the affliction assumed the form of an eczema on my face, the lower part of my face being inflamed most of the time. There would be water-blisters rise up, and open, and wherever the water would touch it would burn, and cause another one to rise. After the blister would open, the place would scab over, and would burn and itch so as to be almost unbearable at times. In this way the sores would spread from one place to another, back and forth over the whole of my upper lip and chin, and the whole of my face, would be a solid sore. This condition continued for four or five years, without getting any better, and in fact got worse all the time, so much so that my wife begged me to let it prove fatal.

"During all this time of boils and eczema, I doctored with the best physicians of this part of the country, but to no avail. Finally I decided to try Cuticura Remedies, which I did, applying the Cuticura Ointment to the sores, and using the Cuticura Soap for washing. In a very short time the whole of my face improved, and I continued to use the Cuticura Remedies until within less than a year I was well again, and have not had a recurrence of the trouble since, which is over twenty years.

Remedies to others ever since, and have great faith in them as remedies for skin diseases." (Signed) A. C. Brandon, Attorney-at-Law, Greenville, O., Jan. 17, 1911. Send to Potter & Co. Corp., Dept. 3A, Boston, for free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

Lady Randolph's Second Husband Springs Surprise

LIEUTENANT GEO. CORNWALLIS-WEST, the second husband of Lady Randolph Churchill, Cornwallis-West, who is ill in a New York hospital, where he has undergone two operations for appendicitis. The friends of the Cornwallis-Wests were not aware that the lieutenant was in the United States until his illness became known.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The presence in New York of Lieutenant George Cornwallis-West, the second husband of Lady Randolph Churchill, Cornwallis-West, comes as a great surprise to New York friends of the couple. Neither is the surprise an agreeable one, for it is learned that the lieutenant is now ill in a local hospital, where he recently underwent two operations.

Lieutenant West was in the United States. It appears, however, that he arrived in Canada on August 3, from England, and went into the wilds on a hunting trip, not informing his friends of his coming, as he wished to take a rest. He soon became ill and went to New York on August 15, was taken to the Mt. Sinai hospital, where Dr. Berg operated on him for appendicitis. Later, a second operation was performed. The latter was successful and the lieutenant will recover.

PLAN TO REDUCE CUSTOMS FORCE

United States to Save $100,000 by Cutting Off Heads.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The vigilant government custom collectors stand guard at 124 ports. The income from many of these collectors is so trifling that the government contemplates reducing the number to 73. It is estimated that a saving of $100,000 may be effected in this way. At some of our custom houses it costs $269 to collect a single dollar. More than 40 custom houses the cost of collection is greater than the money received.

The best record in this respect was made at Springfield, Mass., where it cost but 1.8 per cent for each dollar collected. Dubuque, Iowa, ranked next, and New York came third, where the expense was 2.1 per cent. There are ten ports where the cost is less than 3 per cent. The most expensive port is Natchez, Miss., where last year $580.40 was expended to collect $2.15 in customs.

STATE GAME FARM TO REMAIN NEAR HAYWARD

NEW SITE FOR PRESERVE TO BE CHOSEN

No Change to Be Made for the Present, Says Commissioner Babcock.

Citizens' Committee Wants a Larger Area in Which to Raise Game Birds.

HAYWARD, Sept. 9.—A delegation from the local Chamber of Commerce has been assured by State Commissioner Babcock in San Francisco that no steps will be taken by the State authorities to remove the game farm from its present location near here, without first notifying the Chamber, that every opportunity may be given the local men to find a suitable new site for the preserve in this immediate vicinity.

A committee of three was appointed at the last meeting of the Chamber of Commerce here to make an investigation of the alleged intention of the State authorities to remove the farm from here to Poisson. It was the sense of the body that this section combines the best possible conditions for the permanent establishment of such an institution and the success with which the farm has propagated wild turkeys, pheasants and other game birds in the last few years, was pointed to as an irrefutable argument for the farm being kept in this section.

NEED MORE GROUND.

From an exhaustive investigation of conditions pertaining at the breeding farm by the committee, consisting of F. W. Browning, A. Lindenberg and R. Reid, it has been learned that the grounds now occupied under the management of A. Argabrite are much too cramped. The grounds cover forty acres and in the opinion of Argabrite just twice as much land is needed, though he admits that the farm has been very successful in the past.

The committee is busily engaged looking up suitable sites for the re-establishment of the preserve in the vicinity of Hayward as it is certain that the present site will be abandoned.

NEW GROUND NEEDED.

Committeeman Reid this afternoon said:

"I have never seen a situation less suited for a game farm than the present one and am surprised at the success with which it has been carried on. We have several sites in view for the approval of the State Commissioners and will submit the same to Manager Argabrite for his O. K. before making a formal report to the Chamber. The situations we have in view are all within reasonable distance of Hayward. The objections to the present location of the farm is that there are no shade trees, which are almost a necessity for the breeding of game birds, and that there is no pumping station and no room for its establishment, which prevents the growing of green feed for the birds. But it has been proved that the climatic conditions here are ideal for the propagation of wild turkeys, etc., and it is only a question of finding a suitable site, which is an easy matter. The places we have in mind are about eighty acres in extent and could be leased or purchased at a reasonable figure."

WOMAN'S PACIFIC COAST SWIMMING RECORD FOR ONE MILE IS SMASHED

ENCINAL GIRL COVERS THE DISTANCE IN FORTY-EIGHT MINUTES AND THREE SECONDS

Miss Nell Schmidt Adds Another Victory to Her Fine Record

ALAMEDA, Sept. 9.—Three thousand spectators cheered. Miss Nell Schmidt, the 19-year-old swimmer who broke the record for women in the swim across the Golden Gate, as she swam with steady strokes over a mile course off Park street wharf this afternoon, winning a woman's championship of the Pacific coast in forty-eight minutes and three seconds.

According to the timekeepers and judges only the strong tide kept the young swimmer from breaking the world's record of twenty-four minutes, twenty-six and one-fifth seconds, which is held by Miss Sylvia Whitaker of Milwaukee, Wis. With Miss Schmidt were Mrs. H. Soderer of Santa Cruz and Miss Tinie Nelson of San Francisco.

MISS NELSON GIVES UP

Miss Nelson became exhausted after swimming 100 yards out in the channel and gave up the race. Mrs. Soderer made the course of one-half mile and one-half in return in fifty-four minutes. Nita and Lydia Sheffield, the Los Angeles girls who made the successful swim across the Golden Gate in the same Sunday that Miss Schmidt broke the time record for women, did not enter the race today. Boats followed Miss Schmidt and Mrs. Soderer, but there was not at any time any fatigue shown by the two strong women.

"I was not at all exhausted after the swim," said Miss Schmidt today. "I was only disappointed because I did not break the world's record and I intend to try and do so when I return from the south."

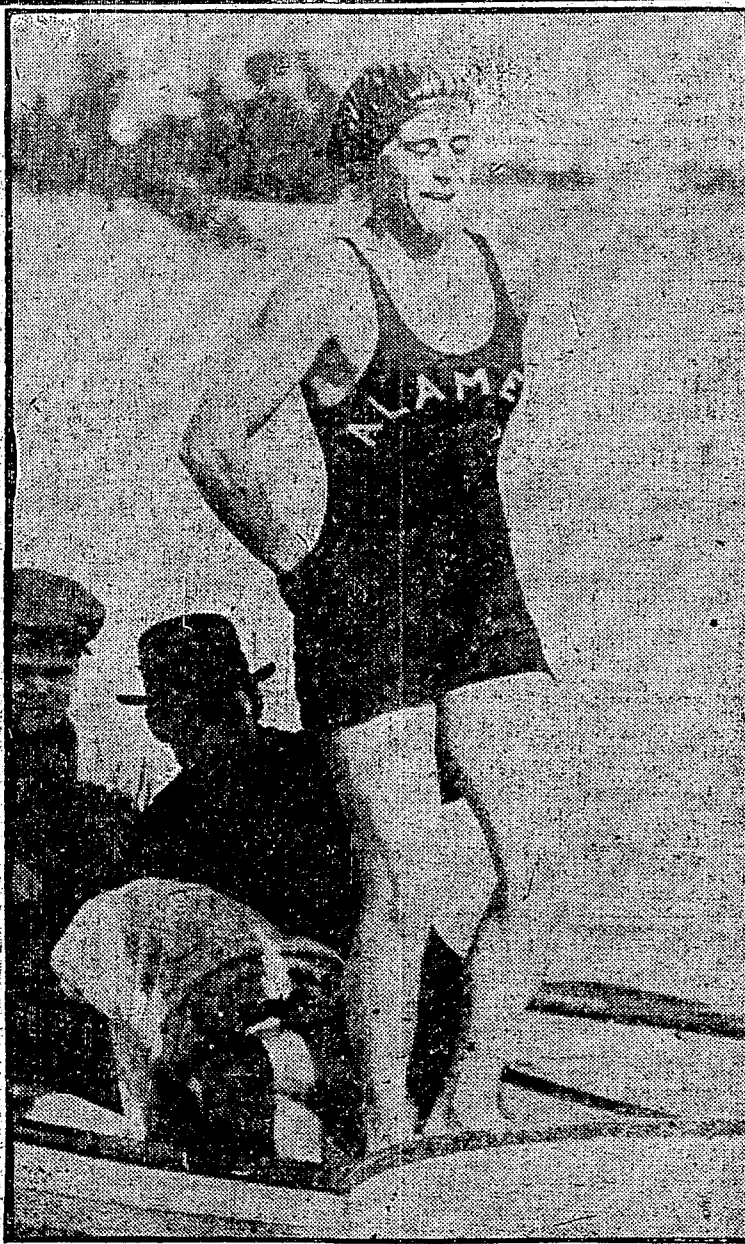

Miss Schmidt leaves for the south this week to enter swimming contests for women at Redondo Beach. After the swim today Miss Schmidt was decorated with a $50 gold medal presented to her by the Surf Beach management. Mrs. Soderer won a $25 medal.

HONORED BY YACHTSMEN.

Miss Schmidt was made an honorary member of the San Francisco Yacht Club, the Barbarian Athletic Club, the South End and the Alameda Rowing Clubs, members of which watched the swimming contest today with great interest.

The judges were Colonel Edwards, D. Down, Alex Bell and S. Winsor. J. N. Desch, Gustave Petersen, W. Sherman and Paul Schmidt.

Miss Schmidt expects to accept an offer from the Orpheum management on her return from the south. One of her first attempts at long-distance swimming will be across San Francisco bay, which has never been accomplished by a woman. The swim will probably be made toward the latter part of September.

Miss Nellie Schmidt, winner of the mile race, as she appeared at conclusion of the contest.

Santa Fe Reports Having Heavy Seismic Shocks

SANTA FE, N. M., Sept. 9.—Heavy motion of the earth was from south to north. As the earthquake was evidently local, it is believed it was caused by the readjustment of immense subterranean rock strata. As far as reported, no material damage was done.

Two Little Girls Save Cats at Fire

Aside From Trunk and Family, Felines Are All That Escape Flames.

BERKELEY, Sept. 9.—Two little misses, carrying between them a bag which contained a black cat, eagerly scanned the faces of spectators at a fire that destroyed the residence of H. B. Campbell in Northbrae this afternoon. They were seeking the owner of the house to restore to him the cat which had escaped from the dwelling when the fire broke out. The girls were neighbors of the Campbells and had recognized and captured the frightened feline as it leaped across the vacant lot from the burning home.

They tremblingly reported to a woman who was watching the fire that a companion cat was still in the house, as they had not seen it running away. The structure was half destroyed when the alarm was raised in behalf of the missing cat. Then the fire broke open the outer door to the cellar and the lost cat, with fur on end, but unscorched sprang out, apparently from the midst of the flames. It had crouched in the coolest corner of the cellar until the door was broken in, which was none too soon for pussy.

Shoots Girl She Accuses Of Taking Her Husband

NASHVILLE, Sept. 9.—While the Dixie Theater was crowded with women at today's matinee, Mrs. Earle Samuels shot and fatally wounded Miss Willie West. Mrs. Samuels used a small calibre pistol which was concealed by a handbag. At the jail Mrs. Samuels charged Miss West with alienating the affections of her husband. Miss West is a fascinating young woman, popular in certain circles in Nashville and Memphis, where she has often visited with relatives, some of whom are connected with the oldest families in Tennessee. Mrs. Samuels is a noted charity worker and is prominent in church circles.

Secretary Fisher on Tour of Inspection

ELLENBURG, Wash., Sept. 9.—Secretary of the Interior Fisher and party, accompanied by President Howard Elliott of the Northern Pacific, spent the morning in Kittitas county, leaving the train at Easton at 7 o'clock to inspect the huge dam and storage works being built at Lake Kachees. Upon arrival in Ellensburg they visited the Kittitas high line project, which will water 50,000 acres of land. The canal proper will be built by the sale of bonds with the land as security, but the water is to be secured from the government storage works, and lakes Kachees and Ketchums. The secretary said the sale of water here would establish a precedent.

RUSHES HOME TO PREVENT PROPOSALS

Inez Sprague Stiness Leaves Titled Foreigners On Their Knees at Paris Station.

She Does Not Want Another Husband Anyway; Would Rather Have Aeroplane.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—Miss Inez Sprague Stiness, whose divorce was announced ten days ago, left unexpectedly today by La Lorraine for New York. The reason for the rush is to avoid the importunities of two titled foreigners who have been pressing their suits almost tragically since the divorce.

The suitors are Marquis De Villeneuve and Count D'Avenel. The marquis, a hero of the Boer war, has thrown up a government position in Indo-China to marry the beautiful daughter of former Governor Sprague of Rhode Island. He is 30 years of age, while his rival, the count, is only 22.

When Mrs. Stanislaus Borde, mother of Inez Sprague Stiness, heard the whole property of the marquis consisted of a ramshackle chateau and a jeweled sword presented him by President Kruger, she ordered her daughter back to America.

DUEL IS EXPECTED.

Immediately the marquis and the count met at St. Lazare station to see her off. Angry words and an exchange of cards passed between them as the train steamed out of the station, and a duel is expected.

To THE TRIBUNE correspondent Mrs. Stiness said:

"I don't want another husband anyway. Husbands are nearly all failures. I can have a better time without them. Husbands are bores. In England all they want is for you to untie their shoestrings. In France they want our money. In America they think we ought to be satisfied when they present us a cheque book."

"I prefer an aeroplane to a husband and I am going to take up aviation."

PARIS, Sept. 9.—In attempting to save one of his dairy cows from snatching down the railroad track near the "third rail" through which electricity runs, Joseph Stanley, a dairyman, stepped upon the deadly charged rail early this morning near Schuetzen Park and was rendered unconscious, narrowly escaping death.

This morning Stanley was driving to town, when he discovered one of his bovines on the railroad track. The dairyman rushed forward and seized the cow's horns with a rope, but, as he did, without thought he placed one of his feet upon the power rail while the other was on the ground.

The electric shock threw him upon his back against a side rendering him unconscious for ten minutes. When he regained his senses he staggered to his home.

Authorities Search For Missing Bankers

The banks are closed and officers are searching for the two men. The total deposits in the banks are estimated at $25,000.

Founder of American Red Cross at Death's Door

In poor health when she came here early in the summer from her home at Glen Echo, Md., she had grown gradually worse. Miss Barton is a native of Oxford, and for a long time has maintained a summer home here.

HAMMERSTEIN IS VICTIM OF WILES

Mysterious Woman Sends Him Bunch of White Chrysanthemums Each Day.

"Have Not Enough Loved Me for Me to Know?" Walls Impresario.

(Special Cable to THE TRIBUNE.) LONDON, Sept. 9.—The mystery of the white chrysanthemums is a question that is absorbing the attention of Oscar Hammerstein far more than the opening of the new opera house.

Hammerstein feels that he is being pursued by an unknown woman and is frankly agitated. He is living at the Savoy hotel, where the only clue to the fair one is a huge bouquet of white chrysanthemums, delivered each morning to Oscar's room. The correspondent of THE TRIBUNE found him holding a monologue in a corner of the hotel smoking room last night.

"I wonder who she is?" he muttered, slowly several times. "I've been racking my brains for a week and now it is driving me mad."

"How do you know it's a she?" asked the correspondent. Oscar seized his head with both hands.

"How do I know?" he wailed. "Was it not to escape this kind of a thing that I left New York? Is it not for this I no longer walk Broadway to Forty-second street?"

Oscar paused to kiss his fingers at such recollections.

"Of course it's a woman. What fool man would give me white chrysanthemums? Some boy delivers them every day. He says he can't tell who sent them. I tell you I insist it's a woman. Have not enough loved me for me to know? (Another pause.) Maybe she knows. I'm expecting my divorce decree in about a week or so. Just wonder what she looks like. I cannot stand the uncertainty. I shall have that boy followed tomorrow."

Foot in Stirrup, Girl Is Dragged by Horse

Animal Becomes Frightened at Baby Buggy and Almost Kills Rider.

SAN RAFAEL, Sept. 9.—Thrown from a horse which had become frightened at a baby buggy, and dragged a considerable distance over the road by her foot, which had caught in the stirrup, pretty 18-year-old Frances Turner narrowly escaped death this morning.

The young girl had borrowed the horse from a friend to take a ride through Ross Valley. On her return to San Rafael she usually decides to make a stop at a passing baby buggy, between San Anselmo and here, and veering to the right threw the fair rider.

In falling, Miss Turner's foot caught in the stirrup. The horse, from its reign, dashed down the street, dragging the girl over the hard road. The animal was finally stopped.

England Attempts an Aerial Mail Service

LONDON, Sept. 9.—The first flying postal service was inaugurated this afternoon under the auspices of the British postoffice. The points of departure and arrival were respectively the Hendon Aerodrome and Windsor Castle, the distance being something under a score of miles.

The aerial mail experiment was undertaken to demonstrate the practicability of this means of letter transit when war or strike render it unavailable by the ordinary train service. Four airmen piloting two monoplanes and two biplanes were engaged in the work. Upwards of 100,000 postal packages constituted the first delivery.

King George was so interested in the service, that he gave his permission to the aerial postmen to alight on the lawn of Windsor Castle.

The first postal aviator to reach Windsor Castle from Hendon made the trip in 18 minutes.

FEDERAL TRUCK IS TOUR WINNER

Chicago-Detroit Reliability Test
Proves Mettle of Commercial Car.

After nine days of the most strenuous work over almost impassable roads, through four days of continuous rain, and carrying a 3000-pound load, the Federal one-ton truck arrived in Chicago a winner, defeating all other trucks in its class.

Out of twenty-eight trucks starting in the Chicago, Detroit, Chicago Reliability Run, only seven trucks finished, the best record being made by a Federal. The course was from Chicago to Detroit and return, a distance of 927 miles, and owing to the poor roads in Michigan and four days' rain storms, it took nine days to complete the course.

One of the worst stretches encountered was a road in Michigan that was almost impassable and proved a stumbling block to many of the contestants. This stretch, twenty-six miles long, took the Federal truck 7 1/2 hours to negotiate.

During the run the Federal truck averaged eight miles to a gallon of gasoline and 400 miles to the gallon of oil, a remarkable record under the road conditions.

By its good showing the Federal won the cup for the 3000-pound class, and awards for economy besides proving its worth.

Mr. Hughson of the Standard Motor Car Company is highly pleased by the showing and said:

"The Federal policy, of one chassis only, scientific engineering, thoughtful selection of materials, rigid inspection of parts, accurate assembling and careful testing, has certainly proved a success, as demonstrated by this run."

The Federal Motor Truck Company only entered one truck in the run, while other firms entered two, three and even four, yet they did not do as well.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—Mrs. Prentiss Cobb Hale will be the hostess at Friday evening at a reception given in honor of her son, Midshipman Hamilton Bryan, who reached here a few days ago from the United States Naval Academy.

WHITE CARS WILL BE SOLD HERE

H. P. Teichner Takes Agency for Steam and Gas Cars and Trucks.

F. P. Teichner, a veteran in the automobile business and for the past nineteen years connected with the sales force of the White Company on the Pacific Coast, has been appointed Alameda county representative of this company. He will sell the complete line of White pleasure cars and trucks and before the end of the present week will have a full line of the cars on his salesroom floor.

Gas cars in the pleasure class are built on 30 and 40 horsepower chassis with a wide range of body styles. The trucks which range in size from 1500 pounds to five tons, are mounted on these same chassis, with the substitution of the shaft for the chain drive.

Salesrooms have been established at 152-154 Twelfth street.

Polarine Figures in

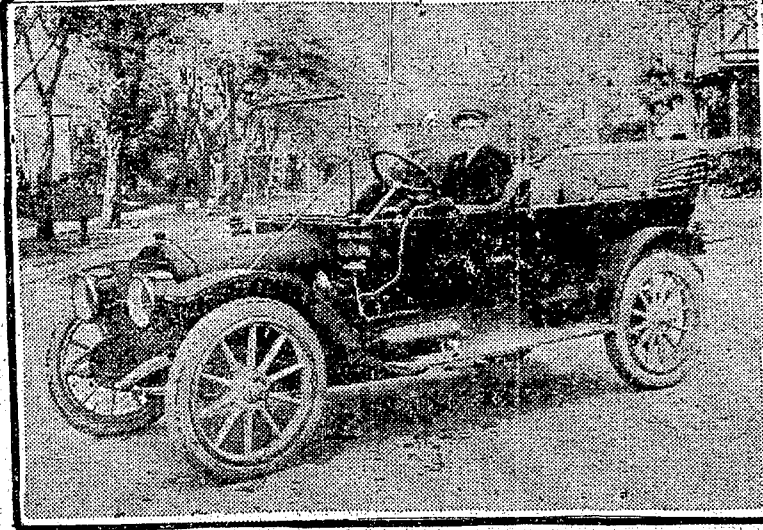

Notable Victories

Polarine, the latest Standard Oil Company product, is meeting with a steady growth and is rapidly becoming a lubricant used by the majority of owners around these parts.

Polarine was given severe tryouts in the Sacramento-Tallac run and at the San Jose automobile race carnival last Sunday. In the first named run, for the Valvoline trophy, the American clipped thirty-five minutes from the best previous record and used this oil exclusively.

Sunday at San Jose, Earl Cooper, the Maxwell driver, was prevailed upon to try out the oil. The number of Maxwell victories best tells the story of the satisfaction it rendered.

W. G. Munro, local salesman for Polarine, states that greater speed was obtained last week from the Maxwell than ever before and lays the credit for it in a large sense to his "stuff."

FIRST WARREN CARS ARE HERE

New Models Are Beautiful in Finish; Several Have Been Delivered.

The first carload shipment of Warrens are here, they having arrived during the past week. In this first shipment are the roadster, detachable demi-tonneau, touring car and torpedo models of the Warren 30. Each model may be classed by itself as being without a superior in their rating, as motor cars are known.

In particular, the torpedo model is a striking handsome car and one which attracts and holds attention, at first sight of it. As has been previously mentioned in these columns, no radical changes have been brought about in the 1912 Warren over that of 1911. Where minor weaknesses have been found to exist improvements have been made, the general result being a strong, sturdy, powerful, fast and quiet car.

Several of the present allotment have already gone out on deliveries with additional orders on hand to take up the balance.

The Matheson Sales Company, local and San Francisco distributors, have met with a great deal of success with this new car and have closed with a number of out of town agents.

'COLE' MOTOR IS FOWLER'S CHOICE

Noted Aviator Selects it From Many Others as Best One for Daring Flight.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 9.—With a view to determining the superiority of an automobile over the present power plant used in aeroplanes, three members of the Cole automobile organization have completed arrangements for a flight from San Francisco to New York for the $50,000 offered by a New York organization. The trip will probably start from Los Angeles about September 15th; the machine will be a Wright biplane, to be called the Cole Flyer and equipped with a Cole motor. Bob Fowler, a 28-year old birdman from Gilroy, California, who has made quite a record for himself in Southern California flights, will pilot the Cole Flyer on this, the first actual attempt to cross the United States through the air.

The question of motor power for aeroplanes has been one that is claimed has not been given the proper attention in the construction of heavier than air machines. Bob Fowler has been experimenting in Southern California with a Curtis biplane and a Wright biplane, using different motors. From his flights he is of the opinion that the cross country trip in the air can be made in a machine of the Wright construction with a Cole motor.

W. F. Grundy, a millionaire of Los Angeles, is the Cole agent for Southern California. He owns a Curtis type aeroplane and recently placed an order for his second machine with the Wright Brothers at Dayton, Ohio. It was his intention to have it equipped with a Cole motor.

It was at the Elgin National road races in Elgin, Ill., that J. J. Cole, president of the Cole Motor Car Company, and C. P. Henderson, general manager of the Henderson Motor Sales Company, were introduced to Mr. Grundy. Mr. Grundy, William L. Colt and Harry S. Stratton of New York, C. Frady of Chicago and other Cole representatives were found to be enthusiastic followers of aviation. When the subject of horsepower of the automobile racing game of today as compared to aviation came up, the first definite step in the perfection of the coast to coast flight matured. It was in the motor problem that Cole was more deeply interested. This resulted in a trip to Dayton, Ohio, the next day and the delivery of the machine previously ordered by Mr. Grundy two days later. Mr. Cole agreed to financially back the proposition, providing Mr. Grundy managed the flight.

Motor experts from some of the largest automobile manufacturing plants in the country were present at the Dayton conference, the telegram informing them of the contemplated flight being sufficient for them to make hasty trips. It was the consensus of opinion that the automobile motor would be better in airships than the present day type of airship engines. Numerous arguments were advanced for this phase of aviation and even many of the Wright experts were willing to concede that the automobile engineers had arguments that would play important parts in future aviation.

The Cole motor is 200 pounds heavier than the motor now used in the Wright machine. But it gives to the aviator more power and a better chance to handle his plane.

Fowler is confident he will win the prize offered. "The question," he says, "is one that I have given thorough study. The flight is the greatest thing attempted in aviation circles. A man must use the greatest of judgment. He must be familiar with the difficulties he will encounter. I am sure my observations, for I have been studying the problem since last January, will carry me safely into New York. I have confidence in the Cole motor."

OFFER TO BACK RAY SEYMOUR IN REAL MONEY

Unusual interest attaches to the motorcycle events at the motordrome in Salt Lake City, Utah, owing to the fact that now, as the season is drawing to a close, Ivor Redman, manager of the track, has offered to "back" Ray Seymour, the champion of the world in the best three in five heats race to be run after the close of the present season on Labor Day.

If Redman succeeds in interesting any of the big riders, he would have a great performance with which to cap the great string of motorcycle events scheduled for Monday, September 4, Labor Day. Seymour is well in the lead of the other riders at the Salt Lake track, but he would have to "back" Ray Seymour if the invitation of manager Redman were accepted in certain quarters. Redman is said to have wired his offer and is waiting to responses.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES TO MEET MONDAY

The annual meeting of the Associated Charities will be held in the children's room of the Oakland free library, Fourteenth and Grove streets, at 8 o'clock Monday evening.

BACK FROM 1500- MILE HUP TOUR

Phillip R. Weinman Makes a Strenuous, But Perfect Run in Little Car.

Phillip R. Weinmann of the California Fire Insurance Company, accompanied by his wife, has just completed a six weeks' trip in his Hupmobile Torpedo, covering nearly 1500 miles. The route taken was northward through Santa Rosa, Ukiah and Willits to Eureka. From Eureka he continued to Crescent City, through 100 miles of the finest scenery in the State, past the famous Stone and Big Lagoons, through the vast redwoods, the road skirting the rugged northern coast on a bluff above the ocean. The last five miles of the trip are driven on the beach. From Crescent City, Mr. Weinmann went to Harbor, Oregon, and then returned over the same road as far as Willits, where he cut down through Potter Valley, past Blue Lake to Lakeport. From there to Middletown, via Adams Springs, and over the St. Helena Mountain into the Napa Valley. From Napa to Rio Vista, through the Capay Valley as far as Madison, then to Dixon and down to Suisun. Across the Carquinez straits on the Solano to Port Costa and then to Antioch. Then back to San Francisco through the San Ramon Valley via Pleasanton.

The little car took all the mountain grades with ease and not a puncture or a blow-out occurred on the trip, although the G. & I. tires had traveled some 1600 miles before the start. The car averaged twenty miles to the gallon of gasoline in the mountains, and from thirty to thirty-five in the level country. This is without doubt one of the hardest trips in the State and in this instance it showed the durability of the little "Hupmobile." The roads in general were very fair, with the exception from Elgin to Dayton, which is in bad condition. A new road is now being constructed from Willits, via Long Valley, which will cut out Sherwood, and follow the new railroad, now being constructed. This road will be nearly ready to travel after the heavy grades on the present road.

Spitdorf Magnetos On Elgin Winners

The Spitdorf magneto was the ignition equipment on the National cars which won first and second in the Illinois trophy race held at Elgin, Ill., recently. The equipment on the National car that won the great free-for-all 305-mile National stock chassis championship race known as the Elgin trophy race.

The Spitdorf magneto has been coming to a front with rapid strides, greatly this year than in the past, beginning by winning the hotly contested motordrome races held at Los Angeles during January of this year, at which time the National cars equipped with the Spitdorf magnetos won practically all of the races. Immediately after the motordrome races came the great Panama-Pacific road race generally known as the Portola race. The National "40," driven by Charles Merz, won the heavy car race, using a Spitdorf magneto. In this event the Spitdorf equipped Buick, recently won by Jack Fleming, also took third place, and in the free-for-all event of the day, a race that was called on account of darkness, the Spitdorf equipped National, driven by Merz, took second place with Fleming in the Spitdorf equipped Buick-Hartford running third.

With these victories as a beginning, Spitdorf equipped cars sprang rapidly to the front with their winning continuity at the Fresno-Zoll House hill climb, won also by a Buick. The Spitdorf equipped Buick won the Elgin motordrome event, the Redlands mile high climb class event, won by the Spitdorf equipped Buick, and the Elgin motordrome running third. With these victories as a beginning, Spitdorf equipped cars sprang rapidly to the front with their winning continuity at the Fresno-Zoll House hill climb, won also by a Buick. The Spitdorf equipped Buick won the Elgin motordrome event, the Redlands mile high climb class event, won by the Spitdorf equipped Buick, and the Elgin motordrome running third.

EVERETT BREAKS RECORD

An Everett "30" carrying four passengers, broke all records on August 24, for time between Seattle and Tacoma, Wash., making the run in one hour and thirteen minutes. The best time previously made by cars of the Everett class was one hour and thirty minutes. This trip was started about midday and the car encountered many very narrow roads. Much better time would have been made had it not been for the fact that the car was delayed considerably in passing twenty-seven teams and nine automobiles along the route. The gasoline consumption was 27.7 miles to the gallon. The car was piloted through to Mount Ranier, two hundred and seventy miles, by W. D. Wallace, manager of the Everett North-West Company, of Seattle.

MOTORCYCLE NOTES

TOGO AND THE MOTORCYCLE. Four motorcycles figured in the entertainment and protection of Admiral Togo while he was in New York, and just before he left the distinguished Japanese fighter smiled the riders of the four motorcycles to his side and expressed his thanks.

The motorcycles were, of course, ridden by four New York policemen. Their last duty was to precede him in a four-mile dash up Broadway from the Battery when he was returning from a visit with Major General Frederick Dent Grant at Governor's Island. When he reached his hotel Togo invited the four policemen to his room, where he thanked each personally and shook hands.

FAST MOTORCYCLE POLICEMAN.

Mrs. L. F. Collins, 1111 Woodlawn avenue, Kansas City, Mo., knows why the motorcycle has suddenly become a warm favorite in the police department of the United States.

Just the other day she was robbed by two men who entered her kitchen where she was at work. They took her money and departed, with her in pursuit.

The chase was seen by a barber near by, who, sizing up the situation, telephoned the police.

Motorcycle Policeman A. W. Mitchell of the Flora avenue police station responded and four minutes later he had arrested two men. The robbery occurred in daylight.

After 9 Days of the Severest Punishment Any Truck Ever Encountered

Federal One-Ton Truck

Score
Cup

The promoters of the Chicago American truck run from Chicago to Detroit to Chicago intended the run to demonstrate what a truck could do. Undoubtedly the contest did that; but it also demonstrated in those trucks that survived how much punishment a motor truck could withstand. It is no exaggeration to say that the vehicles in the contest took more hard usage—were under greater strain—in any one of the single days of the contest than they would be called upon to endure in a month of average actual service. In spite of these conditions—calling forth the utmost in power and endurance—the Federal One-Ton Truck won a perfect road score and the prize cup—the only car in its class to be so distinguished.

Why? Because the Federal is a truck designed for the performance of service; built to withstand punishment of the severest sort. Because the supreme test of this 9-day grind over approximately 750 miles of every conceivable condition of road was no more racking than the tests to which we long ago subjected the Federal. Carrying 2,650 pounds—an overload of 850 pounds above its rated capacity—the Federal made the entire distance under its own power—a feat performed by no other machine in its class.

Doesn't that seem to prove that the Federal is capable of the work you have for a one-ton truck? Doesn't that speak more forcefully for its strength and sturdiness and power than anything we can say here? And bear in mind that this was done without removing an ounce of the 2,650-pound load. Another instance of the Federal's wonderful power and the way in which that power is utilized: The Federal, owing to its position in the day's run, was the last to reach the foot of Gulch Hill at Battle Creek, Mich. Preceding cars had been towed and pushed up the hill. The road was like a plowed field. Nevertheless the Federal made the grade under its own power and without assistance. That's the kind of super-efficiency you can expect from a Federal One-Ton Truck. No matter how inexperienced you may be in truck construction, a glance at the chassis will show you that every essential part is made with amazing stoutness. Every part, too, is within reach of the caretaker's hand. It can be kept constantly in tune by any one possessing the slightest knowledge of mechanics. You can easily prove all we have said by having a practical demonstration of this truck in your own business. Consult our experts as to your requirements.

CHALMERS '36' TO BE HERE TUESDAY

Urgent Requests From Buyers to See This Car Brings it Back Again.

There apparently is no end to the almost ceaseless appeals for the only model of the Chalmers "36" in the northern part of California. From every agent in the territory controlled by the Pioneer Automobile company have come requests, bordering upon demands, for the use of the newest product of the Chalmers company, if only for a day.

Such a condition of affairs has resulted in the direct branches of the company being forced to practically fight to secure the car for a day. For this reason the local branch of the Pioneer Automobile company are congratulating themselves upon the fact that on Tuesday they will have this much sought car on their floor.

It will be the second time this month that they have had it, the first time being Labor Day. On that day Mr. Penfield, now in charge of the Oakland store, closed with three different buyers, and succeeded in practically closing four others. Since this time he has concluded deals with three of the four whereby they will become owners of Chalmers "36" cars upon the arrival of shipments of them.

The car will be here on Tuesday only. It is advisable for any intending buyer to arrange to see the car on that day inasmuch as it will be the last opportunity for at least two weeks.

SEEKS BEAUTY IN FOREIGN LANDS

American Variety vyFails to Find Favor With Young
Mr. Risse.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—For the information of all beauties who measure up to five feet eight and who may feel that they have been overlooked, or perchance, have overlooked something themselves, the wireless call of the French liner Lorraine is M. Z.

Speeding to Europe on that vessel is a young man who has turned his back on America and who means to seek his ideal abroad. The seeker is Alfred R. Risse, a broker of No. 43 Exchange place. He describes himself as being 23 years old and one of his requirements in a wife is that she must be of his own height and weight—five feet eight and 140 pounds.

Here are some of the other requirements, as announced by Mr. Risse: "She must," he said, "be dark, with raven hair. She must have good teeth. She must have a rosy complexion and a willowy figure. She must combine with the English conservatism and love of home the vivacity of the French and with these two the intensity and fervor of the Italian girl. She must know what to take up and what to drop; how to say clever things and when to stop."

Mr. Risse admitted that this combination might be hard to find. But Europe, he said, easily afforded a large hunting ground, and he had plenty of time. Becoming an autobiographer, he said that he was a Mexican by birth, had been educated in Germany and had spent two years in this city. He said that he was a brother-in-law of Fred Staworth and that this brother-in-law is possessed of a million.

DOG ATTACKS WOMAN.
ATCHISON, Kas., Sept. 9.—The community at Bean Lake, Mo., south of this city, is being terrorized by wild dogs. They have made several attacks on women, but remain out of the range of shotguns carried by men.

FRENCH SPEED LIMIT CHANGED

Automobile Drivers to Be On an Honor Degree; Means
"Go as You Please."

The American Automobile Association announces a vital change to take place in October with regard to the circulation of automobiles in France.

The legal limit of speed in the open country has previously been 80 kilometres an hour, though in reality there has been a sort of unwritten law that one made what speed he would, so long as he did not trespass upon the rights of other road users. This disregard of an existing law was the starting wedge, and now from the Minister of Public Works comes the information that the thirty kilometres limit is to be technically abolished.

Henceforth the driver of an automobile is on his honor, as it were, not to drive to the danger of the common good, which per se means driving fast under circumstances and conditions wherein danger would be thus implied. The objection to the former law was that most people interpreted it as meaning that anything up to the limit was a reasonable speed under all conditions, save where a local community cut it down to six, eight or ten kilometres an hour and so placarded the entrances to their villages.

It is also proposed to grant the road user inalienable rights on the road over those of the pedestrian, although true it is that in country France, and often within the towns where no sidewalks exist, pedestrians walk in the middle of the road. Now warned of the presence of an automobile by the sounding of a horn or bell, he will remain there at his peril.

GIRL SWIMS 21 MILES IN 8 HOURS

16-Year-Old Vaudeville Performer Breasts Tide and Wind in Notable Feat.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Rose Pitonof, a 16-year-old aspirant for aquatic glory from Dorchester, Mass., swam five miles in the public pier at East Twenty-sixth street, Manhattan, to the stepladder pier at Coney Island, a distance of twenty-one miles, in eight hours and seven minutes. Miss Pitonof, who appears on the vaudeville stage, tried the swimming feat last year, but got only as far as Norton's point, where the tide washed her ashore.

Miss Pitonof started against the tide, but at the Brooklyn bridge she was swimming with it. At Ninth street and again at Fifth street, Brooklyn, the tide threw her over to the New York side of the river and she had to swim under the pier. She used the breast stroke except for a few minutes off Norton point, when she changed to the overarm stroke.

She took no nourishment, her coach says, during the entire trip, and her mood was cheerful, so that she was able to indulge in repartee with some women who jollied her from a canoe. When the stepladder pier was pointed out to her as her destination she was said to have remarked: "I can make that easy."

A crowd of bathers formed themselves into a lane to receive the swimmer. To make a quick sale use the classified columns of THE TRIBUNE.

PINK-FACED APES ARE IN DEMAND

Owner Thought That His 15
Javanese Simians Had Some Skin Disease.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Fifteen or more pink-faced monkeys in an animal dealer's store in East Houston street will be out of quarantine in a day or two, according to Donald Burns, one of the keepers in the Central park menagerie, and Burns is exceedingly interested, for he wants to select some of them for the Zoo. An old friend of Burns keeps the animal emporium. The pink-faced simians hail from Java, and it is a customs regulation that animals be kept for two weeks to see if they have any contagious malady. When the owner of the animal store purchased the monkeys he did not know them by any other name than Javanese apes. Neither did he know they had colored complexions.

So when he had got them to his store and noticed they had ruddy-tinted cheeks he became skeptical and thought they had a disease of some sort. Then he called up his friend Donald, who is a naturalist.

"They've got some disease," he shouted over the telephone to Donald. "Their faces are turning pink."

Burns went down to Houston street. The monkeys had pink faces, but were a lively lot. Then he told the owner that they were very rare and that the pink came with the monkeys and was not the result of a malady.

"Hold on to some of those fellows," said Burns. "Until the menagerie can buy a bunch."

As soon as the quarantine is off some of the bright-faced simians will probably be added to the city's collection.

RELATIVES WERE UNSOCIABLE.
SAWYER'S BAR, Cal., Sept. 9.—Residents of the some county for most of their lives, and not more than forty-five miles apart, Charles Voss of Yreka and his sister, Mrs. Charles Behnke, of Sawyer's Bar, had not seen each other for twenty-six years until last week, when the brother came over for a visit of a few days.

POLKA DOT TIE BARRED IN ART

Governor Hadley Yields to the Wishes of Wife Despite His Own Tastes.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 9.—Wearing a polka-dot tie of the Roosevelt pattern, Gov. Hadley, as attorney-general, boldly invaded the haunts of the Standard Oil octopus on Wall street and clipped its tentacles. Wearing probably the same polka dot tie, he convinced the voters of Missouri that he was entitled to the governorship.

Notwithstanding the fact that a polka dot necktie has figured in his legal and political triumphs in Missouri, Gov. Hadley will appear, but not from choice, in the portrait now being painted by Mrs. Samantha Huntley of Albany in the somber black, affected by statesman.

"We had quite a little controversy," said the governor, "as to the kind of a necktie I should be painted in. I insisted upon wearing a polka dot, but Mrs. Huntley said that kind wouldn't do at all."

"How would a polka dot necktie look in a painting," she said with withering scorn.

FAVORS POLKA DOT TIE.

"I think I would look all right. Even Colonel Roosevelt in that famous painting of his by Sargent wore a polka dot tie," I told her.

"Well, Roosevelt is likely to do most anything," she said.

"I know a polka dot tie will spoil the whole effect of the picture and I won't paint that kind of a tie."

"I then suggested a green tie, but she taboored that, and finally we had to compromise on a black," he said.

"I have always had a partiality for blue polka dot ties and have worn them almost exclusively for many years. The polka dot tie has been interwoven in my political and legal career, and I hoped to emblazon such a tie in this painting."

CONSIDERATE OF POSTERITY.

"But Mrs. Huntley thinks that persons of artistic temperament viewing this painting in after years, would be inexpressibly shocked by a polka dot tie, and that this must be guarded against."

Mrs. Huntley said that the very thought of painting a polka dot necktie upon the neck of the governor of a great commonwealth jarred upon her, and that she could never have brought herself to do it.

The painting will be completed soon and will be left in the executive mansion when the Hadley administration is ended. The portrait was ordered by Col. Houts, United States district attorney, and other Republican admirers in St. Louis.

MURDER MYSTERY BAFFLES POLICE

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—An automobile mystery rivaling in sensational details the unsolved murder of William Bate, a chauffeur, recently disclosed by the finding of the body of Fred Wennerstrom, a Chicago chauffeur, in the Fox river, near Cary, Ill. Wennerstrom had been shot twice in the back of the head. His clothing was practically undisturbed and his water-soaked pocketbook containing $55 proved the motive for the crime was not robbery.

The body when found was sewn in an improvised sack. It is believed by the authorities that the crime was committed last Wednesday. Whether enemies of long standing had carefully planned the man's undoing or whether Wennerstrom was an unwilling witness of some outburst and its participants decided upon his death are questions puzzling the police.

Wennerstrom's car is missing. No one in the town of Cary saw it Wednesday night, but two farmers are reported to have noticed the tracks of an automobile Thursday morning. They also found stains of blood on the grass and timber on the roadside. Not one clue to aid the authorities in tracing the guilty ones has been found save a mysterious telephone message received Wednesday afternoon at a garage where Wennerstrom housed his automobile.

Those responsible for his death set about the task of hiding their crime in the most deliberate manner. A rain storm was removed from the automobile and fashioned into a sack to receive the body. Then iron brake shoes from the railroad cars on a nearby siding were tied to the canvas-covered form and it was thrown into the river.

On Wednesday afternoon Wennerstrom received a call to go to Crystal lake. That was the last heard of him. This also was the manner of William Bate's start on his death trip. He received a call to take a party along the drainage canal, and was found dead with two bullet wounds in the back of his head. His clothes were not disturbed. He had no known enemies, and the mystery is recorded today as one of the most baffling in Chicago's crime history.

SLAYS LION IN A HAND CONFLICT

Texas Father Battles With Beast That Killed
His Son.

GALVESTON, Tex., Sept. 9.—Madened by the sight of a lion standing over the dead body of his 3-year-old son, Juan Morales, a farmer living seven miles from Brownsville, fought a duel to the death with the blood-thirsty animal. He dispatched it with a knife thrust in the heart after fifteen minutes' struggle, in which he sustained injuries which will cost him the loss of his right arm from the shoulder.

Morales had gone to a neighbor's on an errand and left his three motherless children, aged 3, 7 and 10 years, at home. He was returning and heard the screams of his children. Rushing into the house he saw the lion, which weighed over 400 pounds, crouched over the lifeless and almost headless body of his little son.

The lion sprang at Morales and the desperate fight began, with Morales, an errand boy, trying for a strangle hold. The animal fought with its paws and was fast felling the flesh from Morales' right arm and shoulder when the latter managed to get out his knife and made several cuts at the lion. This finally made the beast more ferocious.

Morales was almost exhausted when he succeeded in driving the big blade of the knife into the heart of the animal and staggered to his feet. As it fell dead at his feet.

Morales fainted and his two little girls revived him with cold water and then helped him bandage the wounds. It was a long journey to town for medical aid and without a conveyance handy Morales determined to make the trip on foot with his two surviving children.

Morales will survive, but the right arm will have to be amputated.

LASSEES AUTO WITH LARIAT

Enraged Car Owners Finally Secure Rope Wielder and Tie Him Up.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Sept. 9.—E. W. Edwards, after having lassoed several vehicles, including two touring cars, a limousine and a bakery wagon, at Grand avenue and Nineteenth street, was captured by enraged motorists and securely bound in his own lariat, pending the arrival of the police.

A headquarter Edwards said he was in training for a lariat act on the stage and wanted to see if he had learned anything. He said he was enjoying himself hugely when interrupted. Edwards had his lariat fastened to a telephone pole. Whenever an approaching automobile appealed to him as a suitable mark he swung the loop in great circles and dropped it over the machine. The discomfiture of a driver on a passing bakery wagon, similarly treated, caused him much amusement, while a crowd of several hundred persons collected. Once he tried for the lamps of a limousine and brought them off with a crash. He also brought S. Sammlish, a business man, who was driving, out of the vehicle in a rage. The latter jumped for the amateur cowboy and threw him to the pavement, where, with the aid of several spectators, he was securely tied. The police locked him up.

ADMISSION DAY BALL A SUCCESS.
SAN RAMON, Sept. 9.—The Admission Day Ball this evening under the auspices of the San Ramon Hall association in the hall was one of the most successful affairs of the sort which the association has yet given. The music for the dance was by Sachar's orchestra, and with Ralph Dobson as floor director, assisted by Fred Wiedemann, Oscar Olson, E. B. Read and W. R. Meese, the funds of the association were materially increased.

Mrs. Athey Discovers Cupid
Keeps Poor Correspondence School.

SPOKANE, Wash., Sept. 9.—Mrs.
Marshall E. Athey, who was formerly
Mrs. Leah D. Shane of Kansas City, Mo., a post graduate of Cupid's correspondence school, is ready to relinquish her degree after 18 days of married life. This is evidenced by an action filed in the Spokane county superior court, Mrs. Athey declaring in her complaint that she is utterly disappointed in her newest husband, for the reason that he did not furnish her with the luxuries of life.
Mrs. Athey came to Spokane on August 14th, accompanied by her 16-year-old daughter and was met by Athey and his 17-year-old daughter, following a courtship by correspondence extending over a period of four or five months. Mrs. Athey and Athey were married the same afternoon and lived together happily for a week, when the bride took an inventory of the community assets.
Athey was a good provider for the necessities of life, she concluded, but not of the luxuries to which she was accustomed and suit for divorce followed.

RELIC OF MAINE WRECK
PRESENTED TO U. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—A relic of the wreck of the battleship Maine, the gold chess ring of Assistant Engineer Darwin R. Merritt of Iowa, who lost his life in the explosion of that vessel in Havana harbor 13 years ago, has been received at the navy department. Lieutenant Merritt wore this ring when he met his death and efforts of the army engineers to find it by screening all the debris on the boiler deck were unsuccessful.
A Havana newspaper announced that it had come into possession of the ring and would turn it over to the United States authorities. It was brought here by Colonel Black of the engineer board and will be delivered by the navy to Rev. W. W. Merritt of Red Oak, Iowa, father of Lieuten-the six principal carpets and trust that the information will be helpful.

Wilton, Brussels, Axminster, Ingrain, Velvet and Tapestry

A STANDARD WILTON is a pile carpet dyed in the yarn 256 cords wide, ten and a half wire to the inch, and the usual width is 27 inches.

A STANDARD BRUSSELS is an all-worsted loop carpet dyed in the yarn, 256 cords wide, 9½ wires to an inch, and is 27 inches wide.

THE AXMINSTER is an all-wool pile carpet dyed in the yarn; the best quality has seven picks to the inch and 138 cords to the 27-inch wide goods; it differs from the Wilton and Brussels in that the pile is higher and the face as well as the fabric accommodates itself to the use of greater variety of color when they are wanted to develop the pattern or effect.

INGRAIN is an all-wool reversible carpet, the design showing on both sides. The standard Ingrain is 13 picks to the inch, 1080 cords to the 4x4 width, and weighs about twenty ounces to the yard, and the width is a full yard.

THE TAPESTRY is a printed imitation of a Brussels and is a face carpet only so far as wool is concerned. The best quality is 216 cords wide to the 27-inch width, and about 10 wires to the inch.

THE VELVET is a printed imitation of a Wilton carpet and like the Tapestry, the only wool there is in the carpet is spread over the face. The best quality contains 216 cords to the 27-inch width and has nine wires to the inch.

OAKLAND TO BE AMERICA'S LIVERPOOL

PANORAMIC VIEW OF PART OF THE ESTUARY, OAKLAND'S INNER HARBOR

JOHN BARRETT PREDICTS GREAT FUTURE FOR CITY

Wharves Are Under Construction to Lure Commerce From All Over the Civilized World

A few weeks ago, John Barrett, representing the Pan-American Union which comprises not alone the republics of South America, but also the republic of the United States of America, visited a number of places in this city, and among them was a section of the waterfront on which improvements are being made, which involve the expenditure of thousands of dollars.

He was shown the massive quay wall which is in course of construction on the north side of the estuary, and Secretary Denison of the Oakland Chamber of Commerce asked him if he did not think that Oakland was moving in the direction of Liverpool in the matter of her improvements along her waterfront.

"You are there now," was Barrett's reply. "This was a compliment, for the reason that there is no city in this vicinity which is making the kind of improvement along this line which is now being made by Oakland."

Barrett has been in public life for many years. There is no part of the habitable globe he has not visited. He has not been a traveler by the guide-book, but a man who has taken notes for himself of what he sees and what he thinks worthy of being remembered in the matter of the improvement of the commercial possibilities of the place he visits.

There could not have been paid this enterprise a greater compliment than that paid by Barrett when he compared the work done by this city on the harbor to that done by the city of Liverpool, whose achievements in the matter of affording accommodations to the shipping interests have become known throughout the world.

It is possible that people, even in this city, are not aware of the efforts that Oakland is making to justify the commendation of John Barrett. Reference has been made to the matter several times, and there will be continued reference in these columns until not alone the residents of this city, but those interested in affairs of the kind throughout the country, shall be informed of the great work in which this city is engaged for the purpose of striving to accommodate a great part of the commerce of the world.

The city of Oakland is engaged in constructing along the estuary between Linden street and Webster, 2000 feet of quay wall behind which solid fill is to be made, warehouses erected, streets opened, the belt line railroad and switching tracks constructed, so as to give communication between the wharves and the business streets as well as between the wharves and the transcontinental railroad lines.

On this municipal wharf there will be provided electric cranes and the most modern devices for handling freight to and from the holds of ships.

The city is also constructing a municipal wharf along the upper estuary which will have the same facilities of communication with road lines. For the completion of all of this municipal work on the estuary funds have been provided and contracts let for a large portion of the construction work.

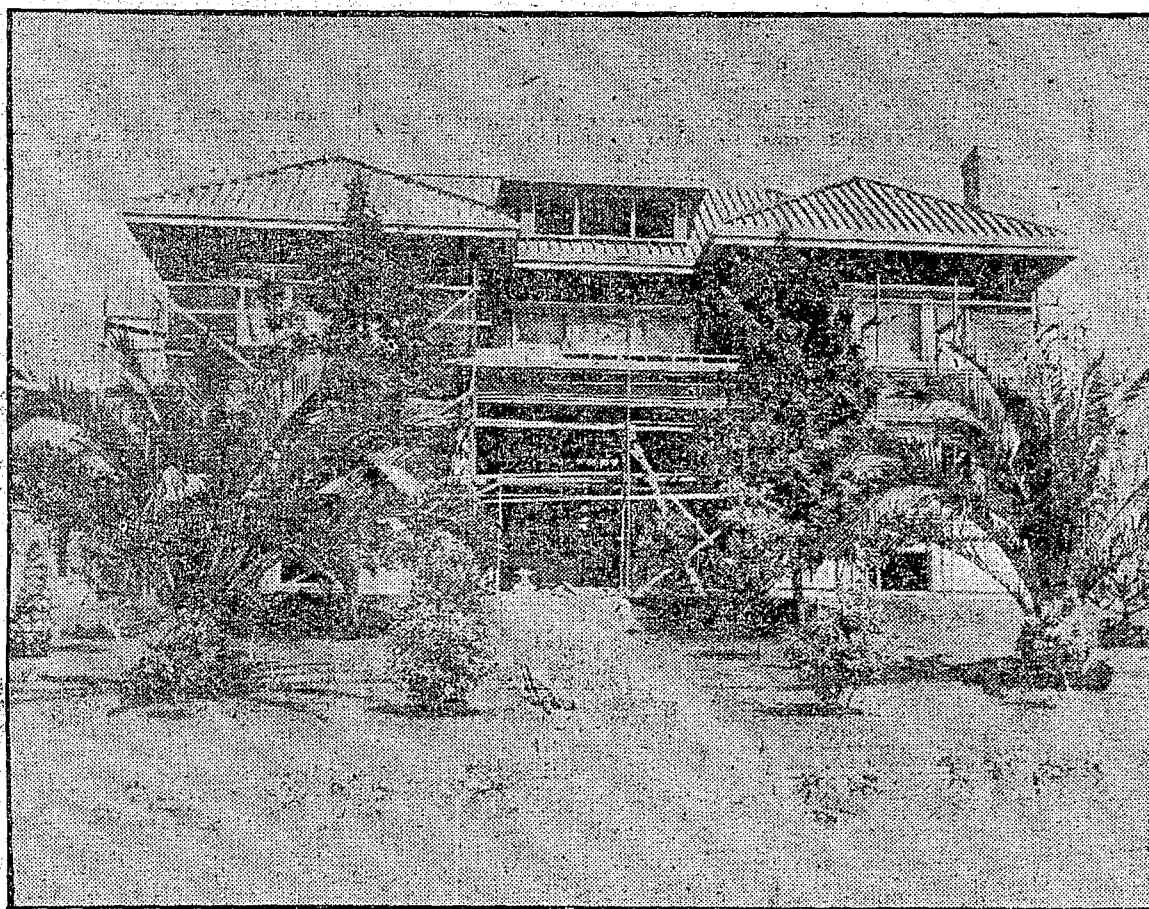

On the Key Route basin, while the work to be done by the city will not make apparent its importance at once, it will ultimately prove to be the largest undertaking in harbor development on the whole Pacific coast of the United States.

The Key Route pier leaving the shore line at Fortieth street runs seaward at an angle so that if continued it would intersect the extended line of the Southern Pacific's long wharf. The Key Route basin is the designation of the harbor lying between these two piers.

By recent order of the War Department, the bulkhead line has been established 2000 feet further seaward than the position designated by former surveys, and the city has been given the right to fill in the added 2000 feet behind the bulkhead constructed on the new line.

The extension of the bulkhead line farther seaward has diminished the length of the new bulkhead line is between the Oakland mole and the Key Route pier, for the reason that these two piers incline toward each other. The length of the new bulkhead line is approximately 5000 feet between the Southern Pacific franchise grant, the Oakland mole and the Key Route pier including the present Key Route pier.

When this new bulkhead is constructed the city will have the right to wharf out in a northerly direction from a newly constructed mole immediately north of the present Oakland mole of the Southern Pacific, and the length of this section of the wharf line will be approximately 2000 feet. There is in hand and available for this purpose sufficient money to construct the new bulkhead and make the dredging and filling necessary.

RESIDENCE OF J. GHIRARDELLI ON HIGHLAND AVENUE.

It is not the plan of the city government to at once completely develop the wharfing facilities along the line of the bulkhead extending from the Oakland mole to the Key Route pier, the 5000-foot section. It is the intention, however, of the municipal authorities to at once make available for commercial use the wharf along the 2000-foot section which runs parallel to the Oakland mole and fronts northward on the Key-Route basin. For this purpose a quay wall will be built, a channel and fairway dredged in front of and solid filling made behind the wall connecting it and making it a part of the fill of the Oakland mole.

The initial steps in this work of improvement have been underway for several months and the result is apparent to every person who passes, at the present time, over the waters of the bay between this city and San Francisco by means of any of the ferryboats traveling between both points.

OAKLAND'S HOLD TIGHT ON ITS HARBOR RIGHTS

Result of Fifty Years' Fight Is the Undisputed Possession of the Waterfront by This City

After a fight for fifty years in the courts for the possession by the municipality of the lands bordering on the bay shore and estuary, Oakland controls, without chance of interference on the part of any organization or person all of her waterfront, and the absolute right to construct and conduct wharves on the same. A view of a part of that waterfront is herewith presented.

The municipal government of Oakland, through its city officers, who are directly responsible to the business men and the business interests of the city, of Oakland, is charged with the duty of caring for this waterfront.

Oakland can absolutely regulate the conduct of business, of shipping over her municipal wharves with an eye to the fostering of the business interests of this city. Oakland is not bound to sacrifice a business opportunity or a chance to capture trade to the necessity of making a fixed yearly revenue from her waterfront. If good business dictates it, the judgment of her citizens will endorse such management of her own wharves tant a temporary loss of the direct revenue of the wharves themselves be sustained in order that the general business prosperity of the city be promoted.

So great has been the advantage of this system that other cities to which the credit of the state to the extent of many million dollars has been loaned are now seeking to have themselves put upon the same basis as Oakland, and use as an argument that the system of municipal ownership and control of the waterfront as possessed by Oakland gives to this city such an advantage in the competition for trade and commerce by sea, and land that the complaining cities, so backed by the millions of borrowed money and borrowed credit, will be driven out of business.

The Oakland harbor is divided by the government engineers into the inner harbor and west waterfront.

The inner harbor of Oakland consists of the estuary of San Antonio, extending from the tidal canal to the Bay of San Francisco. The terminal wharves of the Alameda branch of the Southern Pacific and Western Pacific mark the mouth of the estuary.

The estuary from the mouth of the Brooklyn basin is approximately four miles long, and the channel dredged around the Brooklyn basin adds two miles more to the shore line of this inner harbor.

From the mouth of the estuary to Oakland street, 2000 feet west of Brooklyn basin, the government surveys provide for a depth of 25 feet between bulkhead lines, with a width of channel 500 feet. From Oakland street to the basin the depth of the channel is 17 feet and surveys for 25-foot depth have been approved. The channel around the outer edge of the Brooklyn basin is dredged to 17 feet.

Along this estuary are grouped more than forty of the largest industrial plants of the Pacific Coast region. Among these the shipyards of the Moore & Scott Company, the Southern Pacific and the United Engineering Works are equipped with docks for handling the largest sized vessels.

The investment of the industries in permanent improvements along the estuary is estimated at more than $15,000,000.

The tonnage handled, exclusive of the ferry business, on the estuary amounts to more than a million and a half tons per annum.

Extensive wharves have been constructed along this inner harbor, though no more than a small fraction of the capacity has been utilized. The city of Oakland has let contracts for the construction of 2900 lineal feet of quay wall wharves along the central portion of the north side of the estuary.

The waters of the inner harbor of Oakland are always quiet, even in the time of storms that fret the outer bay.

WILL PLACE STEAMER AS HARBOR PATROL BOAT

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—The army engineers are going to put the steamer General Alexander in commission as a patrol boat to be used in connection with the supervision and control of San Francisco harbor. The Alexander's special duty will be the prevention of the illegal dumping of rubbish into the bay and to stop the erection in the harbor of unauthorized structures. The harbor commissioners have been asked to provide a berth for the steamer near the ferry depot.

Modern Elegance

Progression in every line is the order this decade and surely it is applied in no line more than in home building.

Location, style, finish, surrounding, general outlook are all taken into consideration with the present-day builder looking to satisfy the fastidious home-seeker.

This modern home, situate on one of the most commanding view lots in Oakland, designed and built by Mr. George Downing, combines every feature of the above.

Come out and see it today. As you mount the cement step approach note the facade window effect and the pergola covering the porch. Entering the spacious hall you are at once impressed with the artistic finish and arrangement of the hall, living room and dining room, all with hardwood floors. Glancing through cabinet kitchen and the roomy basement you at once are struck with the convenience and comfort to the home-keeper.

But let's go, upstairs—three commodious bed rooms, closets and bath room—but step out on this covered, protected sleeping porch and enjoy the view.

Sweeping from the beautiful homes of Piedmont hills, the green foliage of Trestle Glen, the south bay, the shipping in the estuary and down over the home section of Adams Point and the business part of Oakland. Surely a panorama to inspire satisfaction.

Take Grand avenue cars to Elwood avenue, walk west to the house No. 423, Elwood ave. You cannot fail to like it when you see it. I will have salesmen there or be there myself to talk terms and price and both are easy.

Yours Truly, B. L. SPENCE.

DON'T SACRIFICE SAFETY FOR SPEED---GET BOTH

Those two things are seldom combined. "Haste makes waste," as the old saying goes. Hurry a man and you worry him. And a hurried and worried man is a poor one to rely on for accurate, complete, trustworthy work. Yet there are times when you need an abstract or title quick. Come to us for it. You'll get it "on time" and in fallibly accurate. The reason is simple—we have a set of complete, systematized, accurate records that make quick and correct work easy for us. Without such records, speed and safety would be out of the question for anybody. For your own satisfaction, come in and learn the details.

My desire is to elevate the standard of warm air furnace installations, and to educate the public to a knowledge of the necessity of pure air in their homes, which can be secured at a reasonable cost only through the medium of a properly installed warm air heating plant. program. It was the sense of the meeting that the association should do everything in its power to help the San Francisco realty men to make this convention a great success.
The Los Angeles Realty Board, composed of over 250 members, will send a large delegation. In order that Oakland shall be properly represented, it is the purpose of the convention committee to co-operate with the banquet committee, consisting of Messrs. E. B. Bull, R. J. Montgomery and Frey Taylor, to which R. S. McHenry was added.
A banquet will be given by the association some time this month, to which the real estate men of Oakland, numbering over 400, will be invited. They will be urged to join the association before the State Realty Federation convention, because with the membership increased a larger representation from Oakland can be demanded, each association in the state being entitled to one delegate for every ten members or fraction of ten members on its list.

REALTY ASSOCIATION MEETING IS LARGE

There was a large attendance at the regular meeting of the Oakland Real Estate Association at its office, 218 Oakland Bank of Savings. The firm of White & Bishop were elected members. The principal matter considered was the convention of the California State Realty Federation to be held at San Francisco, October 10 to 12, 1911. A committee of three, R. S. McHenry as chairman, F. F. Porter and M. T. Minney, was to assist Mr. Baldwin of San Francisco in the preparation of a

SOUTHERN SECTION OF CITY ACTIVE

Presence of Railroads and the Coming of Corporations Has Influence.

There is just as great activity among applicants for property in the southern part of the city as there has been for a number of weeks. This is inspired by the fact that that section is considered one of the most available in the city for the location of manufacturing and dealers in heavy merchandise of all kinds. The territory is bisected by both the Western and Southern Pacific roads and there is no part of it, practically speaking, that is not reachable by spur track from either or both of those corporations.

It is such sections that large establishments are seeking at the present time for the reason that there is a great saving, at the end of the year, for the institution that can receive its goods from the car and then, on order, ship them again on another car to the home of its patron.

There is scarcely a section of the city which is not either now in possession of those facilities or soon to be in possession of them by reason of the enterprise of the railroads in extending spurs, of the kind referred to, to the end of the belt line which the city of Oakland intends to establish connecting ship and rail, practically, with every manufacturing concern in this city.

AIRBRAKE COMPANY COMING.
 This has been shown by the fact that the Westinghouse Airbrake Company, one of the largest manufacturing concerns in the country, has located on the northern limits of the city, for the reason that there it is within the reach of the most important patrons in the shortest possible space of time, by means of the railroad and other facilities of shipping, which can not be found on the other side of the bay.

There are a number of other applications on the part of manufacturing concerns for sites there, but some of the applicants seem to feel that the prices asked for the property which they would like to acquire is entirely too high.

It is, of course, possible that some people may be unreasonable in their demands from incoming concerns for their property. It is not impossible that some people in this city have been unreasonable in this respect and that, as a consequence, some industries have possibly gone elsewhere. Regardless of this fact, however, the owner of a piece of property cannot be criticised because he insists on a price for his holding which he feels it is worth. It is, of course, to be regretted that in such instances industries have been driven away from here because their promoters did not wish to pay the price demanded.

REGRET ACTION.

It is known, however, that many of them have since regretted their action. The reason for this is that they have admitted that even if they had gotten nothing the property they bought it would have been better for them if they had located here. Not a few of them, with this experience, have now commissioned realty dealers in this city to try to find suitable places for them, agreeing that they will pay a liberal price for the same.

Every section in this city, in the estimation of the reliable real estate man, has a standard value. That value is determined by location, convenience and the possibilities it affords for future expansion. The value of a site with those advantages, whether the latter be in a residence or a manufacturing district, is determined by those advantages. The owner is entitled to price on that basis. If, on the contrary, high prohibitive price is placed on property which has one of those advantages, simply because the owner thinks some "big concern" is seeking the same, he is liable to not only lose his property, but also prevent the community from enjoying the benefits of a manufacturing institution which would give employment to hundreds of new citizens.

OFFERS HIGH PRICE.

Mrs. McKee has been offered $20,000—$200 per front foot—for 100x100 feet on the southeast corner of Fourth and Jackson street, by the same party which sought to buy the southwest corner of the same front foot figure, the particulars of which were printed last week. Gallagher declined to sell for less than $50 per front foot and Mrs. McKee, it is said, is holding out for the same figure.

The property is said to be wanted for large manufacturing establishment.

Last week a lot, 75x100, in the middle of the block on the south side of Fourth street, between Alice and Harrison streets, was sold on private terms. Three months ago the owner, Younger, refused to give an option on the property at $280 per front foot. A 25x100-foot lot adjoining the property to the west was sold for $240 per front foot but some which occurred in the matter of payments and the woman owning the lot cancelled the trade and raised the price to $260 per front foot. A large wholesale warehouse is to be built on the Younger lot.

TO GIVE DANCE.
 SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 9.—Gabriel Institute No. 62, Young Ladies' Institute, will hold its anniversary ball in Golden Gate Community hall Thursday evening, October 5.

REAL ESTATE MEN CLEAN UP CITY

Berkeley Dealers Aid in Successful Spotless Town Crusade.

BERKELEY, Sept. 8.—Berkeley real estate dealers have been assisting materially this week in the spotless town campaign, having the vacant lots for which they are agents cleaned up to conform to the improved appearance of other property. But there has been lively trading, despite the clean-up crusade, and good sales are reported.

It has been developed that the Key Route extension which is to tap North Berkeley will be completed easily within the franchise time limit, December 7. Track laying is in progress along Hopkins street to Northbrae. The electric line is almost completed in Northbrae, to reinforce the power for the electric local line. Wiring above the tracks of the company throughout the city is nearing completion.

STAFF BUSY.

Dodge ver Mehr Co., general agents for Kensington Park, North Berkeley's latest addition, report that their staff during the past week in showing properties in this scenic tract.

A large force of men and teams are continuously engaged in the completion of streets in Kensington Park; on Kensington and Ardmore roads curbing, guttering and the macadamizing are all finished and the contractors report that Coventry road, the main artery in this tract, will be turned over within ten days in a similar condition.

The sales during the nine weeks this property has been on the market have far exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the agents, and they claim that the present indications warrant the belief that the major portion of the property will be sold within twelve months.

PAVING COMPLETED.

Newell-Murdoch Company reports that the street paving has been completed in Arlington Villa sites, the $10,000 restriction tract, and it is now possible to ride through the property on Northampton avenue.

The sites have been made very large in order to supply the great demand among the very wealthy class, for an exclusive, limited district, where all the houses will be imposing mansions.

Arlington road, already becoming a famous boulevard, adjoining the Villa Sites on the west. Along this avenue the North Grove street car line is being extended. On the north side lies the magnificent twenty-acre garden of E. Spring, with its swimming pool, miniature catanara, its fourteen acres of lawn and thousands of flowering plants and shrubs. J. B. Hayre, the well-known exporter of San Francisco, has recently acquired a half acre in this delightful spot. Dr. Douglas Montgomery has plans nearly completed for a palatial residence between Essex Place and Somerset Place, on Northampton avenue, and work will probably begin in a short time.

Building permits have been issued as follows:

One and one-half story, 8-room residence, Arlington avenue and Indian Rock path, for Mrs. Anna Thomas; cost, $4000.

One-story, 2-room addition, Stannage and Gilmart streets, for L. W. Potts; cost, $4000.

MRS. CAROLINE KOHL

OWNER OF FIVE THEATERS

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—By the purchase of five Chicago theaters Mrs. Caroline Kohl, widow of Charles E. Kohl, became the largest holder of theatrical property in Chicago. The theaters included in the transaction are the Majestic, Olympia, the Chicago Opera House, the Academy of Music and the Bijou.

The deal makes Mrs. Kohl the most important woman theatrical manager in the country and marks the passing of the firm of Kohl & Castle, which for many years controlled amusement places and theaters in Chicago.

VETERAN DRIVER WINS AND FALLS DEAD IN SULKY

TERRYVILLE, Conn., Sept. 9.—As Charles Wheeler, a veteran driver on race tracks in this state, crossed the finish line, a victor, with Title, a local trotter, he fell from his sulk, dead.

The race was held on Main street here and was a very exciting one. Wheeler was seen to sway as he won, and then he pitched out between the wheels. The excitement of the finish affected his heart. Wheeler was 56 and leaves a widow and four children.

REAL ESTATE MEN PLAN CONVENTION

Date of California Federation Meeting Is Set Forward.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—The California State Realty Federation convention which was to convene in this city October 10, 11 and 12, has been set forward one day, and will be called to order on October 11, and ended October 13. This action was necessary because of the fact that October 10 is the general election day for the Amendments to the State Constitution. This change will enable the real estate men of the State to vote and make the trip up to this city in time for the convention opening.

Arrangements for the program of the convention sessions are in the hands of J. R. Howell, who is in consultation with several other local realty men, and with the president of the federation, J. M. Fisher of San Jose. Representatives of all the sections of the state and of all the multifarious sides of the real estate business will be given a chance place on the program and it will be an interesting and instructive session.

BANQUET PLANNED.

The banquet arrangements are in charge of Samuel G. Buckles, who has officiated in this capacity on several previous occasions, and will arrange for a most complete affair. The banquet will be in one of the city's large hotels, and will be held October 12. It will be formal, with a lively informal entertainment, and no set speeches. Accredited delegates of the Federation with the officers and retiring officers and directors will be the guests of the San Francisco Real Estate Board at this banquet. Other visiting real estate men who wish to attend may do so by obtaining tickets from the committee.

Financial matters are in charge of John McGraw, who will attend to the matter of raising the necessary funds for the entertainment of the delegates.

James G. Stafford, field and recording secretary of the California State Realty Federation, who has been in San Francisco for two weeks working up the details of the convention, has gone to Sacramento, and points in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys, where he will meet all the real estate boards and individual members, and work up interest in the coming convention.

NEW BUILDINGS FOR ALAMEDA

Factory Sites On Marsh Land Are in Demand by Eastern Firms.

ALAMEDA, Sept. 9.—The following building permits were issued by Building Inspector John Davies today:

Owner, F. L. Nash; builder, W. G. LeBoyd; repairs to 2911 Encinal avenue; cost $120.

Owner, Johanna Ahlstedt; builder, G. Ahlstedt; 1½-story 5-room dwelling at 542 Central avenue; cost, $1000.

Owner, Johanna Ahlstedt; builder, G. Ahlstedt; alterations to 543 Central avenue; cost, $250.

Deane and Randlett are erecting several large dwellings in the east end. Deane said today, "The realty market has never been in better condition. Alameda is looking up."

TO ERECT HOTEL.

Plans are being drawn for a hotel to be erected soon at the southeast corner of High street and Encinal avenue. The structure will combine hotel and apartment house features. The location is admirable for a hostelry. Apartment houses in the city have rented rapidly and there are still calls for three-room apartments.

Building Inspector John Davies stated today that O. Johnson, builder and contractor, would invest $25,000 in a new apartment house to be built in Santa Clara avenue near Benton street.

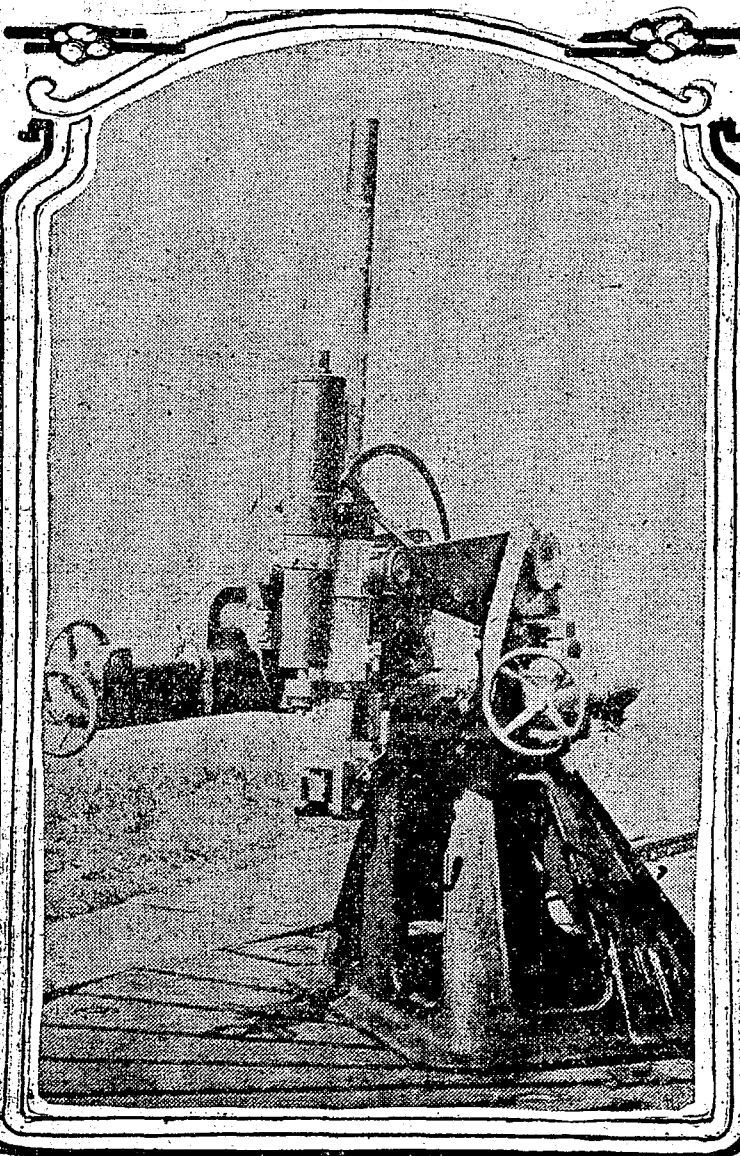

Lewis and Shaw have sold several large pieces of realty in the east end. Robert Mott of the Alameda Land Company and William Hammond Jr. of the firm of Hammond & Hammond have several large transfers of Newark realty which will be consummated soon.

BUSINESS BRISK.

Mott reports a brisk business. "We are selling considerable property on the marsh," said Mott today. "Factories are populating the district, which is one of the finest sites for big plants in the world. The marsh district is bringing big prices from eastern concerns. We have inquiries daily for sites and questions regarding the advisability of settling there. The Chamber of Commerce has taken up the matter and is sending letters to inquirers telling them of the advantages of the marsh as a situation for factories."

The houses under course of construction in Mastick Park tract in the west end are about completed. Many of the dwellings have already been sold. The dwellings are modern and commodious.

Aerial Gun to Shoot Projectile Seven Miles Into the Air

The one-pound gun designed by Admiral Twining which recently sent a shell 18,000 feet into the air in search of an imaginary aeroplane.

All fear from aeroplane attacks in time of war will soon be effectually laid at rest, for a gun that will send a shell seven miles into the air is soon to be built.

Recently a one-pound gun designed by Admiral Twining, sent a shell 18,000 feet into the air in search of an imaginary aeroplane. No aeroplane has ever flown as high as 18,000 feet, so the range of this gun is effective. The shot was made when the gun was elevated to an angle of 85 degrees and it is calculated that this is the greatest angle at which it can be fired with safety.

The attending officers will now develop the sighting apparatus to greater perfection and build a three-inch gun on the same model. It is believed that the larger gun will send a shell seven miles into the air and will effectually stop any attacking aeroplanes.

SAYS WIFE'S LOVE IS WORTH $5000

Declares Woman and Affinity Were Caught Embracing Each Other.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9.—Action to recover $5000 for the alienation of his wife's affections has been brought by Michael Spector against Joseph Latman. Spector avers that his wife and Latman were caught embracing each other in an Atlantic City hotel, and he also found them together in Latman's home.

Judge Staake allowed a capias for the arrest of Latman, whose bail was fixed at $500.

Stuart Maxwell, who said he was employed in the United States postal service for twenty years, was committed to jail by Judge Ferguson in desertion court, until he pays his arrears on an order for his wife's support. This order was made in December, 1908, and, according to the testimony, Maxwell owed his wife $2500.

Maxwell tried to evade responsibility for payment by declaring that the present Mrs. Maxwell is not his legal wife. He contended that a divorce from a former wife, procured in Colorado, had been illegally granted. Solicitor O'Connor said this was merely an excuse, and that the statement had no foundation in fact.

Judge Ferguson doesn't think that a wife should leave her husband because he writes to a former sweetheart. He refused to make an order for support of Mrs. Harry Lessig yesterday, when she blamed her husband's correspondence for their marital troubles.

BIG LINER PICKS UP MAN AT SEA

Cook Goes Overboard and Plan of Rescue Relieves Dull Voyage.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Passengers on the Hamburg-American steamship, President Grant, which arrived from Hamburg, Boulogne and Southampton, witnessed an exciting rescue at sea on Tuesday, when the ship was two days out from Southampton. The passengers were at luncheon when the cry went up that a man had fallen overboard, and everybody trooped out on deck.

The fourth cook was swimming lustily in the wake of the ship. Life buoys were being thrown to him, and boats were being lowered. Some said the cook had jumped into the sea with the intention of committing suicide, but if that was so he had changed his mind very quickly. Others declared that he had fallen in while throwing refuse overboard.

The steamship circled around to the spot where the man's head was bobbing up and down in the water. In a few minutes a boat reached him and pulled him safely aboard. There was great enthusiasm when he was hoisted up to the ship.

The President Grant brought over 600 cabin and 810 steerage passengers. She had a lot of animals in the water, including a hippopotamus, a giraffe and several antelopes and wild dogs. She also carried a large number of canary birds.

Among The Brokers

LAND COMPANY BREAKS RECORDS

"Back to the farm" and "On to California" are the slogans of thousands of people throughout the United States today. No better proof of this fact is needed than the demand for ten-acre tracts in the Central California Tractor Colonies. During the month of August over $33,000 worth of small farms have been purchased in this fertile section between Stockton and the State capital at Sacramento.

The great exodus to California has just begun. This fall and winter the great migration will set in.

There is a greater demand every day for good farm land close to transportation. It won't last long at present prices.

Conservative business men prophesy that our population will double by "fair time." If it does, what effect will this increase have on land values?

There is no reason why we who live here now should let this opportunity go by. There is no better investment today than good California farm land, because it is jumping in demand.

A man or woman who purchases a small piece of land in Central California Tractor Colonies right now will profit by doing so. Mr. Gunn, of Ball & Gunn, 605 Union Savings Bank building, informs us that there is a great demand for this land among the moneyed classes as well as those whose means are limited.

As to the monthly installment payments, and the many of them are buying more than they intend to keep, but expect to sell off about half of it in a year or so at a big profit.

A business block on the corner of Seminary avenue and East Fourteenth street sold for John T. Shoo and wife to Mrs. Augusta C. Dier, through the office of George W. Austin.

Fourth Avenue Court, the new tract recently placed on the market by the Wickham Havens Company, is meeting with great favor among prospective home owners in the Fourth Avenue district. This particular location seems to appeal particularly to the artistically inclined, because of its natural charm of location near Trestle Glen, and because of the manifold opportunities of beautifying the grounds with landscape effects.

Among the recent purchasers in Fourth Avenue Court is Mr. E. S. Cheney, well-known photographer. Mr. Cheney has purchased 80 feet adjoining Sather Park, and will erect an artistic bungalow at once, at the same time adding to the attractiveness of his property by a rustic bridge and sunken gardens.
